Effects on Consumers Cited -Plan to Assist Industry and Labor Is Backed

By EDWIN L. DALE Jr. WASHINGTON, April 16resident Ford decided today against imposing higher tariffs or other import restraints oo shoes made abroad.

Although the six-member International Trade Commission had found unanimously that the domestic shoe industry was being injured by import competitioo, today's announcement said the President's decision was "based upon his evaluation of the national interest," including the likelihood of higher prices for consumers if import restraints were imposed. About 40 percent of all non-

With politi-Giacinta Bucci, who works oart-time as a maid, bas long cians talking and news me-dia often reporting in a jargoo that many people simply do not understand, the feel-ing of uneasiness has become almost a resignation to whatever may bappen next.

It is taken for granted that the Italian Communist Party, which has been advancing steadily io elections for the last several years, will have an important part in Italian political life in the future. But no ooe knows in just what capacity, and the party itself has not made it clear exactly what role it hopes to fill, which adds to the atmos-phere of disorientation. Many Italians believe that the present political and economie balancing act cannot last indefinitely.

"Italy has been coasting along for years, maneuvering and straddling issues," a high-level Vatican prejate commented a few days ago. "Something has to be decided soon. The crunch will come after Easter."

ZACHYS IS AN OLD FASHIONED STORE. Despite our bigness, despite our growth, despite the tumult that seems to surround the store, we are very concerned about running Zachys lika an old fashioned store. We say hello, we say thank you, we smile, we carry your packages out, we cash your checks without fingerprint-ing you, we kid around, and we are glad to see you shopping in our store. There is oothing that infuriates me more than indifferent sales help or sales help that acts as if they are doing you a favor by taking care of you.

The people who make up the Zachys staff, GAR-NEY, KEN, BURT, JIMMY, DANNY G. DAN-IEL K., LARRY, WARREN' LEON, PETER, and DON might not win any awards for sarforial splendor, but as a group represent as knowledgeable and polite a staff as you will ever see in a retail store.

INVENTORY WINE SALE

A CONTINUING SAGA. Zachys has taken an inventory. Really. It took four men three days to do it, and when the men came up from the cellars, dusty, unshaveo, shading their eyes from the light, they also came up with a cumber of surprises. Our inventory eystem is not exactly computerized and how a wine store could have 71 cases of 1972 Chateau Moutoo Rothschild and have it listed in their inventory as 17 cases is another story. THIS SALE—71 cases of 1972 Chateau Mouton Rothschild at the incredible price of $99.00 the case. (Wheo was to last time you saw Mouton Rothschild for under $100.00 the case?) Not all the surprises were pleasant. Corton Charlemegne is one of the great white Burgindles. At its best it is in the class of Montrachet. It permally sells for twelve dollars the bottle and up. It is a treasure—but sixty-six cases! Sboot the buyer or sell the wine—THIS SALE—1972 Corton Charlemagne $5.99 the bottle—71.88 the case. (A fantastic value—the wine sells in restaurants et four times that amount.)

On the other hand, one freelance journalist who has followed the efforts of several other local publications to get started and survive here, said be had been put off by the magazine's lead article—one that some other readers have praised—about the postwar generation of native-born Californians in a state of migrants.

But the 47-year-old journalist decied such criticism.

The West has not been particularly hospitable to eastern publishers. In 1964. The New York Times ceased publication of the Western Edition after 16 months be-'cause of heavy'losses. ---Partly to feel the pulse of the rapidly developing West, new owners of Saturday Review magazine relocated to San Francisco several years ago-and then abandoned the city after running up heavy losses and moved to New York, Psychology Today, a magazine started in the West, moved to New York from San Diego last year because it wanted the New York City publishing climate.

In Los Angeles, during the last seven or eight years, at least three local publications designed, like New West, to cover the region have been started and abannot find enough readers and advertisers. In San Francisco. Francis Ford Coppola, the film director, briefly suspended publications of City magazine after sustaining losses of more than $1 mil-

There have been exceptions. Sunset magazine has run up a circulation of 1.3 million monthly catering to Westerners' special interest in gardening, foods, travel and homes. And Los Angeles, the monthly that Mr. Felker once tried to buy, says it is profitable. With a circulation of 118,000, it caters mostly to upper-middle income readers. but offers many of the same 115,000, it caters mostly to New West, but with con-siderably less graphic appeal and obvious zest.

In addition to this competi-tion and that of The Los Angeles Times, Mr. Felker faces a lawsuit with another local magazine that also claims legal ownership of the New West title.

"These thoughts were grompted by the production of Edith Wharton's "House of Mirth," which has just opened bere at the Long Wharf Theater. The novel was written in 1905, and just a year later, Clyde Fitch, the of the most prominent American playwrights of his day, produced a stage adaptation with Wharton's active bollaboration. Wharton propliaboration. Wharton pro-ided the dialogue (often irectly from the novel), and witch set it in a dramatic appearstructure. Unfortunately, it seems—I have not actually read that adaptation, in I write from hearsay— Fitch blunted the author's purpose, undercutting the novel's theme of a free, Beantiful, poor and lonely forman lost on the seas of American high society.

John Tillinger, the drama-turge of the Long Wharf Theater, and Arvin Brown, Theater, and Arvin Brown, the artistic director, bad a long look at the Fitch adaptation and—understandably living the novel—tried to wind ways around its problems. Eventually, Mr. Tillinger and the artistic using some of the chaptation; using some of the litch material, returning to the original novel, and interputting all the various ele-elents. The result is impressive but a mildly happy failure. It lacks the texture and density of Wharton. Yet what could have been done es been done well. It is simfly that at the final count novels into plays will not go. The story is tremendous. Lily Bart is a poor little rich girl who is really poor. Her parents left her with nothing. at a taste for the expensive and the sure knowledge hat she had to net a rich hispand: Unfortunately, Lily her are boring, appalling and rapacious. Her frankness of behavior compromises her chances with the one man a semi-poor lawyer—who at-tracts her (remember this was 1905, when even to visit a man's apartment was equated with a fate worse than death) and in the end she is left with nothing but squalor and, eventually, suicide. It is a melodramatic tale but curiously truthful—its insights ring hollowly in the halls of despair.

The play has been vary de-cently and clearly staged by Waris Hussein, and the setwans russem, and the ser-tings by Marjorie Kellogg and the costumes (exquisite-ly in period) by Bill Walker add to the play's sense of style. And style it truly has —it is the Wharton style, the untene civilized terrify. the urbane, civilized, terrifying uptightness with its undertow of unreined passion. It is typified here by costumes that are both prim and sexy, by a staging that is contained in its emotion but appears to have subtitles of desperation.

One glory—probably the particular glory—of the evening is Fran Brill's touching and vibrant performance of Lily. This is Lily come to life—funny, sweet, innocent and borrifyingly vulnerable. A butterfly in a cage of moths.

Miss Brill is zrilliant, but the entire cast—one of those Long Wharf dependables—is happily quick to the very surface of the play. The dialogue rings as if it had just been minteed. George Hearn's stolidly stodgy but honest Lawrence Selden—the one man Lily can relate to—is matched by any number of other swiftly, accurately drawn portraits of a luckily lost America, Lost? It is a lost America, Lost? It is a decadent story with chailling undertones, of contempora-

There is something to be said for the notion of hiding away the art, making it accessible only to those who make the symbolic ascent (obviously, an elevator is available for the fatigued) although this idea of art as sacred and slightly removed from daily comings and goings is, to say the least, at odds with the prevailing spirit of our times. apparent.
Judith Somogi, conducting the work for the first time, brought out as much interest as there is in the Moore score, but often let the mane music overpower the singers.
The more serious problem,
however, was that an opera as intrinsically weak as "Baby Doe" needs at least three and maybe four first-rank dramatic artists to keep it alive as theater. Musically, there is not much to listen to, but in the past a Beverly Sills or a Walter Cassel could make you ignore that.

The performance next Wednesday will be televised at 8 P.M. on WNET/Channel 13 and simultaneously broad-cast in stereo on WOXR-EM, as part of the "Live from Lincoln Center" Series. The telecast will be repeated on Sunday, April 25, at 3:30 P.M.

'Countdown at Kusini' About Political Plot

"Countdown at Kusini" is the sort of movie that illustrates what happens when achievement falls short of

Conceived as a conventional melodramatic vehicle for the transmission of excitement and as a medium for explanation of the black revolution in Africa to an alien audience, this movie—filmed in and around Lagos, Nigeria—emerges as Subpar adventure and less than lucid idealogy.

For the most part, it concerns itself with a plot by multinational corporations the postcolonial villains—to remove a black revolutionary leader through the efforts of a French mercenary and his black and white collaborators. A woman dedicated to the revolution and an American jazz musician, drawn more to the woman than to politics, provide the romantic oterest and the effort to

with ismentable lines that require the best efforts of Ossie Davis, Ruby Dee and Greg Morris in the lead roles to overcome and failing that, invite the use of nearly constant music to drown out the dialogue.

Compounding the troubles are the occasional mismatched shots and, in effect, an epilogue that vitiates its educational strivings.

Nestled in a quiet corner of Harlem's Sugar Hill, the Patterson School at 144th Street and Convent Avenue is an after-school achool that is teaching their heritage tn black youngsters, from kin-dergarten through 12th

In the process, it also seeks to strengthen their skills in such areas as mathematics language arts and reading.

For several years, John and Jamelle Patterson, parents of two black schoolage children and founders of the school, had not only heard of difficulties in schooling from their predom-inantly middle-class black frieods, but had lived them,

The Pattersons, who had tried both private and public schools for their children, had both had been extremely active in educational circles in the city.

- A Startling Discovery

It was while struggling with the problem of what to do in their own bome, that they decided that some-thing should be done for black youngsters in general, As a result of informal discussions with teachers and others in both public and private schools, Mrs. Patterson came across what she con'sidered a startling discovery.

"By fourth grade," she re-called the other day, "black youngsters start falling behind and staying behind. And even in private schools, the scores of black youngsters were collectively lower than those of whites."

This ultimately led her to he conclusion last May that there was a correlatioo between a student's ability to achieve and a positive selfconcept.

"That's when we decided to start our own school."
In the next 10 months, there was a flurry of late-night meetings and early-morning reading sessions, curriculum planning, hiring teachers and right facility. Through it all, tha Pattersons' experience in and con-tacts with the educational community facilitated their

Mrs. Patterson, the 29-year-old president and director of the 60-pupil institution, "it's the only school of its kind. There are lots of alternative schools, as well as Hebrew. Chinese and Japanese schools that have been in existence for 50 years or more. But in the black community, there's oothing like

Dr. James P. Comer, professor of psychiatry and associate dean of the Yale Medical School, and also a member of the advisory board agreed that the school was unusual.

"One of our problems has been that we have bad no mechanism, except the black church-when we were immersed in the church-for transmitting our struggle or our tradition of excellence and hard work from genera-tion to generation," be said.

'Or Not at All'

"And each geoeration wakes up saying, "Why are we in this condition?" And the mainstream culture Isn't going to tell you because they're struggling with it. They don't know how to integrate it into theirs. So they've treated it marginally or negatively or not at all." The school's emphasis is on African beritage and tradition, and a major aspect is the role of the extended fam-ily. The school has taken the role of a surrogate family in many instances, providing the youngsters with back-ground on their heritaga that they are not receiving else-where, either in their homes the curriculum is easy, once there is the commitment to do it, said Mrs. Patterson, whose educational experiences range from high school in Orangeburg, S. C., to Wesleyan, where she received ber Master of Arts in teaching. (She did further postgraduate work at Harvard and the University of Strasbourg.

in France.)

A major poiot of departure in the school's historical emphasis, Mrs. Patterson said, is that black bistory is taught from the perspective that the African continent was one of the first to emerge as land, and that human life, and the first civilization, begao there. "It's not about being militant or separatist," Mrs. Pat-tersoo said in explaining the school's motivation. "It's about why we have not been able to get along in this pluralistic snciety. Only the dominant group's culture has been emphasized. The more you know about your culture and heritage, the more productive you are and the more confidence you have in deal-

"Normally, our kids are taught that their heritage is in slavery, io chains," she went on, "instead of in the context of the cootinuum of history in which they are direct descendants of thousands of years of kings and

ing with others.

"Every group has been enslaved, but they never allude to that part of their history. The Europeans, instead, dressed it up and called it serfdom and kept on going."

Mrs. Patterson said that the new school, which was established with the help of grants from the New York Urhan Coalition, Bankers Trust and Chemical Bank, expected to be self-support-low-income students.

Situated on the fifth floor of an educational huilding recently purchased by the Convent Avenue Baptist church, the school can accommodate about 200 students.

Bryan Derek Haley, a 12year-old junior-high-school student, said be was attending the Pattersoo School because he likes math a lot and because "the teachers are not always screaming and cussing at you.

These days, the basket-of-flowers cake would be priced at $75 and the baby's cake at $100, because late last year, realizing that ber dough could belp put her children through college, Mrs. Littman turned pro under the name Rosemary's Cakes. Although she has fun at her work, Mrs. Littman speaks sadly of its great drawback—each creation is ephemeral, preserved only in photographs.

Meanwhile, the aviation agency is expected soon to deal with the controversy by promulgatiog oew airplanenoise standards or by offering legislation that would prevent localities from imposing their own airport-noise limita tions. At the same time, the rules or legislation would free

Because the airport is so close to the center of San Diego, the roar and whine of the jets vibrate over a large part of the city every few minutes.

The curfew was in line with other recent decisions limiting San Diego's growth to prevent what officials here have called the 'los angeliza-

To comply, both airlines have since sought to use the acceptable quieter jets tor late night landings. On two occasions, however, an. One of the major violations occurred a few days ago, Mr. McDonaid said, when a Trans World Airlines charter plane landed at 12:30 A.M., discharged its passengers and took off again at 1 A.M. The authorities complained the airline but planned no further action. Generally, he said, cooperation by the airlines has been good. Theoretically, the city might be able to revoke the landing

Narrow Escape

By FRED TUPPER

LOS ANGELES, April 16-The secret of being the world's No. 1 player is to be angry on the court and hate your opponent, said Chris Evert last night after having won a hard-fought match against Sue Barker that stretched over three sets and an hour and a half in the Virginia Slims championships.

The crowd of 5,200 rose to its feet in tribute to the Briton's second superb performance of the day in the roundrobin phase of the $150,000 tournament at the Sports Arena. Earlier, just before 2 A.M., she had upset fourth-seeded Virginia Wade, her countrywoman, for the first time, 7-5, 7-6, winning the tiebreaker on her fifth match

Miss Evert has been uphappy with bar performances lately. "I'm too relaxed out there, not 100 percent competitive," she said. "To win, I have to get psyched up and want to beat them."

She looked at little, fresh-faced Miss Barker, seemingly much younger than the 20 years she will be on Monday. "Sue is oot the type you want to hate," she commented.

Miss Barker quickly gave her reason to hate. She may have the fastest forehand in women's tennis. And over the winter she hed learned from her coach in Devon, Arthur Roberts how to bang her backhand with the best of Early in the slugfest she hit harder and flatter than Miss Evert. The games came

Miss Evert changed her pattern. She tossed up a few lobs and pulled the Briton in short. She slowed the pace and used ber drop shots. She had the second set at 6-2 and was at 5-2 in the third before Miss Barker, who said she had been so excited at beating Miss Wade "that I couldn't sleep for hours," got her second wind. The Briton went to 3-5 at love, hit three outright win-ners and a delicate drop shot for 4-5 and was poised on her own service to tie it up.

She got to 30-0, but it was all too much. Miss Evert forced her into errors and finally a backhand slid into the net for the match.

Top-seeded Evonne Goolagong, who woo from Miss Evert in Philadelphia a fortnight ago, will heat her again in the opinion of Francoise Durr. Miss Durr lost hy 6-2. 6-2 to the Australiao. "I would think Evonne

Broken Clock Costs Nuggets $2,50

DENVER, April 16-(AF)-The Denver Nuggets were fined $2,500 today in the aftermath of last night's wild American Basketball Association playoff game between Denver and Kentucky that was played without a scoreboard clock. Commissioner Dave De-Busschere also ordered the Sussciere also ordered the Nuggets to have a backup timing and scoring system available at McNichols Arena for the secood game of the four-of-seven semifinal series tomorrow night.

An inoperative scoreboard, which "blew up" while it was being tested 2½ hours before the opening tipoff, was the source of the dispute. The situation sent Hu-bie Brown, the Kentucky coach, into a rage when a last-second 3-point field goal by Louis Dampier was disallowed, giving Denver e 110-107 victory. ·Coloneis' officials initially said they would file a formal protest with the league. But an A.B.A. spokesman said this afternoon that no protest had been received, noting that the team has 48 hours from the end of the game in which to lodge one.

A spokesman for the city of Denver, which owns the arena, said today that parts were being shipped in to repair the main scoreboard, and a backup system also was being obtained. He said he was confident at least one of the scoreboards would be in operation tomorrow night. He emphasized that the league would not let the game be played without a scoreboard

Referees Norm Drucker and John Vanak learned of the malfunction an hour before game time last night, but decided that the game would be played anyway, and both teams concurred. Until the closing seconds of the contest, it appeared the mechanical problem wouldn't be a factor in the contest.

Kentucky, trailing by 13 points in the third quarter, drew within 1 point midway through the final period, be-fore Denver pulled away again. Two quick baskets by Byron Beck gave Denver a 109-100 lead with 1 minute 48 seconds left. The Colonels then recled off 7 straight points, making the score 109-

The Saab Philosophy, No. I in a Series:

"WE BELIEVE A CAR SHOULD HELP CORRECT THE DRIVER'S MISTAKES. NOT VICE VERSA".

When you're heading down an open road, we think that's where you should go. That's why we build every Saab with front-wheel drive.

Front-wheel drive improves directional stability under almost any condition, because the wheels that drive the car are the wheels that steer the car.

Front-wheel drive also helps you out in the corners. Even when you enter a fast turn, there is less of a tendency to skid than in rear wheel drive cars, because the front wheels pull you through the turn and the rear wheels tend to fol-

Of course, Saab has many other features that can help a driver including rack-and-pinion steering, power-assisted disc brakes on all four wheels, and a fuelinjected 2-liter engine.

To really appreciate a Saab, however, you should drive one. Once you've done that, you'll see that a little philosophy can help you go a long way.

IT'S WHAT A CAR SHOULD BE. 🐣

3 Flyers Accused of Assault in Toronto

The Ontario Attorney Ganeral, Roy McMurtry, issued arrest warrants today against three Philadelphia Flyers — Don Saleski, Joe Watson and Mel Bridgman—in connection with on-ice incidents last night during a National Hockey League playoff game between the Flyers and the Toronto Maple Leafs.

The three players were charged with offenses involving assault and possession of an offensive weapon-a hockey stick — during the Stanley Cup quarterfinal game won by the Maple Leafs, 54.

One incident in a game marred by 163 minutes in penalties involved a police-man allegedly being hit behind a penalty box at the Maple Leaf Gardens.

McMurtry, who earlier in the year brought assault charges against Dan Majoney, a Detroit Red Wing forward, in connection with an-other fight at Maple Leaf Gardens, said the charges carry a maximum penalty for both offenses of five years imprisonment.

The three Philadelphia players presented themselves at a downtown Toronto police station tonight. They were accompanied by a city lawyer, Austin Cooper, and Albert Wiseman, assistant security director for the N.H.L.

man said the three would be taken to police headquarters for fingerprinting and photo-graphs after making statements at the downtown station house.

The Attorney General said he expected the three to be released on their own recognizance after the processing of the charges, pending a further appearance in court tomorrow morning.

McMurtry said the charges were leveled against the three men after officials studied films of the game and conferred with the police and Crown Robert McGee.

McMurtry said the warrants issued against the three spelled out the following charges: assaulting a police officer, two charges of common assault and one dangerous weapons charge (a bockey

But Rival Loop Is Defying Him on Toronto Bid

By STEVE CADY

Baseball's "Washington dilemma" reached the showdown stage yesterday when Commissioner Bowie Kuhn urged the National League to go ahead with plans for its" proposed expansion to both Wasbington and Toronto.

Kuhn gave the league two weeks to put the plans into effect. The action brought an angry response from the American League, which challenged the commissioner's authority to interfere with its announced expansion to Toronto.

Lee MacPhail, president of the American League, said club owners had voted un-animously to defy Kuhn and fulfill their "legal and moral responsibilities" to the Cana-

The National League also has voted to expand, to Toronto and Washington, but approval requires a unanimous vote. Cincinnati and Philadelphia have opposed the action, and the 10-2 vote has stalled the plan.

On April 1, Kuhn ruled that the American League could go to Toronto only if it made provisions for suitable baseball activity in the city of Washington. The league offered to schedule a "significant" number of games in Washington involv-ing the nearby Baltimore Or-loles and other teams, but a the offer apparently did not is we're almost like brothers: We like each other. Wa think of each other instead of just me." When the playoffs were about to begin, Billy Smith knew that Chico Resch would open as the goaltender. He also knew that in the playoffs a bot goaltender keeps playing, as Resch did last year. Billy Smith was prepared not to play much in the playoffs this year, but Al Arbour wisely sought Billy Smith's advice.

"I told AI," says Smith, "that to get ready for the playoffs, Chico had to play at least the last two games of the selson.

Even though the Islanders won the opening series, Resch was not as sharp as usual. When he started shakily against the Sabres, be soon was on the bench. Another goaltender might have ignored Resch's problems, but Billy Smith didn't.

finger on it, but you're not yourself." During the noontime skate Thursday before the Islanders won, 5-3, Smith put his finger on it. "Yon're jumping around like you usually do," he told Resch. "You weren't jumping before." At other times Resch has reminded Smith, "You're flopping too much stay on your feet." But the relationship didn't flourish until this season. Even in the playoffs a year ago, Resch was a rookie who had abruptly upstaged Smith, who then was completing his third season with the Islanders, the first two shared with Gerty Desjardins, now tha Sabres' goaltender.

"I remember Desjardins coce saying that he was No. 1, Smith says. "I didn't appreciate that." Despite his success, Resch never put down Smith; instead they became close and gennine friends.

"We were feeling each other out last year, we were a little standoffish," Resch says. "I think both of us had the feeling then that when the other was playing, we hoped the team would win, 7-6-that way the team won, but the other guy couldn't have played too well. And when I got hot in the playoffs, it was a big test for me because Billy handled it super. But this year, especially in the playoffs, it's all team. And on the road, we're always together. If our friendship wasn't sincere, we wouldn't want to be with each other. We have dinner together, go to shows together. That's important. If the other players see you together, it doesn't split the team, I don't think two guys can get along better than we do."

Especially two guys who are goaltenders on the same team. Billy Smith makes that clear. "And if Chico ever gets traded someday," Billy Smith says, "I want to go with him."

3 Flyers Accused of Assault

ry Cowboy's. That action, announced by Ben Hatskin, the executive director of the league, came after the Nordiques issued second match Tuesday night. a three-pronged ultimatum to the league threatening to drop out of the playoffs and withhold the gate receipts of the first two in Quebec if the demands were not met. The Nordiques wanted Rick

Jodzio a Calgary forward, suspended for life for his attack on Marc Tardif, a Quebec forward who is the league's leading scorer. Tar-dif was taken to a hospital

Each of the Na-Arbour elaborated. tional Hockey League teams believes it will win tomoryear in the games w carch up they were row night's fourth game of checking games. Now. their four-of-seven game got the power in dois way-wide open or quarterfinal series in which

Buffalo leads 2 games to 1. Refusing to be disheart-ened by a 5-3 loss last night, their first in Nassau Coliseum, the Sabres looked for . the good points. "We came" from behind twice," said Floyd Smith, the Buffalo coach, "The Islanders really came out flying in the first, period. It was the best I've ever seen them play. But then in the second period we found ourselves a bit.

"We didn't think it was going to be easy. Nothing worthwhile ever is."

er's enthusiasm was Rick Martin. Buffalo's volatile left wing whose opposite number last night was Billy Harris. The strapping Island-er right wing produced his best work of the playoffs with nine shots on goal— two hitting the mark—and hard checking to stop the Sabres' French Connection

Martin was excused from today's practice. "He's got bumps and bruises all over." Smith said. Jim Schoenfeld. Buffalo's captain and best defenseman, also missed practice because of a sore ankle bruised in Buffalo's last regular-season game. Schoenfeld continues to perform well in games, despite his injury.

Westfall Doubtful

Ed Westfall, the Islanders' captain, spent this morning on a stationary bicycle while his teammates skated. "Eddie's still a big question mark," said Al Arbour, the Islanders' coach. Westfall broke the first metatarsal of his right foot in the series second game and missed last night's contest.

"h's a question of when it gets to the point where he can live with it," said Bill Torrey, the Islanders' general manager, "If it had been all or nothing Thursday night he probably would have played," Bill MacMillan, who spent this season as a utility man and third-line left wing, substituted for West-fall on the right side and produced the game's tie-breaking goal. At this point in the playoffs last season the Islanders were trailing Pittsburgh, 3-0 in their quarterfinal meeting, facing the prospectof elimination four times before winning the series, 4-3, Torrey cringed as he remembered.

The name of Ammi Phillins (1788-1865) is oowadays

so well known to the large and growing public interes

in 19th-century American foll art that it still comes as something of a shock to reals and no folk paintings of the period are more eagerly col-lected than his.

The special importance of the Ammi Phillips exhibition that has now come to the Washburn Gallery, 820. Madison Avenue at 68th Street, is that it consists of 13 portraits that have been brought to light since the 1968 exhibition at the Museum of American Folk Art, the show that guaran-teed the artist a permanent ican painting: Two of these newly recovered pictures,

By HELTON KRAMER ize how recently the work of this delightful painter was rediscovered and identified.
Only in the last 18 years has:
Phillips emerged as an artist of some importance, and the exact scope of his couve is still unknown. Yet oo figure in the folk art of the last century is now more admired.

both of shildren—"Andrew Jackson Ten Broeck," painted in Hudson, N.Y., in 1834, and "Blood Boy with Primer, Peach and Dog," painted in Catskill, N.Y., around 1840 —are among the finest works of the artist we have seen, and none of them are without significant interest. Phillips was often at his best in painting the portraits of children. Perhaps there was something about the first, unmarked face of fresh, unmarked face of childhood that accorded especially well with the earnestness and innocence of his tire exhibition, which remains on view through May 1, is, in any case, both an education and a delight. talent. Perhaps there was something too, in the color-ful childhod costumes of the period that elicited a gift for chromatic elegance we do not often find in the portraits of more conservatively dressed adults. Whatever the reasons, it is these two paint-ings of children that steal the current show. There is a in a wide variety of mate-purity and precision of form rials, ranging from sewn in these paintings that cen fabric to cast brouze, but his tainly sets them goest

Not that the other paintings are without their strengths. But when we look at the rather dour Stoddard portraits of 1812-13, for example, we can easily understand why it took so long for Phillips's work to emerge as a ... whole. These are the timid. uncertain paintings of an artist learning his trade. We can learn a good deal, ourselves, not only about folk art but about art in general, by comparing the early and late pic-tures in this show. The en-

This exhibition—the first, bythe way, in the gallery's new quarters—is something of an event, then, since it consists entirely of works in this medium.

Outstanding in this group is the series of tennis players —elegant vertical carvings, with beautifully painted pas-sages, executed with a certain humor and a flawless eye

e Rickey witsch, 55 East 74th Street There are only six small metal constructions by Mi Rickey in this exhibition, but they are more than enough to remind us of the extraor dinary and unlikely success he has achieved in invading the domain of Alexander Calder—the domain of mobile sculpture—and establish-ing within it an art wholly and delightfully his own. There is a wooderfully open, airy formality to this work that lives on easy terms with a certain playfulness. Quite the most exquiste of the new works is the "Column of Nine Triangles with Spirals" in gilded stainless steel, and quite the most original is the stainless steel "Column in Two Lines," which is designed for the corner of a room, Mr. Rickey corner of a room. Mr. Rickey has succeeded in rescuing never-oever land of Utopian theory and placing it firmly in the rooms where we live our daily lives. Through April

Jud Fine Feldman (33 East 74th Street): This is the kind of exhibition that requires lot of stand-un seading. The walls are covered with page of the artist's writings titled "Confessions," and longhand, of course while are illustrated and embel lished by "drawings," di-grams and other items d minor visual significance There is a certain common place humor to be discovered among much that is tedious hot it hardly seems worth the trouble. Through April 24.

Reynolds Beal (Hammer, 51: East, 57th Street): There are many pleasant scenes, most-ly of heaches and boats, in the paintings and watercol-ors of this American Impressionist who lived from 1867 to 1951, but the felicity of the subject is rarely matched by the power of art, Beal had obviously looked at a lot of very good paiotings, but his gifts were not equal to his aspirations. He lacked the delicacy of touch, the eye for subtle changes of light and the instinct for form which rescue pleasant paintings of this sort from the disasters of banality. Through Aprile

The hal-lucinatory "Mother Ubu" CT 1975 herks back for instance to a painting of 1927 by Mex Ernst ("After Us, Moth-erhood"). "Monsieur of Maway but as a matter of emunew paintings. The paintings in question heve to do with a black circle that has been cut into the way we cut into a round cheese. The rest of the cenvas is given over to fields of color (made dame" of 1869 is a piece that only Miro could have up of a mixture of oil paint made—so sly is the opposi-tion of the two stools there cast in bronze) that stand ard crayens), which lead a subtle and ambiguous existtence of their own. Their for man and woman—but even so there is in it a distant echo of the schematic many shifts of feeling are the more eloquent by con-trast with the inert, dumb, "Couple" that Giacometti made 51 years ago. The dia-logue is once easin among Where the mutilated circle gives off an emotionel blankness, in other words, the equals, but it is there. What is personal to Miró is, as always, the use of elements native to Catalonia. Just as when he arrived in Paris in the early 1920's and brought with him stones and grasses from the femily farm near Barcelona, so more than 50 years later he still relies the debris of farmland sod waterfroot for incongruous ingredients that can be cast in bronze and mede to live together. He could have opted for the role of elder stateman, but he has nreferred to go cut as the ever-young poet of iosubor-dination. The Miró we see at the Matisse Gallery is the man who volunteered in his late 70's to keep an overnight vigil in a comfortless monso that the world riculd take cognizance of the problem of civil liberty in Sprin. He may like to come on as an irrepressible physically very much at ease. Bill 'Martin's debut represents seven years of work in the kind of microscopic technique that can exert a momentary astonishment but requires something in the way of an orginal imaginalioo to hold our attention for long. One of his specialties is a forest so dense, and seen from so lofty a viewpoint, that we might be flying low over equatorial Atrica. But the foliage lifts from time to time, and then what do we see? White men and whiter women at their immemorial pranks, Bill Martin differs from the early modern masters of the forest (Rousseau and Max Ernst, for instance) in that he sees nature as primarily benign.

Even the big painting called "Autumn" (1973-76) is like the fabled sundial that boasted of recording only the cloudless hours; there is in it nothing of the diminuendo implicit in its title. Through April 28. Bessie Boris (Touchstone Gallery, 118 East 64th Street):

An independent spirit reigns over this gallery, which has now moved uptown. Bessie Boris's new pointings have e single theme: that of a womao far gone in years and surrounded by belongings of the same vintage. The paint itself is not very dislinguished, but there is enough of variety in the way of skillful positioning and ingemious perspective to keep monotony at bay. In their much smaller compass, Annie Mac-Millan's pointings in the same gallery reflect more of "The Great Gatsby" and its epoch than ever got onto the screen. Through April 30.

If there were a Nobel Prize for bridge teaching, it would loog ago have been awarded to Bill Root, who taught thousands of New Yorkers the finer poiots of the game. He oow makes his home in Florida, but conducts some classes in New York City in the summer.

Root does not play as often in national championships as he did some years ago when he played with Alvin Roth of New York in two world championships, finishing second twice behind the Italian Blue Team. But he can still make his presence felt, and did so in Kansas City, Mo., last mooth. The diagramed deal helped his team to reach the semifinal of the Vanderbilt knockout teams.

When East opened one dia-mond, he was looking forward to scoring a game or a slam. He felt insulted when his opponents bid themselves to a game, and doubled indignantly. North's three-heart bid was explained to be pre-emptive, a style poputar in tournament play. If North had wished to invite game he would have made a cue-bid in diamonds.

Suit Seeks to Overturn U.S. Health Planning Law

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP) -The National Association of Regional Councils filed suit in Federal court today seeking to overturn the new Heath Planning and Resources Develop-ment Act of 1974.

The suit alleged that Congress and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare unconstitutionally transferred from state and local governments to citizen - dominated agencies the power to target spending of billions of Federal health dollars and determine the location of new hospitals

The association represents about half of the 670 regional councils of local governments formed nationwide.

Rumer Godden's 19th Novel

By GERALD WALKER

THE PEACOCK SPRING. By Rumer Godden. walks off with the novel. Squeezed between - 274 pages. The Viking Press, $8.95,

For many years now, beginning with "Black Narcissus," Rumer Godden has established herself as a popular novelist of taste and distinction. Her quietly observed, precisely recorded novels have their sentimental cootent, to be sure, but there are usually other elements that make reading her a delight and a surprise. She sees clearly, intensely and compassionately: and she records what she sees with the carefully considered delicacy of an exquisite minor. craftsman.

What's more, Miss Godden often comes no with inventive stylistic devices. For example, 15 years ago, in "China Court," the story of a house in Cornwall and the five generations of a family who lived in it, she captured the ebb and flow of generations by avoiding chrocological storytelling. Thus, in one paragraph, a character might be the person he or she is at the age of 50; in the next, the person is a child of 8. Past and present swing to and fro al-

Another technical device in the same book consisted of switching back and forth from past tense to present tense. The past tense would be used to describe an event occurring in the novel's present, which was 1960, while the present tense would apply to something that bappened in the previous century. Here is an example of that in the some sentence: "He stopped by the wall to look, as Ripsie stops more than seveoty years before." Not just literary showing-off, but style put to use to illustrate the author's philosophical premise that time is continuous and interchangeably in flux. Neat.

Not quite so neat is "The Peacock Spring," Miss Godden's 19th book, but neat enough. While a portion of the be-ginning takes place in England, most of it unfolds in India, the other major setting for ber work. One central figure is 15year-old Una Gwithiam, who, with her sister, Halcyon, 12, is at school in England at the outset. Then comes a letter from their diplomat father, Sir Edward Gwithiam, summoning them to join him in New Delhi, where be is in charge of relief work for the United Nations. Neither girl understands the urgency with which they are wrenched out of school shortly after the spring term begins. All they know is that they are to come at ooce and that their divorced father has engaged a governess to tutor them.

All Becomes Clear

When they see the governess, all be-comes depressingly clear. She is a beautiful Eurasian named Alix Lamont, whose tutoring skills, it is soon evident, are not quite up to the needs and skills of two girls who have been to the best boarding schools. Una and Hal realize that they have been brought all the way to India to serve as a cover so that Alix can, without scandal, live there in the official United Nations residence.

Frankly, the basic obtuseness and genteel callousness of Sir Edward are not appealing, to say the least. Nor is he a totally credible character. The girls' warm, loving memories of him, as they set out for India, do not square with the remote man they meet when they get off the plane. True, love conquers all, even at times paternal feelings, but . . . this doesn't help

two cultures in a still-rigid caste system, she is a woman on the make. Alix uses her looks, ber talents as a horsewoman, bostess, flower arranger, salon singer, any-thing that comes to hand. There's an aborted marriage in her gossiped-about past, also a relationship with a rich old Indian, as well as one with a young Indian officer whose family would cut him off if he didn't marry someone respectable. Aside from personal ambition, Alix is driven by the need to care for the fat, old, loud, Scotch-guzzling, vulgar, but basically self-respecting Indian mother she both loves and is embarrassed by. Their relationship is well drawn, ironic and affecting, and the scene in which the mother unexpectedly appears at Sir Edward's house is both comic and touching. Alix will be a marvelous part for some movie actress. The other major relationship successfully depicted in the book is the ambivalent one between Una and Alix. Una resents Alix's intrusion into their lives, but she responds to Alix's appeal not to expose her limited tutoring talents; something about Alix's desperate need appeals

That may be because Una has some desperate adolescent needs of ber own. In ber loneliness in India, she becomes entranced by Ravi, the assistant gardener, talented poet, former member of a violent radical group and the peacock of the title. It starts out with Ravi reading Una his poems, Una being tutored in math by a friend of Ravi's and finally with Una pregnant and Sir Edward indignant. Characteristically. Sir Edward, who has by this time given Alix her triumph by making her Lady Gwithiam, sees no connection between his own all-for-love tactics and those of his

Rendering of Indian Life

While not a total success, because there are moments in which one suspects that the characters are acting not out of true human inconsistency but because of plot demands, "The Peacock Spring" does offer enough rewards to recommend it. In addition to a terse rendering of Indian social life, family structure and behavioral standards as Chekhov might have noted them, there is a plentiful quota of good lines. Thus, an Indian girl about an arranged marriage: "Our family is traditional but English people are so different."

There is also another of Miss Godden's stylistic touches, which bere consists of running together in the same sentence or paragraph bits of conversation, past or present, spoken or just thought but left unuttered in sctuality, For example, this from the girls' first meeting with Alix: "Releasing Hal, Miss Lamont bad stretched out ber band to draw Una near, but Una had not consented to be drawn, 'You were horribly standoffish, Hal told ber, Una had shaken the hand, politely but briefly, and let it drop. For perhaps balf a second Miss Lamont was disconcerted, but only half a second, then, I expect you are hungry and tired,' she said. 'Put down your cloaks and have a drink of lemonade; Christopher, our cook, makes it fresh every day." Our cook?"

Una wanted to query but, "Edward you must be dying for a drink," Miss Lamont went on . . . Does she arrange everything? thought Una?" In a very compact way, this technique gives the novel a satisfying thickness of texture, without running on Alix, on the other hand, is by far the to 500 or 600 pages as so many less

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, also reported that, many guests at the facilities in -West Germany, the Philippines: and Hawaii were American civilians and foreign nationals.

It recommended that certain recreational areas be consolidated or closed down. It said that would save $3.6 million a year in West Germany alone.

The report was made public by Senator William Proxmire, . Democrat of Wisconsin, who said he did not object to subsidizing vacations for lowerranking military families who might otherwise not be able to ford them.

"But the abuses, management inefficiencies and just plain waste in these programs sbould be brought to an endmmediately," he said.

The Panama Issue

Ronald Reagan, trying desperately to keep alive his bid for the Republican Presidential nomination, has resorted to demagoguery and distortion in accusing the Ford Administration of planning surreptitiously to "give away" the Panama Canal and Zone. Is Mr. Ford so frightened of the Reagan candidacy that he felt it necessary to respond to this cheap shot by appearing to back off from an entirely honorable and essential policy on the Panamanian problem?

Mr. Reagan perpetuates a dangerous myth when be says the Canal Zone is "sovereign United States territory." It is not and never has been. He acts irresponsibly. to put it mildly, when he refers to Panama's leader, Gen. Omar Torrijos, as "that tin-horn dictator," who must be told in no uncertain terms that the United States intends to keep control of the 500-square-mile Zone that bisects the Republic of Panama. General Torrijos has acted thus far with responsibility and patience on this explosive

Unfortunately, Mr. Reagan's sniping goaded the President to say, while campaigning in Texas: "The United States will never give up its defense rights to the Panama Canal and will never give up its operational rights as far as Panama is concerned." White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen now concedes that Mr. Ford's remarks lacked "precision and detail," and that current negotiations with Panama aim to maintain American interests in the Zone "during the useful life of the canal," or from 30 to 50 years.

The fact is that under the "Agreement on Principles." signed more than two years ago by Secretary of State Kissinger and Panama's Foreign Minister, this country committed itself to negotiate a new treaty that would terminate United States jurisdiction over the Zone and eventually give over the operation of the canal to Panama. The United States would continue to share in the canal's defense on terms to be agreed in the treaty.

In signing this declaration, Mr. Kissinger was continuing a general line of policy begun in President Johnson's Administration that recognizes the Canal Zone as a relic of "Manifest Destiny," a colonial enclave no longer acceptable to any sovereign state. Mr. Johnson had wisely decided after serious 1964 rioting in the Zone that a new relationship was necessary if uninterrupted passage of the canal were to be secured for the future along with a United States share In its defense.

This attitude, adopted by President Nixon and, presumably, by Mr. Ford, need be no polltical liability if the President understood it well enough to explain it to the American people as the absolute prerequisite for a viable United States policy toward Latin America.

Moscow's Repression

Civil rights have fared even worse than usual in the Soviet Union this week. Andrei Tverdokhlebov, secretary of the Soviet braoch of Amnesty International, has been sentenced to five years' exile from Moscow, Mustafa Dzhemilev, a nationalist Crimean Tatar, has been sentenced to two-and-a-half years at hard labor; and Valery Mareshin, a dissident who refused to testify against a friend, must work for six months at cut wages. Tass tops it all off by accusing Nobel Prize winner Andrei D. Sakharov and his wife of physically beating policemen at the Dzhemilev trial in distant Omsk, The Sakharovs' more complex account of what happened seems on the face of it more credible.

These unhappy events testily once again, if testimony were needed, that free speech and fair trial are still foreign to Soviet reality. Yet there has been a measure of progress. By Stalinist standards, the sentences meted out to the three convicted dissidents were mild: in Stalin's time no one could have championed civil rights, as the Sakharovs have done, and remained at liberty even briefly.

But an entire generation has grown to maturity since Stalin died nearly a quarter-century ago. Surely some in the present ruling group must recognize that it is time for further steps away from his repressive heritage. With the Soviet Union now so strong militarily and economically, is there still need to quake before the heterodox idea of a handful of dissidents and to punish them as this week's three "thought criminals" have been punished? Can it be fear that if speech were free, the power of the Soviet state would truly be endangered?

Access to Justice

At the recent national conference on "Causes of Popular Dissatisfaction With the Administration of Justice," there was a collision of ideas on the subject of access to the courts. Chief Justice Warren E. Burger held that too many unnecessary cases are being brought, thus overloading the judicial circuits. Public interest and civil rights attorneys countered that recent rulings by the Burger Court discouraged litigation by all comers -especially people at the pottom of the social and economic ladder.

The Chief Justice pointed to some improvements. particularly in opening up a new range of rights for prisoners. He also offered several constructive proposals for courts and legislatures: greater use of arbitration to resolve minor disputes fairly and swiftly; cuts in the high legal costs attached to buying homes and transmitting property at death: reasonable compensation for injuries resulting from negligence by doctors and hospitals and in accidents: exploration of better ways to deal with family matters from adoption to divorce.

These desirable aims do not, however, go to the heart of the discontent about courts, civil and criminal, Federal and state. Real discontent arises out of a widespread feeling that access to the courts is too costly and too difficult to meet everyday legal concerns. Chief Justice Burger appears more disturbed by the need for "efficient" administration than for keeping the courts open to "froublesome" issues and litigants.

After all the emphasis in recent years on the need for equal representation for the indigent; on class action suits in consumer, medical, environmental, marital and other matters, and on means, where necessary, for shifting criminal and civil cases from the state to the Federal courts for evaluation of constitutional issues, the rising legal expectations of the public must not be denied simply because of inconvenience or even an overburdened system.

In a significant opinion in 1971, Justice Douglas, now retired, wrote that race, religion, class, caste and poverty should not be used to deny equal protection under the law. The principles enunciated in this landmark case have been whittled away in the past few years. Regardless of administrative problems, the courts must not be above insuring equal justice—and full access—for all

Two for the Environment

Within the past week the American environment enjoyed two triumphs that go far to prove the country's basic concern for its natural heritage in spite of economic difficulties and the continuing cry for more

A combination of utility companies bas abandoned long-nurtured plans for the proposed $3.5 billion Kaiparowits power plant, which would bave poured 300 tons of pollutants a day into the air of a magnificently scenic region of Utah containing eleven national parks and recreation areas. At the other end of the country, North Carolina's New River was all but assured of preservation when Secretary of the Interior Kleppe made It part of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers

The two episodes, very different on the surface, have nevertheless much in common. In both cases incalculable harm would have been done for short-term gains that were achievable by other means at far lower cost to the environment. Utah's largest utility, the Utah , ower and Light Company, never found it necessary to participate in the Kaiparowits project at all; it has plants functioning efficiently well north of the parks. where they are no environmental threat. If the other companies had put as much time, money and energy into rescarching ways to gasiiy the state's abundant despining coal as they have invested in Kaiparowits, they might by now be enjoying the not-too-distant prospect of a rich and nonpolluting source of energy. In any case, the decision of the companies was based on rising costs and reduced demand for electricity, not on the environmentalists' campaign of opposition.

As for the New River, that esthetic and archeological treasure-and the historic lands that would be inunoated by damming it-the proposed project would not generate energy at all. It would merely store it, requiring additional energy for the purpose. Representative Neal of North Carolina, reflecting the unanimous opinion of his State's Legislature, its Governor and its Congressional delegation, has introduced a bill to head off judicial complications flowing from Secretary Kleppe's action. Its passage, combined with the abandonment of Kaiparowits, should belp put heart back into the occasionally hard-pressed conservation movement.

Hope for Housing

Any proposal aimed at stemming the tragically accelerating figure of housing abandonment in New York is worth a hearing-particularly when it is the work of a consortium of the city's concerned bankers, lawyers, real estate men and community and civic leaders.

The New York Urban Coalition has produced a Housing Rehabilitation Task Force study that embodies a specific plan addressed to the abandonment problem. While such a proposal bas no automatic guarantee of success, it is a constructive approach that offers more than statistical hand-wringing. Not least, it offers bope.

The coalition's recommendations are based on the conclusions reached earlier by the city's own Housing Task Force: that the most pressing need is for rehabilitation and neighborhood conservation. There is no lack of housing stock, the study finds, only of babitable homes. And the forces destroying them, including inflation and rent controls, continue unabated.

The proposal made by the coalition is that two public benefit corporations be set up to deal specifically with abandoned housing and properties in default. A Consumer Housing Corporation would acquire the buildings that are not too far gone, undertake repairs and rebabilitation, and train owner-management or communitymanagement groups.

The corporation would be financed by a Housing Trust Fund using a combination of public and private money in the form of interest-free loans and mortgage insurance from the state, with private mortgage funds. Low debt service costs would be assured and greatly reduced risks could encourage the private sector.

The plan rests on the availability of state loans to initiate it, and that is a formidable stumbling block. But that first loan cost would be phased out by repayment. The cost of not providing the funds is far greater: continued massive abandonment, tax loss, existing expenses, housing hardship and the city's deterioration.

It is essential to face the fact that normal real estate investment no longer works, due to restrictions and rising costs. Until rent controls are dealt with, the situation will not improve. Maintenance and management have broken down. Public funding ia no longer a practical housing panacea.

One purpose of the coalition's plan is to get the city out of the disastrous ownership and management of taxdelinquent properties, for which substantial community development funds are now allocated in a program of conspicuous failure. That alone would be a solid saviog.

Without housing, the city's future is dim, no matter what accounting miracles the rescue squads create. And without some kind of innovative action there is little chance for housing.

Transit Strikes: The Federal Remedy

.. was warners, for the tr, 1910

Your March 30 editorial "Who Gets Walloped?" implies that there is no mmediate way to head off a confrontation short of a pretracted, crippling snowsy strike without surrendering to labor demands, whose excesses in terms of the present restraint imposed on other municipal employees because of the present massive problems faced by the city could touch off crippling repercussions.

Ten years ago, after the abortive subway strike, Mayor Lindsay quickly gave in to the inflated transit demands without bargaining out the issues. The question was then asked: Wby no Tafl-Hartley action to end the subway strike? President Johnson could have acted. Cao't we learn our lesson from history that we all suffer when political considerations or embarrassments of public figures are allowed to take precedence over seeking solutions and allowing fact-finding and the rule of public reason, welfare and safety considerations to come forth during a cooling-off period? The Labor Management Relations Act (Taft-Hartley) provides that the President may under the national emergency provisions of the act appoint a board of loquiry and, on receiving its report, may direct the Attorney General to petition any U.S. district court to enjoin the threatened

that the "exemption status" of supervisors, political subdivisions of states. etc., in the former would not apply to the national emergency provisions of Title IL The Senate Labor Committee Report shows the amendment to exclude unions of government employees from the coverage of the act failed to pass. A U.S. Court of Appeals to 1961 turned down the claim of two of the unions involved in the maritime strike that they were not subject to the injunction because they represented supervisors exempled from the act. The court held that the "special slatus" given supervisors under Title I was not meant to be carried over into Title II's emergency injunction provi-

The Chief Executive alone or on the urging of the Mayor, Governor, U.S. Senators, labor representatives or other responsible citizens can have applied the weight of Federal sanction to the transit union representing municipal government employees. Here in New York the collective-bargaining process could have resumed during the grace period and equitable and well-thoughtout positions explored in the light of justice to all interests involved, without leaving a gap of disparity of treatment for the other city workers who have already accepted the need for restraint and austerity during the HEXT TWO YEARS. To Jail a 'Punk' To the Editor:

Most of society's gross injustices siem from the fact that the people who make the critical decisions are not the same people who have to face the consequences of those decisions.

As a particularly revolting example, in your article oo two teen-age muggers who prey on the belpless elderly (news story April 11) you quote a research analyst in juvenile delinquency as being 'very reluctant" to sentence these punks to twenty years in jail. He obviously does not have to face the consequences of his decision to let these marauders prowl the streets again.

Such decisions should be left up to the representatives of their elderly victims - the people most likely to suffer the inevitable, grisly consequences.

Immunization's Limits

To the Editor:

The public impact of the April 7 letter by Dr. Kempe should not be allowed to stand without comment. His statement of "lifelong protection against polio and measles" on a single visit or even multiple visits cannot be substantiated. Unless Dr. Kempe is in possession of facts unavailable to the rest of America's pediatricians, there never has been and probably never will be an immunization conferring lifetime immunity against any disease. Even ten years of protection without booster immunization is

Mass immunization of young children against influenza is a questionable goal in any case because of the severity of reactions at an age where the disease in itself is mild. Let us not further complicate the matter by holding out false hopes of one-shot lifetime protection against disease.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. - "From space one could control the earth's weather, cause drought and floods. change the tides and raise the levels of the sea, make temperate climates frigid," then-Seastor Lyndoo B. Johnson told a joint session of Congress in 1957. Like many other legislators, he accepted Defense Department fantasies that the United States was in a race with the Soviet Union to develop environmental weapons.

Mr. Johnson as President made the fantasies rear by ordering rainmaking in Southeast Asia. Between 1967 and 1972 he and President Richard M. Nixon suthorized at least $3.6 million emnually on secret cloud-seeding over North and South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia; in an attempt to muddy trails and slow enemy movements. .Although in one instance this enhanced rainfall by 30 percent, Pentagon officials call the operations a failure. But the Pentagon defends them. as humane, saying, "Raindrops don't kill people; hombs do." (The Department of Defense denies it was seeding over North Vietnam in 1971 when that nation suffered the heavlest rains since 1945. In 1945, a million Vietnamese died of flood and famine."

for what follows? This question, together with recognition that Uoited States policy condemns warfare aimed at civilians, prompted Senator Claiborne Pell in 1973 to introduce a resolution calling for an international treaty to prohibit environmental warfare "or the carrying out of any research, or experimentation directed thereto." The Senate voted 82 to 10 to approve the resolution, which lacks force of law.

Last-August, at the 31-nation United Nations conference of the Committee on Disarmament, in Geneva, the United States and Soviet Unioo jointly, proposed a draft convention to ban military or any other hostile use of environmental techniques." Unfortu-. nately, it is far weaker than the Senate resolution. For example, it fails to prohibit military research or development of environmental-modification techniques, and allows all "peaceful" work on such things. The Pentagon says its Climate Dynamics program, formerly Project Nile. Blue, is peaceful and needed to detect Soviet attempts to disrupt North American weather. (Because the freaty appoints no inspection agency to enforce its ban, leaving nations to bring.

evidence of violations to the United Nations Security Council, treaty ratification would justify locreased funding for Climate Dynamics monitoring.)

But Climate Dynamics researchers, using computer models of oceans and atmosphere; have studied ways to melt the polar ice caps, generate destructive storms, and otherwise use "key environmental instabilities" to release huge amounts of energy. They have found how the United States, acting secretly from space could inflict bad weather on the Soviet Union, thereby ruining harvests and keeping that country dependent on United States grain imports.

In the Soviet Union, engioeers are reversing the Arctic-flowing Pecbora River and creating inland seas, actions that experts say will alter global climate. This is "peaceful."

In 1975, the National Academy of Sciences reported that cooling io the Northern Hemisphere since the 1940's makes the start of a new ice age within 100 years a small but real possibility. Scientists cannot determine whether the cooling is caused by humans or if one nation's bad weather is caused by another's weather-modification programs, so the potential for hostility arising from such programs is obvious. Global climatic changes will prompt many nations to use such modification techniques, but the world's unstable political climate demands that such techniques be internationally regulated, with adequate safeguards and with reparations for those who suffer drought or storm damage. The draft treaty could be a step toward such regulation. But the treaty allows some weather warfare hy prohihiting only sechniques baving spread, long-lasting or severe effects harmful to human welfare." What does this mean? The tiniest tampering with natural balances can set off chain reactions with unforeseen consequences.

Senator Pell and Representatives Gilbert Gude and Donald M. Fraser bave proposed that all United States environmental-modification researchby civilians, the military and the Central Intelligence Agency—be put under Congressional control. Uotil this is dooe and the United States amends the draft treaty to elimioate loopholes aod cloudy language, few nations will believe we want environmental warfare banned.

Annexation of the Marianas, a 'Dismal Story

By Jose A. Cabranes

NEW HAVEN-Why, one may wonder, has our Bicentennial Congress approved the Administration's proposal to dismember the far-flung United Nations trust territory of Micronesia and annex one of its districts?

By a vote of 66 to 23, the Senate on Feb. 24 approved a proposed covenant with the people of the northern Mariana Islands, seven months after the measure had sailed through the House by voice vote. We have administered the territory under a United Nations mandate since 1947.

For the islanders, the deal has some advantages. It extends United States sovereignty to the islands under "Commonwealth" status and grants their 14,500 people a kind of United States citizenship, while providing annual payments averaging $1,090 per person, a onetime annual payment of $19.5 million to the islands' government and access to some American social welfare programs: What does the United States obtain from the transaction? Nothing, except a new and permanent territorial stake in the Western Pacific and rights to build bases on the islands without the. inconvenience of United Nations over-

But the strategic value of the islands has been questioned by a major study of the electorate of the Marianas had at the National War College, and a voted to accept the status of an "unincoalition of liberals and conservatives corporated territory" of the United iocluding Senators Gary Hart, Harry F. Byrd Jr., Claiborne Pell, Mike Mansfield and Armed Services Committee chairman Juhn Sternis—has argued that the arrangement expands America's permanent defense commitmeots in the area while providing bases of marginal or donbtful utility. The Senate Armed Services Committee was deeply divided on the issue, and only a last-minute change of vote by one member turned back an effort to defer action on the covenant.

. Why, then, did : Congress approvethe first annexation of territory by the United States since-1925 when Swains Island was annexed to American Samoa?

Because there simply are not enough prople in this country who know or care enough about these seemingly obscure colonial questions to counteract the shortsighted views of the milifary Establishment.

Moreover, the expansionists with great effect lovoked the natioo's commitment to democratic values and the principle of self-determination, noting that United States approval of the covenant would fulfill the expectations of the islanders.

Appeals by anti-expansionists to legitimate American self-interest or to the historic incongruity of the proposal failed to hudge a majority that seemed enchanted by the fact that 78.8 percent

States—the quaint constitutinoal euphemism for a territory governed under virtually unlimited Coogressional authority (that is, a colony).

Strom Thurmand summarized the expansionist position when he proclaimed: "It seems to me that if we ever expect to briog in the Marianas, now is the time. This year, this Bicentennial Year, these people want to join us, and I say we should not deny them that opportunity."

The expansionists invariably spoke of the approval of "78 perceot of the electorate" in a 1975 plebiscite, and never of the small numbers actually involved (barely 5,000 voters). The plebiscite reinforced the time-honored national myth that the United States has never been a "colonial" power. If encouraged the belief that United States approval would fulfill the legitimate expectations of a dependent people for "self-determination" and obscured the fact that the fate of the other 100,000 Micronesians has not been settled. For a nation already overburdened by the apparent hostility of the world's darker-skinned peoples, it provided an unusual and welcome display of pro-Americanism, by a dependent people. We may not have heard the end of this dismal story. The Marianas covenant was negotiated with the most compliant group of islands only after negotiators on Micronesia-wide status proved 100 demanding in pursuit of self-government under a status of free association. Divide and conquer is an old stratagem and one likely to work against poor and disorganized colonials. Senator Hiram Fong, a leading expansionist, may have disclosed the Administratioo's hiddeo agenda when be noted that approval of the covenant would "give the other people of the trust territory second thoughts about their own political status." He added: "I think we will find there will be increasing interest by the other peoples in the various islands comprising Micronesia for a closer relationship with the United States than the relationship they are now talking about ... I hope when we approve this covenant that it will be a forerunoer of other covenants with other parts of Micronesia."

The prospect of more American "unincorporated territories" across the Pacific-and ever-larger defensa commitments in the region—thus unfolds before us. But ultimately, after other legally required United States steps. the United Nations Security Council must approve the plans to alter or end the trusteeship agreement. We can only hope-for America's sake-that colonialism with consent of the governed will prova less acceptable at Turtle Bay than on Capitol Hill.

Cases Where Crime Doesn't Pay

By C. L. Sulzberger

BERN-Switzerland protects privacy of banking deposits more than other countries and one result is that many foreigners with ill-gotten financial gains seek to hide them here from prying official eyes. It is therefore curious that this little democracy has: not been more involved in ramifications of the current multinational bribery scandals.

One might have imagined, o priori,. that persons illegally accepting large brihes in order to win husiness contracts in global markets would have rushed to deposit them here in anonymous numbered accounts, thus protecting them from inspectinn in other lands. But, after discussing this matter with officials from the Bern For-. eign Ministry, Justice, Treasury and police departments I am persuaded this is oot the case.

Nor is this simply because of offi-cial discretion obscuriog financial transactions. The Swiss make it clear that under freer interpretation of their amended banking secrecy laws the Government is always quietly advised. of suspected irregularities in tha source of deposits. In such cases it is ioclioed to make records available. to foreign inspection when there is reason to suspect illegality in tha origin of funds.

Tha only public action here coonected with the bribery scandals stemming from United States corporations

was granting of permission, six weeks. ago, to a Dutch inquiry into charges against Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands. This allowed investigators to interrogate on Swiss territory (a liberty rarely granted to foreign officials) a retired representative of Lockheed Aircraft and the concern's attorney in Zurich. The former now lives in Switzerland and the latter is a Swiss national.

The reasons were dual. This Government is concerned about possible embarrassment to the Dutch monarchy as a result of rumors concerning Bernhard's alleged connection with Lockheed and privately believes the Prince has been maligned. It doesn't want justice to be blinded by Ignorance. Secondly, both Bern and The Hague have ratified a convention of judicial and penal assistance.

A similar treaty betweeo Switzerland and the U.S.A. was signed lo 1973 and ratified last year by the Swiss. It still awaits approval by the United States Secate. This seems paradoxical, considering the theoretical possibility that Washington might wish to trace sus-picions of misbehavior by American corporations.

The major force impelling such thoughts is the inquiry conducted by the U.S. Senate's own Frank Church, If our Government is serious about hunting down potential criminals connected with these scandals, it would do well to legalize the pact making possible examination of accounts linked to suspected crimes.

The Swiss have a long tradition of protectiog bank deposits from public scrutiny. These are coosidered private. If money is kept in a numbered account (wherein only a handful of bank nfficials know the name behind the number), the secret is held even if foreign tax collectors would like to pry into the records.

For the Swiss, tax-dodgiog is not a crime; but any real crima is enough to open the books. A seriously suspected criminal is subject to this risk. Switzerland fully cooperated in making documentation available to locate deposits of refugees from Hitler's Germany, after World War II, and also to belp seizure of secret Nazi funds.

But particular caution is still exercised in defining the limits of secrecy. This country's penal code specifically hans foreign authorities from exercisiog rights-such as interrogation-oo Swiss territory, without specific governmental permission, as was the case with the Dutch investigators.

Once the United States Senate ratifies the pending accord with Bern it is conceivable Washingtoo might be able to follow up inquiries in the bribery affair that have hitherto been obscured. Certain other nations involved-such as Japan, Iran and Saudi Arabia-have oo hilateral treaties with

However, that lack is not a complete harrier to cooperation. Bribery is considered criminal here. In default of a treaty, an individual Swiss bank's good will may be encouraged to make classified informatioo available.

A recent president of the Swiss Confederation says: "We Swiss are perhaps particularly rigorous in matters of discretion. As far as Swiss tax law is concerned there is no duty in general for banks to tell the tax authorities about their clients and account-holders."

So if and when Washington hopes to delve deeper here in search of bribery, it must always keep in mind that criminality Is the theme to he stressed. For the gnomes of Zurich tha U.S. tax-collector's needs are oot eoough.

transit and handicapped other city services.

Mayor George Moscone and the Board of Supervisors presideot, Quentin L. Kopp, said that the striking unions had been notified that the city would enter into mediation as requested by the unions if by 12:01 A.M. Monday the San Francisco Municipal Railway was operating once again and craft workers agreed to handle emergency service requests.

Mr. Kopo said that the un-Mr. Kopo said that the unions could accept either of two pre-cooditions proposed by the city in an effort to get negotiations beyond their current impasse.

The conditions are that either all public transit must be in operation by the Monday morning deadline or all bus service must be operating and all pickets removed from city hosoitals, playgrounds and pubic housing.

"This is the last step the board can take, will take," sald Mr. Kopo, apparently giving the striking workers an

Uoin leaders immediately rejected the city offer and sald at a news conference that the preconditions would eliminate the union's capacity for bring-ing pressure on the city.

They Mayor said, however that the city would wait until Monday for a formal rejection. The strike by the municipal building trades unions against the city began March 31 after the supervisors voted to require these workers to take pay cuts of uo to $4,000 a year while granting modest pay increases to 16,000 other city workers.

That action, according to the supervisors, was taken as a result of a referendum last No-vember in which San Franciscans approved by a 2-to-1 margin a proposition that repealed the pay parity formula in the city charter. Under this formu-la, craft workers received the same hourly wages as those paid to like workers in private industry.

Opponents of the parity formula successfully argued that carpenters, electricians, labor ers, plumbers, gardeners and other craftsmen who work for the city benefit from year round employment and other fringe benefits not available in private industry.

According to Terry Webster 32-year-old coment mason this argument is false because city johs are no longer secure as a result of layoffs. Mr. Webster is picketing a downtown city building in an effort to fight the city offer to "cut $4,000 from the $22,000 I expected to gross this year.

The referendum that gave the supervisors a mandate to hold down spending, especially on city salaries, came in the aftermath of a short strike by policemen and firemen last August. The strike soured city residents against municipal workers, increasing property taxes and a fear that San Francisco was overspending in a manoer that could lead to fiscal problems like those in New York City.

The power to negotiate and settle with unions was also taken away from the Mayor after former Mayor Joseph L. Alioto used a little-known provisioo of the City Charter to give the police and firemen more than some supervisors thought proper.

The supervisors then hired a professional negotiator to represent them. But the craft reserve have generally refused. workers have geoerally refused to deal with him, terming him an "errand boy" and a "liar" and insisting on either direct negotiations with the supervisors or arbitration.

The most noticeable effect of the strike has been the clos ing of the San Francisco Mu-nicipal Railway, whose buses trolleys and cable cars serve more than 250,000 riders a day causing crowded freeways and city streets.

Bill Is Proposed to End Abuses In No-Fault Insurance Claims

By RONALD SMOTHERS ALBANY, April 16-Assemblyman Leonard Silverman, as-serting that no-fault automobile insurance premiums would rise this year because of artificial inflation of medical costs in such cases, said today that he would propose legislation to curb such abuses.

Mr. Silverman, Democrat of oklyn and chairman of the embly Insurance Committee, aid that the most effective way of ending the abuse would be to set a schedule of payments that would be permitted for medical services in accident cases. Such a schedule would set treatment fees at the same level for comparable treatment in nonaccident cases and would be updated periodically by the State Superintendent of Insur-surface, one of the first pro-

However, a spokesman for the State Superintendent of InSenator John R. Dunne, Republican of Garden City, L.I., and chairman of the Senate Insurance Committee, said the Senate committee did not feel that the incidence of abuse under the law was the main problem in the rising rates. He said any changes should "go to broader aspects than abuse," indicating that Mr. Silverman's proposals would undergo a number of changes in moving through the Changes in moving through the Legislature.

A "Windfall" for Some

Mr. Silverman said there was "substantial evidence that the no-fault automobile insurance also recognizes the political problems involved and these-fall to certain health providers and bospitals." PITTSEURGH, April 17—Jinmy Carter has stolen a march on his Democratic rivals by raising enough money for a fairly intensire television and radio advertising campaign in the week leading up to the crucial Pennsylvania primary.

The commercials for the former Georgia Governor started on television stations in Pittsburgh last night. By Monday they will be on the air in each of the state's five TV markets.

A day later a heavy campaign of Carter radio ads is due to begin.

Dogged by financial and orsanizational problems, Senator Heary M. Jackson of Washingtion and Representative Morris E. Udeil of Arizona have yet to make any firm plans for the purchase of significant amounts of TV and radio time. Until this

Mail Service Competition Rising

business has formed a company to deliver local letters, promising same-day service for anyone who gets the mail to him in the morning.

Here in Riverside, 60 miles around the nation, including least of Los Angeles, two freighthauling executives deliver The Wall Street Journal to subscribers in Southern California and parts of adjointing states—and do it so well that weekly news magazines also are giving them business. In various ways, private businessmen are competing with the financially troubled United States Postal Service, which last year for the first time lost mail volume.

The new competitors include that he has significant adviced acceptance. Mr. Reeves said, but any customer who insists on getting bills in the mail forms said, but any customer who insists on getting bills in the mail gets his wish.

The arithmetic of private delivery of utility bills has caught the attention of other companies too. The Georgia Power Company of Atlanta estimates that it will save $400,000 a year between the saving is expected to come from improved cash flow made possible by quicker payonents of bills.

Private delivery services complain most often about their difficulty in being accepted by residents of apartment build-

And with Congress balking at approving $307 million to continue the subsidization of publications through 1978, publishers are scrambling to find alternative means of delivery:

The two Riverside business-men: Edward C. Klees and Ronald W. Coble provide one such alternative. They left a small electronics company here six years ago to form a truck-ing company and were under way for only three months when they got an inquiry from a Wall Street Journal executive. "He asked if we could deliver 25,000 copies of The Wall Street Journal in Los Angeles on the same day it was printed," Mr. Coble said in an interview. "I said: 'sure.'" He said his and Mr. Klees's

The Journal prints the newspaper, here in one of its satellite plants and then drops them by air or rail at distribution points in Los Angeles and Las Vegas, and in the Tucson-Phoenix and Flagstaff-Prescott areas in Arizona loland Carriers takes over from there. In . November 1974, Inland

The business "is not without its problems." Mr. Klees said. Delivering the newspaper is hectic, he indicated, because the thousands of copies must be handled between II P.M. and A.M. the next day.

"Tha work is steady." he said, "and we can use full-time employees, with relatively lit-tle turnover, which makes us dependable."

Separate forces handle the other publications. It is a comfort to have three or four days to deliver the Reader's Digest Mr. Klees said, but the part-time nature of the work con-tributes to a high turnover rate of the newsboys and house wives hired for the job.

Like many other private deverers, Inland is unhappy that it cannot put magazines m home mailboxes, which under the law can be used only by the Postal Service.

Wind Up on Lawns

Magazines placed between screen doors or hung from doorknobs sometimes wind up on lawns they say. A bill introduced by Senator James L. Buckley, Conservative-Republican of New York, would allow all delivery services to

Mr. Klees of Inland contends that he has significant advantages over the Postal Service, wantages over the Postal Service, and inaccessibility to mail boxes, which is broadening its service areas and winning greatly increased profits.

All of this is deeply troubling to the Postal Service. Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar has said: "It is clear from recent experience that there is a lot of price elasticity in our business—as rates go up. our In contrast to $16,000 a year azines, wasting en awful lot of

Canticum Novum Sings Early Music

The Canticum Novum Singers, an unaccompanied group of 20 conducted by Harold Rosenbaum, gave a pleasantly varied concert of early music at Carnegie Recital Hall on last Sunday. The music was varied not The music was varied not only as to composer—Marenzio, Gibbons, Dowland, Jannequin and J. S. Bach—but also in forces employed, for Mr. Rosenbaum had the wit to set off the more substantial madrigals with songs and lute solos played by Lucy Cross. The Canticum Novum is a homogeneous, forceful is a homogeneous, forceful ensemble with a good deal of flexibility snd a warm tone. Spanish Harpist Plays Brilliantly Maria Rosa Calvo-Man-zano, a Spanish harpist now making ber first American tour, played a long program that was short on musical Hall on Thursday night. The interest in Carnegie Recital playing itself was hrilliant wholly polished: The artist has for many years been an established concert performer and teacher in her native country.

Practically everything Miss Calvo-Manzano did was perfection technically and musically. She produced big sonor-ities as well as those of the utmost delicacy, and her rhythms were noticeably

Her program had its novel-ties, including some Spanish works by the 16th-century Cabezon and the 20th-cen-tury Jesus Guridi and Gerardo Gombau. There was a Handel chaconne, a Dussek sonata, an ingenious Fantasy by Saint-Saëns and Tournier's richly exploitative Theme With Variations. Yet so many of these pieces depended on repetition and variation for their substance that they outlasted their welcome.

Still, the harp literature is not notably profound and adventurous, and this recital did have the great merit of introducing Miss Calvo-Manzano's expert artistry. -RAYMOND ERICSON

Wharton Novel Is Play at the Long Wharf

By Clives Barnes

Special to The New York Times NEW HAVEN, April 15-Novels can make great movies but rarely lend themselves to stage adaptation. Why? The multiplicity of incident perhaps or, more persuasively possibly, that novelist's tone, that subjective note of unerring com-ment that more easily finds space in a movie than on the stage. And then, of course, there is simply the question of movement—a novel can fly in many directions, almost at once, and so can a film. A stage is a nutshell

These thoughts were prompted by the production of Edith Wharton's "House of Mith," which has just opened here at the Long Wharf Theater. The novel was written in 1905, and just a year later, Clyde Fitch, one of the most prominent American playwrights of his day, produced a stage adaptation with Wharton's active collaboration. Wharton prodirectly from the novel), and Fitch set it in a dramatic superstructure. Unfortunately, it seems I have not actually read that edaptation, so I write from hearsay-that Fitch blunted, the author's purpose undercutting the novel's theme of a free, beautiful, poor and lonely woman lost on the seas of American high society.

John Tillinger, the drama-turge of the Loog Wharf Theater, and Arvin Brown, the artistic director, had a long look at the Fitch adaptation and-understandably loving the novel-tried to find ways around its problems. Eventually, Mr. Tillinger undertook a completely new adaptation, using some of the Fitch material, returning to the original novel and intercutting all the various ele-ments. The result is impressive but a mildly happy failure. It lacks the texture and density of Wharton. Yet what could have been dooe has been done well. It is sim-ply that at the final count novels into plays will not go.

The story is tremendous. Lily Bert is a poor little rich girl who is really poor. Her parents have left her with nothing but a taste for the expensive life and the sure knowledge that she has to net a rich husband. Unfortunately, Lity has scruples; she even fastidious. The rich men aroun her are boring, appailing and rapacious. Her frankness of beehavior compromises ber with the one man—a semi-poor lawyer— who attracts her (remember this was 1905, where to visit a man's applicated with a fate worse than death), and in the end she is left with nothing but squalor and, eventually, suisqualor and, eventually, suicide. It is a melodramatic tale but curiously truthfulits insights ring hollowly in the halls of despair.

The play has been very decently and clearly staged hy Waris Hussein, and the settings hy Marjorie Kellogg and the costumes (exquisitely in period) by Rill Walker ly in period) by Bill Walker and to the play's sense of style. And style it truly has —it is the Wharton style, the urbane, civilized, terrifying uptightness with its no-dertow of unreined passion. It is typified here by costumes that are both prim and sexy, hy a staging that is contained in its emotion but appears to have subtitles of desperation.

One glory—probably the particular glory—of the eve-ning is Fran Brili's touching and vibrant performance of Lily. This is Lily come to life—funny, sweet, innocent and horrifyingly vulnerable. A butterfly in a cage of Miss Brill is brilliant, but the entire cas—one of those Long Wharf dependables—is Long Wharf dependables—is happily quick to the very strace of the ploy. The dialoge rings as if it bad just been minted. The International Organization of Masters, Mates and Pilots has reached tentative agreement with the nation's ship owners on a new threeyear contract. The agreement is scheduled for a vote by a mail bal-lot conducted under the auspices of the American Arbitration Association. It expected to be completed by the end of July. The terms provide for a

The terms provide for a 20 percent wage increase—5 percent during each of the first two years and 10 percent in the final year. An additional 4 percent will be applied to fringe benefits.

The original management offer called for a 10-5-5 percent wage increase. This was changed by the union, which also negotiated wage retro-activity to Nov. 15, 1975, with all other benefits being retroactive to June 16, 1975, the expiration date of the previous contract.

In exchange for this concession on wages, the union got a number of additional vacation days a year for the first two years of the con-tract, plus a total of 4 per-manent vacation days in the course of three years. This, according to a union spokesman, will generate an additional 44,000 man-days a year, thus creating additional employment opportunities for deck officers at a time when the American merchant marine is shrinking.

The agreement covers 75 steamship companies, operating 375 dry cargo ships, tankers and passenger liners.

Mary S. Phipps, a Spring House, Pa., travel agent, was $10,000 richer last week after winning top prize in the Holland America Cruises' Travel Agent Sweepstakes. Miss Phipps guessed correctly the exact total of the number of pautical miles the line's cruise ships will cover this year. She was one of 14,000 entrants in the contest. Five second prizes, of $500 each, were also awarded at a luncheon last Monday aboard the Stateodam here.

The average steamship company depends almost ex-clusively on travel agents to sell its service.

But old people still die in their own beds, here, from time to time, holding the hands of the relatives who nursed them. The remarkable thing was how Gramp died. Three weeks before it bappened he took out his false teeth and handed them to his grandson and said he didn't ned them any more. He never are or drank again.

could. That is the theme of this sad and intimate story and that is the rationals for its publication.

Others may argue with their definition of dignity. Mark and Dan Jury, who focused their Nikons on their grandfather in what they called his "wacko stage," concede this.

"A lot of people think a drugged person lying in a hospital bed with a white linen cover and with tubes in his arms—that's dignified, because it looks nice," 22-year-old Dan Jury was saying the other day at lunch.

"A person like Granip, who lives A person like Gramp, who lives at home, knocks over lawps, loses control of his bowels, sees red rabbits in the refrigerator—that's not dignified, hecause he doesn't look pretty."

"Well," he said, glancing at the family around the table, "I say Gramp had the most dignified death of all. He died on his own terms. We just went along."

along."
Four generations went along with Gramp on his long odyssey fitto sentity. Gramp, as the poet advised, did not go gentle into that good night."
Instead, he wrecked his room in noctional rages. He hid all the light bulbs, all the doorknobs, took apart the stove. He washed his hands in the toilet, and blew his nose on his daughter's parties.

Sometimes Gramp wore bizarre garb a haseball cap, say, with his wife's red velvet housecoat. Other times he wore nothing at all.

He shocked the neighbors! He accused the family of plotting against him. Not that he recognized them as family.

"Richard?" he said, when another grandson come to visit. "You're a Richard? What's a Richard?"

Gramp was slipping away by pleces. Yet the family—his wife, Nan; his daughter Florence; his daughter Anna Jury's sons, Dan and Mark, and Mark's wife. Dee—continued to see him as wife, Dee continued to see him as an integral human being, with a need to talk, laugh and interact with those wife loved him, no matter how far he regressed.

Admittedly, the first impulse, when Grampis "spells" began was to drop their voices and speak of him as though he wasn't there.

That's natural, Mark Cary said.

here we all were whispering about him in the third person. No wonder old people get paranoid."

Mark, a 31-year-old photojournalist, also wrote the text of "Gramp," published by Grossman ($5.95). And everybody contributed tape-recorded comments—from Gramp's great-grandaughter Hillary, now 6, to his wife, now go it—I trust in the Lord."

Looking hack, no one could recall a time when the family seemed unable to cope with Gramp. As his senility grew worse, the Jurys moved into their grandparents house and every family member took a turn shaving, dressing, feeding and dispering the old man. With so many hands, the task was not unbearable.

But the alternative was unthinkable. If Gramp were put in a nursing home he would have lasted about a breek, said Dee Jury, who mothered him as she did her own children. "We all agreed on that."

They did not all agree, however, that is book with more than 100 photographs of Gramp in his worst moments, was necessarily a proper memorial to a proudfold coal miner.

The idea particularly troubled the Jurys' mother, Anna, who lives in Indiana.

"Now that she's seen the book she knows why we did it," Mark said.

"Up until a few days ago she was saying, What's going to happen when it comes out? He's my father and here he is in his underwear." he is in his underwear.

Propercy Tugend shared her downs. A retired school-teacher 50's, wiss Tugend said she fear book might discredit her father. "Bet" she went on in a small "Dadkloved Danny and Mark he loved to have his picture. And if have read letter after from the picture as a letter about it."

WASHINGTON, April 17 (AP) A warning system for enemy attack and natural disaster that would cost $42 million should be able to do the job of three $142 million systems now being developed, according to Congressional auditors.

The auditors said Wednesday in a General Accounting Office report that the $42 million system could get a warning across the country through radio and television stations in about five minutes.

They also said that separate satellite warning systems, a Peotagon high-speed nuclearwarning system and a teletype SHINGTON, April 17

Morals Instruction

A large majority of Americans favor the instruction on morals and moral behavior in the schools, according to the latest Gallup Poll.

The survey found that 79 percent of those interviewed supported the instruction, while 15 percent were opposed. To the question, "Would you favor or oppose instruction in with morals and moral be-havior," 84 percent of parents with children io public schools favored the instruction, while 12 percent were opposed. Eighty-five percent of parents with children in parochial schools supported it, with 13 percent opposed. Two-thirds of those inter-viewed also believed that people today do not lead lives that are as honest and moral as the lives of people io the past.

To the question, "Do you think people in general today lead as good lives—honest and moral-as they used to," 66 percent said no and 30 percent said yes.

The proportion of negative responses has increased 14 per-centage points since 1965 when the same question was asked and 52 percent said no while 39 percent said yes. In 1952. opinion was about evenly divided with 47 perceot saying that morality was declining and 46 saying it was not.

The survey was based oo per-sonal ioterviews with 1,538 adults, aged 18 and over, conducted in more than 300 selected localities throughout the natioo during the period Jan. 23 to Jan. 26.

Rhodesia is Doubling Taxes On Liquor and Cigarettes

SALISBURY Rhodesia, April 7 (UPI)—Rhodesia has doubled general sales tax imposed only three days earlier and raised excise taxes on liquor and cigarettes to raise oew defense funds to counter mountng black oationalist insurgency.

David Smith, Finance Minis ter in the white-minority government, said the new taxes were expected to produce about $97 millioo, most of it ear-marked for military equipment and salaries for an enlarged regular and part-time army. Rhodesia has already speot nearly $100 million on defeose this year to cope with guerrilla raids across the eastern border from Mozambique. The guer rillas belong to the militant wing of the African National Council.

Mr. Smith said taxes would be raised on beer, clgarettes and hard liquor. He said the 5 SPRINGFIELD, Mass., April percent general sales tax would

President Suleiman Francieh of Lebanon was reported yesterday to have signed a constitutional amendment, adopted a week ago, that would permit the election of a new head of state and the opening of a possible way to eod the Lebanese Civil war. Prime Minister Rashid Karami, the radio station of the right-wing Phalangist Party and the Beirut radin all said that Mr. Franjieh bad signed the document, but there remained doubt that he had done so, [Page 1, Column B.]

Yeh Chien-ying, one of China's secior statesmen and a leading member of the socalled moderate faction, no longer bolds his iob as Minister of Defense, the Peking radio disclosed without giving an explanation. Reports had circulated among diplomats in Hong Kong for weeks that Mr. Yeb had resigned in protest over the campaign conducted against the former snior Deputy Prime Minister, Teng Hsiao-ping, and others described as rightists. Early next month, a negotiating team of West German, and Iranian atomic-energy specialists will meet in Teheran to discuss a question that is likely to be a point of conflict for decades between the United States, its European ailies and the developing countries. The question is whether in-dustrialized countries like West Germany should share with third-world countries like Iran the nuclear science and techniques that could be used for nuclear weapons. Iran wants ouclear technology, not just one or two atomic reactors to generate electricity, but the whole range of equipment, scientific techniques and nuclear knowledge needed to realize Shah Mobammed Riza Pahlevi's plans to make his country a major industriai power. Prime Minister Constantine Carmanlis of Greece proposed a conaggression pact with Turkey and peaceful settlement of the disputes between the two countries. He also proposed in a Parliamentary debate, in which be briefed deputies on a defense agreement signed with the United States last Thursday. that Greece and Turkey should end their arms race. Leaders of the United Rubber Workers voted to give Peter Bommarito, the union's ioternational president, the authority to call a strike against the four major rubber companies when contracts expire at 12:01 A.M. Wednesday. About 70.000 workers are affected by the strike threat. [1:1.]

The state legislative committees that write California's tax laws are studying ways to cut taxes. One proposal would give homeowners a $100 tax deduction for planting a tree, another would end sales taxes on medical prosthetic devices and another would end state income taxes for families with incomes of less than $100,000 a year. California has joined most other states in holding the line QUOTATION OF THE DAY: "Hot! With record-breaking high temperatures..."-Recorded weather report on WE 6-1212, [36:1.]

on taxes. Some are reducing them. Legislative leaders interviewed in 14 states attributed the easing of atate taxes to an improvement in the economy and grassroots reports that their constituents will not stand for the government taking more of their dis-posable income. Only 12 of 43 state legis latures that are meeting this year have proposed tax increases, according to the Tax Foundation Inc. [1:2-3.]

The Central Intelligence Agency has disclosed that it had rejected more than 60 percent of its prospective employees from 1963 to mid-1974 on the basis of polygraph-lie; detector tests. Representative Bella S. Abzug made public statements that she had received from the C.L.A., the Defense and Treasury Departments, the Federal Reserve Board and the United States Postal Service upbolding the use of polygraphs for various purposes. But Mrs. Abzug said "the polygraph cannot distinguish truth from false." bood," and she announced that she had introduced a bill that would make it a criminal, offeose to give polygraph tests in connection with Federal employment interviews or interstate-commerce activities. Jimmy Carter put his Democratic rivals at a disadvantage in the crucial Pennsylvania primary campaign by raising enough-money for a fairly intensive television and radio advertising campaign in the state. Carter-for-President commercials started on television stations in Pittsburgh Friday night. By tomorrow they will be on the air in each of Pennsylvania's five TV markets, aoda heavy campaign of Carter radio commer-cials is expected to begin Tuesday. Senator-Henry M. Hospital officials said that a five-day sit-in at Fordham Hospital io the Bronx by community residents seeking to prevent the hospital's closing in June might bring about an even earlier closing because most nurses are: not reporting for work. On the day shift yesterday, 16 of 26 ourses called in sick in an apparent protest over the sit-in, but they may have had another reason, the officials the protest leaders said. The nurses reportedly want to be transferred to the North Central Bronx Hospital, which is scheduled. to be open in June, rather than be dispersed throughout the city's hospital ssytem when Fordham closes. BILL WOULD SHIFT CITY INSPECTIONS

Check on Buildings Would Be Done by Private Architects

By GLENN FOWLER

Beame administration officials began a drive last week to win passage in the City Council of a bill that would permit licensed architects and engineers to perform much of the inspection work on new building projects now done by city employees. December in the wake of a bribery scandal that has resulted so far in indictments of 124 persons, half of them city inspectors and the rest members of the private construction industry.

A pattern of widespread payoffs was disclosed, most of the corruption stemming from efforts by contractors on major building projects to expedite the numerous inspections for compliance with the city's building code that are required during construction.

At a public hearing on the bill last month, objections were raised by some members of the architectural and engineering professions, which would have the responsibility of mak-ing the inspections under the alternative procedure to the present one that mandates use of Buildings Department per-

Councilman Barry Salman, Democrat-Liberal of the Bronx and chairman of the housing and buildings committee, said several members were con-several members were con-cerned about the penalty provi-sions of the bill, which would authorize private inspection on new buildings 15 stories or more in feight, apartment houses having 42 or more dwelling units, and alterations costing more than $150,000.

As the bill is now written, private architects and en-gineers who would inspect work done on their own projects would be held crimi-nally liable for improper certifi-cation of faulty construction. They would also lack the pro-tection that city inspectors rection that city inspectors have through insurance coverage held by the city against civil damage suits.

Both Mr. Salman and the city's Investigation Commissioner, Nicholas Scoppetta, oe-lieve that the bill could be amended to satisfy its critics on this point. Corporation Counsel Bernard W. Richland is presently studying the legality of an arrangement that would give the inspecting professionals a form of quasi-official status in acting for the Buildings Commissioner Jeremish T. Waish believes that the private inspection plan would not only lessen the opportunity for corruption but would also free a substantial portion of his reduced force of city inspectors to deal with other phases of the department's work load.

"We could do a lot faster iob on complaints of building."

job on complaints of building violations in existing struc-tures," he said last week, explaining that inspection of new construction projects, even before the present downturn in Emiding activity, constituted only 25 percent of the depart-ment's inspection load.

With private inspections. Mr. Waish said, most certifications would be made by the architect or engineer employed on the price itself. At present these professionals are required un-der terms of their licenses to certify compliance with regulations: the proposed law would merely have such certification satisfy the requirements of the Building Code as well.

Mr. Walsh pointed out that reif-inspection could end con-scruction delays caused by waits owing to the heavy backlogs facing city inspectors.
Mr. Walsh, whose department has only 180 inspectors now compared with a force of 400] three years ago, denied that there would be an increased risk of improper or unsafe work being certified by architects or engineers inspecting their own projects.

"It isn't a safety question," he said. "The architects and engineers who design and supentise construction work have to see that building-code stand-ards are observed. They're better qualified on technicalities than the building inspector

Even without priminal penalties, which in the bill as now written acply to false certifica-tion or interference or any test or inspection report. Mr. Waish and Mr. Scoppetta believe that private inspection would safe-

"Wo'd still have sanctions scalnst willful mirrepresenta-tion." Mr. Scoppetta said.

We'd be able to take away the right to make future certifi-cations and we could get an offender's professional license-revoked. This would deprive him of his livelinood."

Mr. Scoppetta issued a prog-ress report on the bribery-prosecutions, Of the 133 indict-ments handed up so far in menus handed up so far in a two-year investigation, 124 persons have been ordered to trial.

Shirley MacLaine—Back In Her Dancing Shoes

The Film That Orson Welles Has Been Finishing for Six Years

By CHARLES HIGHAM

"It was an extraordinary experience being in the des-ert with Orson," recalls ac-tress Susan Strasberg. "It was like being adrift with a Great White Whale. He would stand there, in a great flowing white caftan, roaring at everyone. Ooce, when the cameraman set up the lights and asked him what he want-

For the past six and a half years, Orson Welles, the man who gave us "Citizen Kane" - arguably the greatest American movie, has been rosring, in the sands of Arizona and in some of the more remote regions of Hollywood, trying in his inimitable fashion to wind up a movie called "The Other Side of the Wind." According to Welles himself, "the principal photography" is now completed and continued delay is brought about only because bis investors are withholding the funds occessary to underwrite the cost of "e and why should it be so many years in the making? The first question is perhaps the easier one to answer.

"The Other Side of the Wind" -financed by Iranian, French and German money and shot in secrecy by a non-union crew headed by cameraman Gary Graver, whose special-ty is pornography—centers on an eccentric movie director camed Jake Hannaford, a feroclously macho cross between Ernest Hemingwey and John Ford, Hannaford, played by John Huston, returns from a lengthy European exile to make a Hollywood movie which will show that be can be as relentlessly hip as anyone else in town. Director Hannaford is himself gradually exposed as whose inability to express himself sexually, coupled with his failure to cope with contemporary Hollywood, drives him to e highly theatrical smcide.

Welles becomes somewhat evasive when asked to discuss the significance of this story or the theme of the picture, but says "It is, we hope, a biggie. It's the result of many years of thinking about many things. It also has some superb performances in it.

Bergman Explores The Terrors Of Blandness

here is no war. No foreign troops are massed on the border making threatening gestures. Everyone has enough to eat. Unemployment and discrimination on the basis of race or class are unknown. Something very nearly like the perfect state has been achieved. Yet not loog ago the representatives of this perfect state swooped down on lngmar Bergman, while he was in a theater rehearsing a new play, and carried him off under guard to question him at length about charges that he had defrauced the state of tax monies due. It was froutpage oews in Stockholm, and here too for a while. Shortly before the charges egainst Bergman were dropped Bernard Weinraub, The Times correspondent in London, reported from Stockholm that as much as anything else, many Swedes resented Bergman's talent. He was considered to have gotten too big for his britches. Bergman, the internationally acclaimed filmmaker, had somehow spoiled Swedish symmetry by being a large lump in e flat landscape, by being recognized, critically and financially, for his genius, and genius is something they don't dispense in government-run clinics. It was es if the Swedish national organism automatically was trying to reject him. The aberration had to be excised. It was a barrowing story, and as much a Bergman story as his new film, "Face to Face," which is about phantoms that come out of the night and almost destroy a woman who is described as a model of mental health. The woman is a closer of doors that have been left ajar. She puts great store by neatness and order and would, if asked, probably tell you that she is as happy as she could ever bope to be in her marriage and in her career (she is e successful psychiatrist). It might not be too much to suggest that the state of nearly perfect-control over exterior matters achieved by Dr. Jenny Isaksson (Liv Ullmann) in "Face to Face" is a little like Sweden's. But such perfection, once achieved, demands resources for its successful maintenance that Jenny doesn't have. The interior Jenny is chaos. The overwhelming urge is toward self-destruction. 1 don't mean to say that "Face to Face" is an intentional metaphor for Sweden; only that one of the reasons that this Bergmen film speaks to us so forcefully is because it is so Swedish. The bland efficiency of the society in which it is set dramatizes the magnitude of the emotional terrors that cause Jenny's breakdown. R isolates those terrors so that they may be seen es what they are. In an American film set in New York or Chicago or Seattle, such a breakdown might conceivably be the result of as many different kinds of exterior pressures

PRINCELY PRODUCTION-The Royal Shakespeare Company's "Henry V," star-ring Alan Howard, begins a three-week engagement Wednesday at the Brooklyn Academy. When the play ran last summer in Stratford-on-Avan, Mel Gussow was on hand to report "Alan Howard gives a titanic king-size portrayal in the title role."

As an addendum, RSC will give two matinde performances (May 1 and 8) of The Hollow Crown," an anthology music, poetry and other writings by and about the kings and queens of England.

EASTER SUNDAY MUSIC-Even before the baked ham with blackberry sauce is spread out on the dinner table, the feast day may be enriched by a musical offering in any one of a number of churches. For example: At Fifth Avenue Presbyterian, baritons Richard Anderson will join with the church chorale in Vanghan Williams's "Five Mystical Songs." The Williams work will be preceded by a Bach and Franck recital by organist Donglas Kelletz At Holy Trinity Lutheran Church, Bach's "Easter Orstocio" will be performed by soloists, choir and orchestra. Riverside Church will repeat its traditional aftermoon service of music for voice and organ (Louise Natale and Frederick Swann), in a program which includes the cantata "The Way to Emmans" by Jacomir Weinberger. St. Bartholomew's will conclude its "Great Music" series with Dyprak's "Te Deum," with choir and guest soloists. And during the afternoon St. Thomas will hold "A Festival of Easter Allelujas," Gallery has put together a decidedly non-serious show of postcards (petites objets d'art) which Charles Heuri Ford has been saying since the 30's. Ford (no relation to Henry) is a poet who was editor of Viaw (an arts magazine published in New York in the 40's) and numbered New rock in the 40's) and numbered among his friends, well, just about every-body. The senders of the cards include Gertrude Stain who wrote in miniscule script on the back of a portrait of Brillat-Saverin, "You seemed happy which is always something, anything is something so do have more of the same." John Leanon and Yoko Ono weigh in with: "Sorry that we missed high tas, i" had a fever in the stomach..." John & Yoko."

ARTISTS READ POEIRY-Class Olden-burg, Joe Brainard and Larry Rivers, hitherto known for their achievements in the visual arts, have decided to have a go at reading their own poetry. They emerge from the closet tomorrow evening at the Museum of Modern Art. Although Brainard has published some of his verse, the others have not and the readings in general will probably reflect a non-traditional concept

FUGARD FILM—The Film Forum, showcese theater for independently made films, will present for the next two weekends a screen sdaptation of the play "Boesman and Lena" by Athol Fugard, the white South African who recently stunned Broadway audiences with his "The Island" and "Sizwe Banzi Is Dead." The filmed work deals with a comple of vagabonds ("white man's rubbish," in Bossman's drunken outburst) on the move from one South African shanty town to the next.

-it's really more a case of "meeting cute" than surrendering to an indictable lust—the strongest sense one takes from the initial meeting is that of a positively chaste sbyness. Troilus, played by a strapping Dan Hamilton, confesses to the whirl his head is in ("I am giddy") by standing utterly rigid, frozen to that stoniness that overtakes teen-age boys at their first proms. And Pandarus must ask Cressida "What needs you blush?" as he draws her reluctantly, but appelizingly, to the confrontation. At ooce Troilus is speaking of the "purity" of his love, of its "simplicity," and there is nothing in his conduct to suggest that he is baving the girl on. On the contrary, as the two are finally urged to the chamber that awaits them, they seem a davelike, decent pair (with, subliminally, a few reservations about her). Beside them, Romeo and Juliet would look like a pair of oversexed roughnecks.

When they emerge from their encounter, they do so as babes fresh to the morning dew, tender tots in the gossamer robes of their rites, utter innocents. The idyll is of course short-lived; even now Cressida's father is hargaining her away in exchange for Greek-held prisoners. But while it lasts its tone is lyrical, and Troy is otherwise equally blessed. You'd surely think, in a play meant to take a jaundiced view of matters martial and amatory, that Helen-who brought the whole Trojan business on by ber unseemly behavior-would be treated as a bit of a trollop,

Nothing of the sort. On a recent afternoon, Miss MacLaine sat cross-legged at the living room coffee table of her borrowed Las Vegas house, eating breakfast and talking about the origins of her show. "After working in the Mc-

Govern campaign," she recalled, "I took a trip across America by car. I'd seen a lot of other countries, but that was the first time I'd really seen America. What I saw was a lot of disillusionment, mistrust and despair. I got back to Los Angeles, looked at myself in the mirror and saw the same thing. I'd gained 30 pounds, let my hair go, and looked awful." Her post-election depression deepened. Then, she said, "I decided to do something about it. The first thing I did was to go China. The second thing was to put together my show." Her trip to mainland China in 1973 renewed her sense of optimism and her urge to return to the work sne knew best. In "You Can Get There from Here," the book she wrote about her experience, she described China as "a nation that forces you to face yourselr." Arriving home, she realized that "I eaters around the world could dance. I could sing. I could make people laugh. I could make people cry. I don't believe in sayings like 'Nn laughter until after the revolution."

Obviously, Miss MacLaine hasn't lost interest in politics. However, she doesn't do any really intensive politicking in her show. Who knows if people in the arts can really change other people politically?" she asks. "I wanted to believe in something. That's why'I gave up those years to politics. I don't regret one chocolate - chip - ridden day." She would, the says, do it again, but differently: "When was working in politics, I shouldn't have turned down all those movies. A Connecticut Playhouse With That Broadway Touch

By PETER GARDNER

EAST HADDAM, CORN. A lovingly restored actique playhouse here on the banks of the Connecticut River has become an important source of material for the Broadway musical theater. The Goodspeed Opera Hnuse, nnce regarded primarily as a tourist attraction high on nostalgic appeal, has now been both birthplace and incubator for three solid commercial successes on Broadway. The Goodspeed's first big hit, the 1965 musical "Man of La Mancha," might have been regarded as a fluke, a lucky roll of the show-business dice. But in the past twn seasons, the Goodspeed bas sent to Broadway "Shenandoah" and "Very Good Eddie," both of which are still doing well. Two consecutive hit musicals indicate that the Goodspeed is doing somethiog right.

Surprising, then, to hear Michael Price, the Goodspeed's executive director since 1968, declare, "We are not producing for Broadway." In a recent interview in the rococo splendor of his Goodspeed headquarters. Price went on to explain the apparent contradiction. "It took us a long time to decide who and what we were," he said. "If any of our shows go on to fame and fortune in the big city we're delighted, but what we bave developed here is a proprietary kind of theater with three aims: satisfying our patrons, maintaining America's musical heritage—and pleasing ourselves."

"The musical is probably America's nob indigenous performing art," he continued, "I saw in the Goodspeed an excellent opportunity to create a theater devoted exclusively to preserving and carrying on that tradition, and so in 1970 or thereabouts I began to liev the theater to that format." Price applies three criteria when deciding which viotage musicals to revive at the Goodspeed: They should have inherent worth, they should have con-

sical tradition, and they should be shows that are not normally done by other theaters. I'd have no interest in doing 'Oklahoma!' or 'The Sound of Music, for example. We look for worthwhile vintage pieces, like Very Good Eddie,' which we perform to keep them alive. And we try to do one new show, like 'Sbenandoah,' each season, which I choose from among the 50 or so scripts that land nn my desk every

"Very Good Eddie," the Goodspeed's most recent contribution to Broadway, typifies its approach tn revivals. The Jerome Kero-Guy Bolton musical dates from 1915. What made Price choose this period piece, which Walter Kerr, among others, bailed for its charm? "I very much wanted to do one of the musicals Kern did at the old Princess Theater, because they did so much to set the American musical on its people are looking for enter-tainment," he said. "We offer them, in shows like 'Eddie' and 'Shenandoah,' a lift of some kind. We offer them, if we can, 180 minutes of euphoria, and this place provides nne hell of an ambience for the kind of theater we like to do." For the authors of a new show, the Goodspeed also provides a wellequipped theatrical laboratory where, at relatively low cast, their offspring can be tested in a congenial atmns-

The Opera House itself, a gem of sturdy Victoriana, stands on a ledge beside the Connecticut River, six stories high on the river side, four in front. It was built by steamboat entrepreneur and theater buff William Goodspeed in 1876, a time when East Haddam was a thriving resort nn the steamer run between Hartford and New York. The difference is largely made up by dooations, although additional help comes from royalties when a Goodspeed production is transferred to Broadway.

"We've trained a whole new breed of andience," said Price. 'Ninety-nine percent of our people are in their seats when the overture starts, and they all stay until the bouselights come up, when the orchestra plays them out." He himself stands at the bottom of the stairs end says goodbye to them. Price's enthuslasm seems to be shared by other members of the Goodspeed's staff and by its mostly youthful actors, many of whom come back to East Haddam year after year despite more lucrative opportunities elsewhere.

To tide it over the winter months, the Goodspeed puts on a program of travelogues. Meanwhile, its regular season empands every year. In 1970, for example, the season ran fnr nnly 10 weeks. The season now is 21 weeks, with room for extensions (depending nn how a particular show is doing) that can bring the total close to 30 weeks. The Goodspeed Foundation, whose membership has risen from 800 to 3,000 in five years. has plans to create an experimental theater as well.

Fnr the upcoming season, Price is contemplating revivals of the 1925 Rodgers and Hart musical, "Dearest Enemy," an operetta-like treetment of a Revolutionary Wer story, and "Going Up." a 1917 musical about aviation, hy Otto Harbach and Louis Hirsch. His new show likely to be "Annie." a Charles Strouse musical Frse' on the "Little Orphan Ann'e" comic strip. Goodspeed's next contribution to Broadway may be "Some-thing's Afoot," a musical whodunit first staged at East Haddem two summers ego. the show arrives in New Yerk io May, as it is currently scheduled to do, and gives Goodspeed a trio of simultaneous successes, even Price might have to concede that his picturesque old theater reer's to be moving closer. to Broadway every year.

"We don't kid around with them or add material of our own, If we do interpolate a number, it's because it fits in with the style and period of the piece. so the total effect is cohesive." As examples of "camped" revivals, Price cites the recent Broadway productions of "Irene" and "Good News." "The people who revived those shows filled them with popular songs that weren't in the productions. They showed no respect for the h' slc property as it existed," he observed.

Although it gets some help from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Concecticut Commission on the Arts, the Goodspeed's main support comes from the public. It costs the theater thout $75,000 to put en a show, according to Price, and bout $23.000 a week to keep

By JOHN ROCKWELL

The Grand Union, the sixyear-old improvisatory dance/ theater collective that will appear at the La Mama Annex from Thursday through Sunday, is generally thought of as a totally free, let-it-allhang-out assortment of post-1960's artistic anarchists. But in fact this is a group of experienced performers whose success at pure improvisation derives from their training and rehearsals.

The Grand Union is considered by such critics as Marcia B. Siegel and Deborah Jowitt to be the most striking improvisational troupe around. The company, which has e cult following in New York. played to sold-out houses at its La Mama performances last spring. People came back night after night, expecting and getting something new each time and following the permutations of the performers as if they were characters in an ongoing play.

A typical Grand Union performance-insofar as any of the group's efforts can be called typical—begins with some or all of the five or six or seven people who are participating thet night straggling out into the space usually an open area with the audience sitting in fulding chairs or on the floor. Somebody — Steve Paxton, perhaps, nr maybe David Gordon or Douglas Dunn or Barbara Dilley-will initiate an ection. That action may sometimes be a recognizable style of dance, but it is more likely to be natural movement. Or it may be a spoken sentence or some action built around a prop nr costume that the individual has decided to bring along for the evening, there has been a tendency toward more verbal and theatrical material in re-

opening action, whatever it is, will eventually elicit a response from one or more of the performers. That response will trigger responses from the nthers, and everyone is drawn into the game for a while. Over the course of the two hours or so of an evening's performance, the action waxes and wanes, smoothly or abruptly, sometimes going on in two or three separate areas of the space, shifting from silent movement to accompanied movement (if somebody decides to bring along a record player or make sounds of his own) to theater to poetry to motionless meditation. Sometimes the action is frenetic: snmetimes it's so private and limp as to be withnut any obvious interest at all. Finally, one of the performers decides be has had enough and drops out. Which may or may not mean that the rest quit.

Is this art, one might wonder? And if it is, can't anybody do it? What makes the Grand Union special? Tha answer to the first questinn is that groups just like this one bave been attempting to bring down the boundaries between art and life. The answers to the second and third questions go to the core of what it takes to improvise successfully. The members of tha Grand Union are veteran dancers in their mid to late 30's who bave worked for years to develop just the sort of discipline and sensitivity that makes for successful improvisation.

The whole notion of the Grand Union's "freedom" needs careful qualification. This is not a flower-child inve-feast, with any and all invited to come out of the audience and join the fun. In fact, occasinnal unsolicited volunteers are firmly dis-

nf the group, is eager to differentiate between casual improvisation and what the Grand Union does. "Most of the improvisation that I have seen done by people without experience is really boring," he says. "People associate a kind of lovey-dovey freeing of the self with improvisation. Whet I'd rather see is people whn bave absorbed various techniques as they bave grown and bave a kind of information behind them. That makes it possible to watch somenne who has a mind as well as a body.

Preparation for Grand

Union performances is a process aimed at "opening the senses, judgment, building trust," in dancer Steve Paxton's words, and it bas taken years to develop. For the La Mama performances, for instance, tha five Grand Union members who will participate won't simply rely on their past experience together. They will rehearse for two weekends and one weekday evening, working out improvisatory situations exactly as they would belore an audience. "In reality," explains Mr. Gordon, "rehearsal ls another performance, except that there's nobody there but us."

Improvisation was common in 1960's avant-garde dance, theater and music performances, but it was rarely sustained throughout a whole evening. Generally it was used by such satirical groups as the Second City or the Committee as a stunt in spontaneous skits on words or in situations suggested by the audience. Or it served as a loosening of inhibitious part of preparato with humerous dance end meater groups. Or it became part of an overall performance structure that was nonetheless rigidly maintained, as in the Living Theater, some experimental music and much "free" jazz. Or it was part of a carefully planned process of creation, the results of which then remained fixed from performance to performance, as in Merce Cunningham's use of John Cage's dicethrowing techniques in the plotting of some movement

When the Grand Union began in the fall of 1970, it consisted of nine people. Nearly all of them had studied or danced in the Cunningham company, and some bad worked with Ann Halprin, the San Francisco avant-gardist who pioneered the use of dance improvisation in the === 1950's and 1960's, The Grand Union grew out of Yvonne Rainer's company, which by 1970 had begun to call Itself the Cootinuous Project Altered Daily. Miss Rainer began to push her company in the direction of collectivity as part of a deliberate strategy of throwing the dancers back on their own resources.

The original intention of the Grand Union was to do collaborative choreography, and it was not until 1972 that the present purely improvisatory format finally evolved; "We were not comfortable performing each other's work," recalls Mr. Gordon, "but we were comfortable working together."

Miss Rainer was the bestknown name of the original nine, but she steadily submerged her own role into the collective, and eventually she dropped out entirely. Since then the core of the Grand Union has been six people: Mr. Paxton, Mr. Gordon, Mr. Dunn, Nancy Lewis, Miss Dilley and Trisha Brown, who recently withdrew because her own solo career is blooming.

Over the years, the Grand Union has affected individual dancers' work more then it has led to the establishment nf other improvisatory cnmpanies. There is at least one improvisatory dance-theater group, the Central Notion Company, that grew directly

"out of classes by the Union as a whole a Gordon and Miss Din particular at New Yor versity. And, says Mr don, whenever we've in residency for some students either come York or their work changes radically."

The Grand Union one of a kind not cause its members are and more experienced other improvisers. Union performers see have an innate theabi that laps over into the eryday lives, end it is intensity that Informs performances. As 1 Morris, the sculptor an former, once wrote Grand Union perform "Always srt but close to as much life in the possible; more life than thing else around that is

It has taken the Grand Union years to perfect its improvisations.

Hurok's Play-It-Safe Season

there are just so many ways that a supposed corpse can be partnered in the tomb scene of "Romeo and Juliet." Fortunately, Hurok is sparing audiences from an entire season of assured favorites. The Danish Ballet will offer a number of American premieres in addition to its new "Romeo"-Flemming Flindt's "Four Seasons" and "Triumph of Death" and Bournnnville's "The Guards of Amager." The Royal Ballet will dance three new works - Frederick Ashton'a "A Month in the Country" and MacMillan's "Rituals" and "Elite Syncopa-Lons." But these ballets make up a small part of the company's repertory at the Met: they will be seen at only six out of 32 performances.

In the early days of dance in America, any of the fulllength classics was welcome, but this is no longer the case, especially when so many of the recent Hurok imports are both familiar and below former standards. Canadians' "Sleeping Beauty" nor the latest "Swan Lake" are what we bave come to expect from the Hurok label, and last year a special embargo ought to have been placed on the Canadians' "Coppélia," since New York had its own superior version in Balanchine's for the New York City Ballet. This season, the Danes will tion itself is unlikely to surprise as it has already been mounted by Erik Bruhn for both the Canadians and Bailet Theater. From the Royal Ballet's considerable Ashton repertory, we are likewise to get a pair of the "safe" ballets - the popular "La Filla Mal Gardée" and "The Dream," already well known from previous Royal Ballet performances as well as those by our own Joffrey Ballet. Much of the programming this season carries on the tradition of Hurok's ballet marketing formula, which heavily promntes full-evening spec tacles. The result is often a maximum of pageantry and plot and a minimum of dancing. Of the Royal Ballet's 32 performances, two-thirds fall into this category: eight "Romeo and Juliets," nine 'Swan Lakes" and four 'Manons''-a Kenneth Mac-Millan ballet that was disliked by critics when it was premiered at the Met two years ago. "Manon" typifies a fairly recent Hurok box-office commodity - the lavish, full-evening contemporary ballet based on a familiar opera, play or film. Hurok has brought a number of such attractions to New York in the past few years: the Royal Ballet's "Anastasia," the Bolshoi's "Spartacus" and "Ivan the Terrible," the Stuttgart's "Eugene Onegin," "Carmen" and 'The Taming of the Shrew," and now the Australians' "The Merry Widow." Most of these have been disappointing attempts do "La Sylphide" in the Bour- to render in dance the elabononville style for which they rate plots of classics which are famous, but the product found a definitive form in their original medium. Watcbing them is a bigh price to pay for the privilege of telling friends "No, but I've seen the ballet."

> Essential to the success of the Hurok repertory is the star system, which guarantees that a bandful of celebrated "guest artists" and well-known principals will take leading roles at virtually every perfomance. Certain seasons would be unthinkable without these stars: Rudolf Nurevev has always been the key to the Canadians' New York visits, as this year Margot Fonteyn is for the Australians. But even at the Royal Ballet stellar names like Merle Park and Anthony Dowell and the ubiqintous Nureyev and Natalia Makarova are sbuffled about to produce what seems like an infinite number of casting permutetions in what are in reality only a handful of Admittedly, for a large segment of the Hurok audience -those casual balletgoers who come once or twice a season-ballet means "Swan Laka" or "Romeo and Juliet." Plainly, there is also a sizable group of fans who are only too happy to see their favorites in this kind of repertory every night of the week. But for the growing numbers of those in between who love the classics and the stars and yet feel that their overexposure prevents other, less familiar works and dancers from getting a fair chance. the outlook is bleak.

One possible solution is a more equitable division of the season between the standard works and revivals of those rarely seen in New York. Instead of having the Danes, for example, in just tha third act of the Bournonville "Napoli," a work as representative of the Romantic ballet as "La Sylphide" and with a wbirlwind of virtuoso dancing, why not bavs the whole ballet? Instead of having the Canadians pre-dominantly in full-length ballets, why not present them in some unfamiliar Tudor or Balanchina works? Or why not present the Rnyal Ballet and its dancers in some of the works which form the backbone of its 20th-century repertory: Ashton's bracing 'Scenes de Ballet" to Stravinsky, or Bronislava Nijinska's revolutinnary Diaghilev ballets-"Les Biches" and ber masterpiece "Les Noces"? To criticize Hurok's pley-

it-safe policy is not to advocate a season without the great ballet classics. Rather, it is to suggest that, in a period of growing diversification among dance audiences, Hurok is underestimating its public in not offering more varied programs. Missing from the current Hurok organization, is the innovative spirit of the far-sighted Sol Hurok himself, who began to bring the great international ballet companies to New York almost three decades ago. Perbaps whet the Hurok organization needs is to summon some of its late founder's original adventure and energy to give us the kind of repertory that would honor both him and the audience he helped to create. DANCE VIEW

ne of the most widely quoted statistics of the so-called dance explosion is that for every person in the United States who bought a ticket for a professional dance performance in 1965 about 16 bought a ticket in 1975. The figure for 1976 is likely to be substantially larger. A lot of this vast increase in activity is accounted for by modern-dance performances. There are now 139 dance companies on the books of the National Endowment for the Arts, and the majority of those are modern-dance troopes. A rather smaller percentage of the increase is due to the larger audiences and greater number of performances being given by America's Big Three classic companies, New York City Ballet, American Ballet Theater and City Center Joffrey Ballet, and by foreign touring companies, as is witoessed by the Innger season the Hurok organization takes at the Metropolitan Opera House these days. Yet over and above all this, and vital to the entire picture, are the resident ballet companies across the country.

First let me explain what is meant by a resident ballet company as opposed to a regional ballet company. Briefly, and without total accuracy, a resident ballet company is professional and loosely the equivalent of a resident theater company, such as the Arena Stage in Washington or the Long Wharf Theater in New Haven. In contrast, a regional ballet company is essentially non-professional (although it may employ professional guest artists) and is roughly analogous to the admirable but amateur community-theater groups across the land.

Regional ballet companies are almost always derived from a local dancing school or, more rarely, an association of local dancing schools. The dancers are usually unpaid. they give performances in their boms area, and once a year may be selected by traveling judges to take part in an area festival. These help to give the movement focus and to maintain and even improve its standards of dancing and choreography, the latter being where the main deficiency exists. Such performances are community efforts and the results vary enormously; in most instances, they are more rewarding for the participants and their friends and relatives than they are for nutsiders. This is perfectly acceptable, and at a grass-roots level the regional ballet movement must be given part of the credit for the stimulation of dance interest across the nation. A little girl whn once took ballet lessons and appeared as a mouse in a local production of 'The Nutcracker," bowever good or terrible that production might have been, is likely to feel quite differently about dance for the rest of her life.

The resident ballets also vary in standards and experience. Some are of long standing and well-established, others are new and still atruggling. At least one, the Pennsylvania Ballet, is a major company of an international quality. It is perhaps the best resident company in this country; it is unmatched on the East Coast. In fairness, I have not yet seen two of the country's other major resident troupes, the San Francisco Ballet and Ballet West, based in Utah, both of which enjoy large and developing reputations. Recently, within the space of a week, by chance I saw three of these resident companies: the Pennsylvania Ballet, during one of its brief twice-yearly visits to the Brooklyn Academy of Music, and the Boston Ballet and the Milwaukee Ballet, both on their home turf. Looking at all three companies—and keeping in mind that the Milwaukee troupe is in an earlier stage of its development than the other two-I was struck afresh by the sheer quality of American dancing and particularly by the new-found ability of the male dancers. At one time, only the major companies could offer a semblance of quality in male dancing; luckily, this is no longer the case.

The Pennsylvania Ballet continues to be fascinating. Indeed, it is one of the most cohesive ensemble companies in the world. Its founder, Barbara Weisberger, and Its artistic director, Benjamin Harkarvy, have worked together to form a vibrant team of dancers, with no stars but with the entire unit exuding a soft, stellar glow. The company is still perhaps at its best in Balanchine-its Brooklyn performance of "The Four Temperaments" proved admirably temperamental but as smooth as a peach-yet it also has a decent choreographe in Mr. Harkarvy himself, whose tasteful piece of japonaiserie, "Continuum," was baving its local premiere, as well as a special relationship with one Europe's leading choreographers, Hans van Manen.

The Pennsylvaoia Ballet, in effect, syndicates van Manen. This Dutch choreographer, who is resident with the Netherlands National Ballet, works in Europe primarily with that company as well as Britain's Royal Bailet. But since the end of 1974, he has established an American outlet with the Pennsylvanians and bas now remounted five of his ballets for the Philadelphia-based company. The combination of van Manen and Harkarvy bas given the troupe a distinctive look, style and approach.

E. Virginia Williams Is one of the pioneers of American classic dance—a contribution recognized last Monday when she was one of the recipients of the current Dance magazine awards-and her Boston Ballet, which, like the Pennsylvanians, was much assisted at its birth e decade or ao ago by the interest of Balanchine and the award of an ongoing Ford Foundation grant, bas become a major force. Yet because it does not have a strong choreographic identity, it lacks the character and personality of the Philadelphia group. Last weekend at Boston's Music Hall it staged a new production of the Petipa/Tchaikovsky classic "The Sleeping Beauty," using the Peter Farmer sets and costumes that it had purchased from the now sadly defunct National Bailet of Washington

The project was an ambitious one. On a local level, it was clearly worthwhile; Boston audiences, starved of the big touring companies nowadays, bave very little chance to see the large-scale ballet specteculars. And in terms of the Boston dancers, including the apprentices that bad to be brought in to fill out the production, the challenge of this kind of experience is extremely valuable, as Ninette de Valois demonstrated when shs was building up the infant Royal Ballet in London before World War IL But I wonder whether a production at this level, worthy enough but less than magnificent, of this particular ballet is really justified.

Sara Caldwell with her Boston Opera seems to be more adroit, often carefully choosing ber operas from repertory where there are no comparisons possible with productions by other existing companies. For instance, the company had considered a revival of the full-length Darish classic 'Napoli" instead of "The Sleeping Beauty. This would have been more expensive in mount, would certainly have proved far less of a crowd pleaser, and might have been less pertinent to the needs of the Bostoo dancers and audience alike. But objectively it could have been the wiser choice.

In general, it seems that the Boston Ballet is aimed first at the conquest and then presumably the education of Boston (it does, incidentally, have a very adventurous new choreographers series, lest I have given the impression that the company is overly conservative) where the Pennsylvania Ballet is probably lonking more toward national and international recognition. Two approaches, possibly equally valid.

How about Milwaukee? It is a company with a har smaller budget than the other two, and although it is completely professional, it does not yet offer its dancers full union contracts. For the past two years, the director has been the French dancer and choreographer Jean Paul Comelin, and the company has found a permanent home in the very handsome Milwaukee Art Center. The dancers are excellent, nicely trained and beautifully presented: with his assistant, Marjorie Mussman, Comelin is developing a company that does have a certein character of its own. His rhepsodically dramatic version of Glazunov's "The Seasons" was rather too florid for delicate tastes; yet it had an energy that appears typical of this young and epparently emerging company.

'The suspense in 'The Sailor Who Fell From Grace With The Sea' is spun out on film like the strands of a spider's web, with an ending that really stings. It's mature, sophisticated erotica, combining healthy lust with undertones of psychological terror. Sarah Miles and Kris Kristofferson are a white hot romantic team."-Bruce Williamson, Playboy

"A work of art. Director Carlino has done an absolutely exquisite job...a story which lyrically combines romanticism with horror. Sarah Miles excels." - William Wolf, Cue Magazine

"The Sailor Who Fell From Grace With The Sea' is sure to raise a storm of controversy. Highly original, hardhitting film and uniquely frightening. The climax is brutally astounding and demoniacally haunting."

—Norma McLain Stoop, After Dark

'A powerful emotional background...an atmospheric triumph. A relationship that manages to be romantic and erotic. Sarah Miles is spectacular; she makes sensual yearning convincing both in itself and as standing for the whole range of human want"

-Richard Eder, New York Times

"A darkly chilling tale. Sarah Miles is a vibrant, but sexually repressed young widow. Breathtaking beauty and idyllic charm - lovingly photographed." -Kathleen Carroll, New York Daily News "Nudity abounds, but so does good tasteeven to a scene of masturbation, and shots of the boy peeping while his mother makes love. An overall sense of good taste and intelligence...the result is a picture of refinement and sensibility, a dark story that radiates with its own inner glow. Sarah Miles is superb."

Magnificent Brute:

Alan Hale. Big, ruddy, slobbish, bellicose, with a laugh as memorable as Edward Arnold's, he would have made at least a fair Falstaff or an altogether perfect father for Mickey Rooney's Studs Lonigan. But Warner Brothers did the next best thing by turning him, after his second Porthos, his third Little John, into a kind of brawling Babbitt who generally wore ill-used union suits, sagging suspenders and one sleevegarter. As of this writing. I'm still waiting to tire of seeing him spit into each palm, smash both fists down upon the nearest straw skimmer and stand back to back with Cagney ("Strawberry Blonde," 194I) and Flynn ("Gentleman Jim," 1942). And if I could I'd freeze each frame of his stamping dance with Stanwyck in "Stella Dallas" (1937) and move it into a museum. Barton MacLane. He started as e second banana in silents, made a so-so transi-

Then with "Black Fury" (1935) and "Ceiling Zero" (1936), he had his first good clear shots at whet critic Manny Parker calls "the mean, hrassy, clawlike soul of the lone American wolf." And for the next two decades, his catfooted hulk. Eskimo eyes and freezing shantytown tenor would be imposing them-selves on the pulpiest material, checking and balancing the high-styled histrionic conceits of Davis, Muni and Rohinson. To this day, Mac-Lane is so deeply embedded in my memory that I still expect to spot him some night on the 10 o'clock news; he'll be reaching out of a squad car toward the biggest apple in Henry Armetta's pushcart while Gabe Pressman needles him about alle-

Ward Bond. With his Merrie Melodies bulldog face and hrawn he was ideally suited to serve all those 25-year hitches in John Ford's cavalry. By my own private poll, though, Bond-buffs were happiest when he played cowgations of police corruption.

Yet in a movie era when performers seemed to expend 1,000 calories flaring a nostril, ber buzz-saw velocity was phenomenal and e little scary. It made Muni, in "Scarface" (1932) look positively lethargic as he punched her out, conked her with crockery and smashed her Russ Columbo records. Wantons were her specialty; she played them with the kind of down-home herky-Jerky "Tillie and Mac" book gusto the early Joan Crawford and the early-middle Bette Davis went after but never quite got. To her everlasting credit, she's the only actress who could convince me that she genuinely wanted a kiss from Warren William, Jodge for yourself what she wanted from Cagney in 'The Crowd Roars" (1932) and "G-Men"

Jane Bryan Like Margaret Sullavan, she had one of the very few snub-nosed, applecheeked faces that could from winsome to absolutely adorable without stopping first at cute. It was a powerful asset when she needed to mispronounce "minestrone" in Rose Stradner's kitchen and blush at the mention of "bambini," wheedle William Holden into working for peanuts et John Qualen's one-pump filling station and make Wayne Morris understand that even though their baby was due in October he might still give her bearhugs in March. And because Bryan may have just been the best young actress Warner Brothers ever misused, her sweet-tempered girls named Jo 'still strike me as tough-minded, muscular and earthbound. She didn't stay in movies long enough to give more than one sturning performance—as the doomed governess in "We Are Not Alone" (1939).

these people ended long ago, along with the studio system itself. Yet I did manage to pick out the late Allen Jenkins' face in the last few feet of Billy Wilder's 1974 remake of "Front Page." He was the telegrapher who wore a green eye shade and got to say "Okay," then "Right," then "Sure."

'Face to Face'

-is that future state in which all social ills have been cured. There are no political or social causes left, no excuses not to tend to the inner self. It's as if mankind had achieved the two-day week and didn't know what to do with the other five days. In an earlier era one might have spent a good deal of that time in church, on one's knees, going through rituals of atonement, supplication and thanksgiving. But now that that has been denied, what is left? The Volvo transports one to the country but not out of oneself.

On its surface "Face to Face" is the painful case history of Jenny Isaksson who, in early summer and at a time of apparent serenity, is suddenly overtaken by doubts and fears that she had thought she had success fully suppressed. Jenny's bushand is in Chicago attending a conference. She has taken a lover, whom we never see and whom she finds boring but necessary. While her new house is being completed, she moves in with her grandmother and grandfather who bad raised her as a child, after her parents were killed in an automobile

Once in their apartment, Jenny starts to come apart at the seams. Nightmares and waking hallucinations suggest that Jenny's self-assurance is desperation. Then one Sunday morning she calmly sits on the bed of her childhood and consumes the contents of an entire bottle of sleeping pills. The calm—the hravery—she shows is that of the child in the dark who does not cry out for help (as she says later) for fear no one will come.

The drugged dreams that follow-and that make up important sections of the film-spell out in literal detail Jenny's neuroses. In fact this case history is not as compelling as psychiatry as it is for what it represents, a person trying desperately to make contact with primal emotions that have been either ignored or hidden in order to create a character acceptable to the world. The shock is that Jenny, the most controlled of people, should have been able to fool herself so long but, ultimately, so ineffectually.

This theme is not new to Bergman. This process of self-discovery was an important aspect of "Scenes From A Marriage" as the wife, also played by Miss Ullmann, worked herself free from the character she had created, first for her mother and father and then for her husband, to realize herself. In "Face to Face," as in "Scenes From A Marriage," wa witness, in effect, the dispossessed in the act of repossessing.

"Face to Face" has an almost musical shape. The theme is stated, restated with variations, reversed and contradicted, and restated again in terms that have the air of reconciliation.

When we first meet Jenny's grandmother, she seems a handsome, loving, understanding old lady. In Jenny's dreams she is the tyrant who locked her in dark closets and imposed on her a sense of inhibiting propriety. In the last scene the old lady, out of our earshot, is gently tending Jenny's grandfather, a frightened, quarrelsome old man who says of his physical and mental decay, 'Tm so ashamed." Jenny watches the two old people together with infinite sadness and something that passes for a new understanding about human relationships, and about love. It's among the most beautiful and affecting scenes Bergman has ever filmed.

Miss Ullmann gives a triumphant performance in what must be one of the greatest roles Bergman has ever written for e women. Like the film itself, which has such a sense of the sound, light, texture and even the smell of things, the performance is virtually tactile, having about it the kind of excitement one usually experiences only in the theater. Toward the end of the film Jenny buddles against a wall of ber bospital room, wearing a hospital gown and white wool socks, her hair matted with sweat, and relives a childhood trauma in her own voice and that of ber grandmother. In this scene, more than in any of the dreams, Bergman creates a stunning picture not only of personal anxiety but also of the fury that may exist just below the surface of any perfect state.

John Huston gives one of the best performances I've ever seen on the screen. When I get to the Heavenly Gates, if I'm allowed in, it will be becanse I cast the best part I ever could beve played myself with John Huston, He's better than I would have been-and I would have been

Huston, along with other members of the cast of ."The Other Side of the Wind," has been extraordinarily game, having spent weeks in such unlikely locations as Carefree, Arizona, going slowly but cheerfully mad under the pressure the director imposes on them. Mercedes McCambridge, remembered for her vivid performance as the sadistic leader of a band of motorcyclists in Welles' "Touch of Evil," plays Hannaford's secretary.

Norman Foster, co-director with Welles of "Journey Into Fear" and the unfinished "My Friend Bonito," plays Hannaford's stooge. Peter Bogdanowich, a Welles protege in real life, plays a director who does imitations. Lilli Palmer, replacing Marlene Dietrich, is a society hostess and Susan Strasberg, replacing Jeanne Moreau, plays a character said to be patterned after critic Pauline Kael and directors Paul Mazursky and Curtis Harrington appear as themselves. Because of Welles's fanetical secrecy little has been written ebout "The Other Side of the Wind," not even the fact that nightcluh star Rich Little has been replaced in the cast by Peter Bogdanovich. But the following account of Little's withdrawa has been furnished by a reliable source. During the shooting of one scene, Mr. Little, Mercedes McCambridge and Norman Foster were told to teeter atop e tall building in Phoenix, Arizona. Little called down to yelled back. "But there are no midgets up bere!" Little replied.

"Orson, why are we swaying?" Because midgets have hold of your legs!" Welles

"I'm going to shoot the midgets in Spain!" Welles screamed. Rich Little left the picture at once.

Some of the people with whom Welles has come into conflict over the years may suffer a twinge of recognition when they see "The Other Side of the Wind." The film is said to contain something of a slap at Robert Evans. former head of Paramount. who refused to distribute Welles's earlier film, "F for Fake." In a scene which takes place in a studio projection room, Hannaford's stooge is showing the director's film to a movie mogul (bearing a not very flattering resemblance to Evans) who track!" flativ refuses to buy the film for distribution. How does the real Robert baving an ector impersonate him? "I wish I bad him playing me in my office," says some of my problems." As both the plot and dialogue have kept changing almost continually since 1970. some of the performers have had to cancel other assignments to rush to some distant spot to complete e sequence begun several years earlier. "Orson's like a painter," says Susan Strasberg- "He's creating on film. That's wby be takes years. He can't create somebody schedule."

She goes on: "There was a scene with a bus. At one point, the cameraman inside the moving bus could not avoid photographing a large red sign with e cross on it which loomed up. Somebody said, 'Let's cut that sign out, 'it doesn't fit into the story.' And Orson said, 'No, no, leave it in the shot. Pauline Kael will write paragraphs about the symbolism of that red cross!"

"We were all in a cramped five-room bouse in Carefree for 12 hours and more et e stretch, with Orson yelling 'Quieti' The people wbo drank turned to drink, and those of us who were compulsive talkers and were not allowed to talk turned to food. Bogdapovich was terrified of Orson. He brought an entire expensive wardrobe to play the part of the director and came out with one beautiful cashmere sweater after the other. Orson kept saving, 'My God! that's not whet a successful young director would wear.' Peter said. But these are my own clothes!' And Orson said, That's just what I mean!"

But, of course, the annals of moviemaking are filled with tales of extravagant temper tantnums and the stories one hears about Welles, even the unmistakahly apocryphal ones, cannot explain six and a half years of delay. Accordingly, one looks for other explanations.

The actress Jeanne Moreau says she thinks Welles is inbibited by a "fear of completion." She believes he is compulsivaly postponing the day when he will have to face the verdict of the critics. Miss Moreau has at least some hasis for judgment since she acted opposite eWiles in enother of his unfinished films,

"The Deep," "Years ago," she says, "he promised to send me air tickets to come from Paris to Rome to dub it. He never did. He is obviously scared to let it out. I still haven't done the [sound]

There are at least a couple of other films which Welles left unfinished. Years ago, he Ambersons" to fly to Rio to start shooting the carnival for "It's All True." And then there's the case of "Don Ouixote," begun in 1955 with the Mexican star Francisco Rieguera as Don Ouixote. Akim Tamiroff as Sancho Panza, and Patty Duke as an American teen-ager. Today, with the film still unfinished. the two male stars are dead and Miss Duke is well past ber teens.

Welles has even admited his hatred of finished movies in numerous Interviews. He once hid his face on the Dick Cavett show when a scene from one of his films was projected on a screen. Years ago, he also told a reporter for Sight and Sound be could not face up to seeing any of his movies because there was so much be wanted to change. Is the present delay with "The Other Side of the Wind" another illustration of e tragically self-destructive genius? Welles, himself, of course, heatedly - and eloquently -- denounces the no-

"Everywhere I go," explains, "I have to pass an examination about the Welles legend. People-especially film producers-don't want to be associated with messy things. I tell them and this is hard for people to understand - that the making of a motion picture is e very private affair until it is made public. Why should I have to answer all of these questions? I haven't committed e crime. I'm just e poor slob who's trying to make pictures.

"Nevertheless," be continues, "I can defend myself perfectly well. In the case of The Magnificent Ambersons." didn't leave the film. I was asked. Worl War Two had broken oot and I was entreated by Nelson Rockefeller, who was then head of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, to make a documentary about the carnival in Rio, for no pay, because it would belp in solidifying the unity of the Americans. "The Magnificent Ambersons" was completely shot at the time. And so I agreed to go to South America then on the condition that I would return if there should be any problem with the editing of the film. But RKO never lived up to the agreement. One bad preview of the film convinced RKO to ignore me."

"As for 'The Deep,'" be continued, "well, I'd prefer to let everybody speculate about 'The Deep'." A few minutes later Welles added: You have to understand this ture has no date. There's no reason to release it. The bold-up is entirely financial. The fact of the matter is the picture is five minntes short and so we need a prologue. And I need 150 G's or so to make that." A few minutes later Welles called back: There are two things I should add about 'The Deep.' First, the [investment] money was all mine, although there was a private investor who has been paid back by now. Second, 'The Deep' has been i delayed because it is really just e very frivolous piece of light entertainment. I haven't had a film on the screen for a long while and did not want to return to the screen with a trivial little thing like that. I want to make my return with The Other Side of the Wind '"

And what is really bolding up his current film? "It's purely financial. There's no question of the creative process involved here. If I would consent to the producer system, I could have been working steadily all of these years. I only made a film that way once, and it wasn't all that unhappy an experience. But I learned that perfect independence is what lights a candle in me. When I was talked into going to South America, that was what started these difficulties. I couldn't get a job for five years. Then I began to earn some money as an actor and used that to finance my own pictures. About the time of 'The Deep' the ax fell from Washington. They said I couldn't use the money I'd earned as an actor to prodoce my own films, I was effectively put out of business as a producer. And so, today I don't own 'The Other Side of the Wind' and can't control it. At my time in life, I can no langer run my own store and am et the mercy of whatever credit I can raise. I need more money to finish this film. It's as simple as that.

"In the last couple of weeks, however, the light is breaking through. I can't discuss the details because that would rock the boat. But I feel confident that the film will be released. And thenah then!-I finally wrote a script for a small movie which I can make the minute this one is finished."

Thrummers Who Survive in an Electric Era

By STEPHEN DAVIS

With the rise of the electric guitar as the major instrument in the rock arsenal, there seems to have been a corresponding decline in the number of ordinary guitarists who measure up to the lega-cy of Diango Reinhardt and Charlie Christian, those 30's pioneers of the guitar as a modern jazz instrument. Still among the handful of jazz guitarists currently performing and recording, at least two, Jim Hall and Raiph Towner do play unamplified music that carries on the improvisatory tradition of the pioneers while being innovative enough to capture a new generation of listeners.

Jim Hall's playing is marked by subtle harmonic interpolation, a superb rhythmic sense and an overriding delicacy. Although he has been building a reputation for 20 years as the reigning master of the jazz guitar (and is now ranked by many with Reinhardt and Christian), until recently Hall was known chiefly as a deft accompanist and partner for other musicians, most notably Sonny Rollins and pianist Bill Evans, with whom Hall made two striking albums in the 60's, "The Bridge" and 'Undercurrent," . In his early 40's Hall has only recently made the kind of records that establish him as a leader rather than ac-

Hall is a specialist in the gentler textures of jazzboth of these albums demonstrate his virtuosity but his technique never calls attention to itself.

"Concierto" boasts the allstar cast of Paul Desmond and Chet Baker on alto sax and trumpet, with Roland Hanna on piano, Ron Carter on bass and drummer Steve Gadd. Hall assembled a band that can attack a ballad with cool fury. "You'd Be So Nice To Come Home To" has Hall picking a handsome series of rhythmic chords under Desmond's dusky fills. After 20 years with Dave Brubeck, mond still maintains his remarkable tone, while Chet Baker continues to play his familiar bell-clear, typically dry horn lines.

Hall's "Two's Blues" again features chording behind the pairing of Desmond and Baker, as Hall echoes his bornmen's phrases with slight variations in his own parts. "The Answer Is Yes" is set off by a contrapuntal walking duet with Ron Carter (with whom Hall made a duet album two years ago) and gives the nimble Hanna chance to stretch out to luxuriant lengths.

The second side carries a reworking of Joaquin Rodri-"Concierto de Aran-

cunning and facile melodist, Towner plays his 12string instrument more with rhythm and tone in mind. And where Hall is basically an interpreter, Towner is making his reputation as a composer. He was trained in theory and composition at the University of Oregon and studied classical guitar in Vienna. He first gained attention as a member of Oregon, a quartet that specializes in a sort of spacey, Indo-jazz fusion music. But Towner's best efforts have come on two recent recordings for the German ECM label, one a duet album with vibist Gary Burton, the other leading a quartet of German. and Scandinavian jazzmen.

linearly complex, rhythmlcally intense. On stage, his pieces are neither in the neoverismo manner of Thomas Pasatieri, nor prope to theatrical hysteria like those of Alberto Ginastera, Although some of his operas have failed, most have held their own well. Indeed, "Six Characters In Search of an Author," which the New York Opera premiered in 1959, won a popular and critical acclaim that few equalled. Weisgall has been at work on "The Hundred Nights" for much of the last 18 months. It is closer in style to his chamber music of the past modern stage works have

8 years than it is to his earlier operas. He emphasized the point during a recent interview by playing excerpts from the opera, excerpts that promise a work of rich lyricism, and a sense of parody.

"I can't really say what the piece sounds like, but I've tried to do certain things that I hadn't done before. I was very interested in ensembles, for example, I also . wrote a lot of spectacular music and operatic dance music, both of which I bad never tried in my previous operas. The soloistic writing is old stuff for me, but I'd never done so much of it. There's a great deal of percussion in the score, and style: he didn't want 'Mikathough that's the only indica-

> The experience of "Nine Rivers," taught Weisgall certain lessons: "You learn not to put up with bad productions if you can possibly avoid them; except for the conductor, the people in charge of 'Nine Rivers' hadn't the faintest idea what was going on, though I can't slough off the ultimate responsibility. You learn that you sometimes have to listen to criticism; I'm still terribly much influenced by what people say, and I usually don't show anything to anyona until it's really quite safe and can't be hurt. And you learn not to write too much; I knew from the start that 'The Hundred Nights' was over-written, but a month ago I had an incredible session with my Juilliard conductor and stage director, in both of whom I have absolute confidence, and we just backed the thing apart; it was a real heart-wrencher." Such a "wrenching experience" is nothing new for the Czech-born composer who will be 64 this fall. He was raised in Baltimore, where his father, a cantor, had moved the family in 1920, and he began composing when he was 10. As a student, he was thrown out of the Peahody Iostitute of Music, despite his precocious gifts. As he remembers it, 'The director called me in one day and said, Hugo, you have no talent.' So, being a good Jewish hoy who always listened to his parents and especially his teachers, I took his advice. I simply stopped composing."

Weisgall went on to the Curtis Institute where ha worked with the late Fritz Reiner, and in the 1930's and 1940's he conducted orchestras extensively both here and abroad. After World War II, during which he served in Europe, he returned to Baltimore "and did vocal coaching for a buck and a quarter an hour. Why didn't I teach at Peabody? Peabody wouldn't have me!"

By this time Weisgall was again composing. "The Tenor," bis first mature opera (two bits of juvenilia are ignored) was premiered in 1950, and in 1952 "The Stronger" was heard. Then came "Six Characters," "Purgatory," "Athaliah," and 'Nine Rivers."

Perbaps becausa he has spent most of his professional life in writing works for the stage, Weisgall is acutely aware of the frustrations that face the contemporary composer of operas: the difficulty of getting works properly produced, the conservative stylistic constraints tacitly imposed by the popular audience, the timidity of most impresarios.

"There's really no such thing as an operatic life in this country. The pressures are such that it's practically impossible to get anything decent done. To throw together the 100th production of 'La Bobème' is not

"People have no idea of what standards are. Most of tha audience doesn't go to the opera for any illumination; I don't know what tha hell they go for. Certainly I like to be entertained, too. when I go to the theater, but I also like to come out feeling as if something has happened to me.

"And there's another thing. I think most of the people who run the companies have lost faith in the form as a viable theatrical experience. The question of quality is the most important consideration, yet that's the one thing most people don't care about. There have always been different forces that dominated the opera at any given time over the yearsmusic or drama or stagecraft -but there was a general faith that this kind of combination could really work. That faith is largely gone today. I think. Julius Rudel and the City Opera have lost it, the Met certainly doesn't pretend to have it, and I don't think the people in the provinces care; they haven't seen enough good opera to know how good opera can

To Weisgall's way of thinking, "It's not a question of style, but of standards. A composer like Pasatieri just pours out plain trash. But a conservative composer whom I admire tremendously is Dominick Argento. He's terribly conservative, but there's elegance and skill and incredible technique to his work. He has humor and sensibility, though musically it certainly isn't my cup of Weisgall is bemused by the current excavations that are dredging up musical trivia from Amarica'a past in the name of the Bicentennial. "It certainly shows a point of view, but it's a rather odd one, I must say. Why should we listen to all of those composers? If it's a question of reassessing the music, yes. But who actually is reassessing anything? Just listening to the music doesn't make it any better. We know that some of the stuff is competent, but it's competent, period. We're not about to discover that Horatio Parker is another Brahms or that MacDowell is another Dvorak. He just isn't; he's a boring composer.

"An awful lot of these outmoded people have been resuscitated, but I don't know on what theory, unless one changes one's esthetic point of view. It's true that a piece of primitive furniture or an incompetent painting is now regarded as valuable. but that entails a point of view that may apply to the visual arts-it simply doesn't work too well with music."

Having himself written scores that were judged to be somewhat less than celestial. Weisgall can conclude with authority that, "There's just no doubt-crude music sounds crude.".

HAROLD C. SCHONBERG

The Greatest Pianist of His Time

"Josef Hofmann's aristocracy, sensuous sound and technique were unforgettable." music. Hofmann understood the rhetoric better than anybody. Listen to the way he plays the Larghetto of Chopin's F minor Concerto—the purity of the line, the coruscating functional embellishments in the right hand, the pacings, the way he shapes the declamations of the middle section over the orchestral tremolo, the cootrol of dynamics that allows him to taper down to an all-passion-spent phrase before getting back to

Yet such authorities as the late Chopin expert Arthur Hedley, in England, were disturbed by Hofmann's playing in this very concerto. Hedley thought it anarchic Perhaps the trouble was that Hofmann's conception was so different from everybody else's that it sounded too much like a new work. The conception was different only in phrasing and dynamics. Hofmann seldom fooled around with the notes-much less, incidentally, than his best friend, Rachmaninoff. (Rachmaninoff told everybody that the greatest pianist in the world was Hofmann. Hofmann went around telling everybody that the greatest pianist in the world was Rachmaninoff.) If you follow this performance of the Chopin F minor with the score, you will find very little disagreement between Hofmann and the printed note. But the elegance and originality of the playing make the familiar music sound almost like a different concerto.

Hofmann died in 1957. He was not a happy man toward the end, and he had a drinking problem. He was at his beight from 1925 to 1940. One of the great thrills of concert going was to watch his entrance from the wings: that jaunty little man, exerting a palpable aura (my God! a pupil of Anton Rubinstein's!), striding briskly to the piano, seating himself, and noodling a few chords before beginning. Holmann, like others of his generation, would often modulate between pieces. (You can actually hear Hofmann do it on one of his recordings.) Once in a while Hofmann could be guilty of unusual behavior. At one concert, while storming through Chopin's F minor Fantasy, he abruptly stopped and left the stage. General heart failure from the audience. A technician came out and replaced a pedal rod. Hofmann returned, and did not start the Fantasy over. He resumed exactly where he had left off. Strange.

In 1937 Hofmann gave a Golden Jubilee at tha Metropolitan Opera. With the Curtis student orchestra conducted by Fritz Reiner (Hofmann was then the head of the Curtis Institute of Music), Holmann played the Rubinstein D minor Concerto and then his own "Chromaticon" for piano and orchestra. Then he played solos. Holmann arranged for a private recording of the cotire concert. Around 1955, Columbia Records brought out a disk containing the solo portion of the concert. I reviewed it, mentioning also the two works for piano and orchestra, and giving short shrift to the "Chromaticon." A week or so after the review appeared, my phone rang.

"How nice of you to remember Hofmann's playing," the lady's voice said. "We were so pleased. It is so good to know we are not forgotten." And so on for five minutes.

"Who is this?" I managed to get in, finally. "Why, Betty Hofmann." "Where are you phoning from?"

"Los Angeles." Betty Hofmann, Josef's wife, finally got around to the bone she wanted to pick with me.

"Why didn't you like the 'Chromaticon'?" she wanted to know. She thereupon spent 10 minutes giving me. an analysis. It used all 12 notes of the scale. It was highly advanced for its day. It was a masterpiece of piano writing. It was this and that.

"Yes, yes, ma'am," I weakly kept on saying. After a balf hour of this, Mrs., Holmann bung up, well satisfied with her day's work. Ten minutes later

This is Betty Hofmann again. I just wanted to tell you that I phoned Josef in Long Beach, and he told me to call you right back and tell you he agrees with you. The 'Chromaticon' is really a terrible piece of music."

Notes: 'Baby Doe' On TV-Live From The City Opera

By SHIRLEY FLEMING

The Ballad of Baby Doe" is telecast live from the New York State Theater this Wednesday (it starts at 8 P.M on WNET/Channel 13 and WOXR-FM in New York City), it will be the largest stereo simulcast ever engineered, reaching-via satellite-over 50 percent of the nation's TV-equipped households. Julius Rudel, director of the New York City Opera. makes a point of the fact that the production has not been altered in any way for the purposes of televising, and that the audience in the opera house on Wednesday day night will be undisturbed by the procedure. The business - as - usual approach is made possible by the use of specially developed lowlight-level cameras which require only one-seventh the amount of light necessary for good transmission.

"Baby Doe," which is based on the true story of a silvermining family in Colorado and was premiered in Central City in 1956, strikes Rudel as a "particularly fortunate choice" for televising. "It is based on American history, and it is in English. Mind you. I'm not getting on the Bicentennial bandwagon, but this is an appropriate work for this year not condescending or flag-waving."

The principal singers are Ruth Welting, Richard Fredricks and Frances Bible, Judith Somogi conducts, and Mr. Rudel will be on camera at intermission. There will be a repeat of the telecast, which is part of the threeyear Live from Lincoln Center" series, on Sunday, April 25, at 3:30. This project is partially funded by Exxon.

Poe's Opera

tor of Musical America.

When Douglas Moore's and this year he bas written an opera with similar undercurrents of madness and selfdestruction,"The Voyage of Edgar Allan Poe," commissioned by the University of Minnesota and scheduled for its premiere on the 24th of this month, represents to Argento not only a challenging musical idea—"I suppose I want it to be my 'Don Carlos,' a work I dearly love"but an effort to put Pos back in perspective, to restore him to dignity. "Poe was the first artist America produced who was taken seriously in Europe," Argento says. "It was a man named Rufus Griswold, who got himself appointed Poe's literary executor, who did everything he could to defame him. He is largely responsible for the picture we have of Poe-a drunk, a madman, a pervert. W. H. Auden wrote that he never encountered such a monumental hatred as the hatred of Griswold for Poe. Alten Tate has helped give an enlight-ened view of Poe-the fact that ha is a serious writer, not for boys around the "The Voyage" concerns the final mysterious week of Poe's life, when the writer boarded a steamer at Richmond bound for Baltimore. and was next found walking the streets of Baltimore, insane. The mystery in the situation appeals to Argento ("I was a cryrographer during the war, and my interests hoven't changed"), and he remarks that he is not the first composer to be attracted by Poe. "Debussy spent ten years working on an opera based on The Fall of the House of Usher,' and Ravel claimed that he learned about writing music from reading Poe's 'Philosophy of Composition." As for his own opera, Argento says, "It is a dream opera for me-dark, rich, romantic, melodramatic. thrilling. It's the most ambitious thing I've attempted." 🔳

Paris himself joins the game, as a good father should, and soon all settle peaceably on the sofa, the pyramid of little ones in their arms, as though to pose for a magazine photographer assigned to do a cover-story on The Family of the Year. Pandarus may turn up in the middle of the scene to ask "Is love a geoeration of vipers?," but he surely can't he thinking of this devoted couple, complete with brood.

Indeed, the only real trace of lasciviousness (I once had a teacher who insisted that the word ought to have been "lasciviciousness," with the extra syllable rolled lovingly on the toogue) that turns up on the Yale floorboards these nights is a passage io which Achilles comes close to raping Patroclus—on the floorboards during his non-fighting, tent-sulking period. The moment seems odd, and not just because Patroclus, a few lines later, expresses his fear of being thought effeminate the way things are going. It is simply singularly wanton in a production that, strangely, requires so little Parental

I can respect a director who doesn't leap at the license a play grants him, perhaps eveo demands; the atandard practice oowadays-when doing "Measure for Measure," say-is to go for the seaminess and forget that there may be one or two honest men about. There may even be a hint in yet another program note (Yale keeps us well supplied with reading material for intermissions) as to Mr. Epstein's root intentions. A paragraph from Northrop Frye concludes: "The play dramatizes not the loss of innocence but the sense of the infinite vuloerability of innocence, however little of it there is and wherever it is . . ." Now that's provocative, and it does help account if for the delicacy with which actual rather than verbal sex : is so often approached in the play, and for the honorable conduct that rears its head in battle among the most mean-spirited of contenders. A new way to look at the

on the other hand, overstressing "the vulnerability of innocence" turns the evening into a sort of Thersites sandwich. We spend most of our time looking at people who are behaving more or less well, straightforwardly if not altogether faultlessly. Some of the innocence is of the boorish sort, as in the Greek camp; a larger share is decidedly refloed, as in the Trojan, But all we ever hear about from the play's commentators, Thersites and to a degree Pandarus, is the woeful wickedness of the world and its ways. Shakespeare's satirical thrust, somewhat ambiguous at best, is pretty thoroughly blunted to the process and we wind up with a strangely sweet filling clamped between very tough crusts.

Shakespeare's fault? Mr. Epstein's? The 17th-century's? Ours? Everybody's and everything's probably. Some of the softness is director Epstein's; the six tykes who surround Helen and Paris would seem, so far as I can determine from a quick glance back at the text, to have been engendered io New Haven. And though the Yale company has given us a plain, followable reading, it hasn't done more than that; the level is academic stock-company, with some mumblers and some reasonably trenchant warriorlovers in the group.

But the uncrackable nut is still in Shakespeare's text. Was the playwright so irresistibly drawn to young love, whenever he came upon it, that he couldn't help making it endearing even when he meant to make it wrong-headed? He has a perfectly terrible time forcing himself to dislike Cressida. He has to whack her hard with the plot to tear her from Trollus's side, and even when she's begun to prove faithless you can feel him half-wishing to forgive her. After all, she's pretty helpiess in the situation, isn't she? Let clowns do the moralizing, as ecethingly as they wish; it's the vulnerability, to adopt Mr. Frye's word, that seems to make Shakespeare's pen flow,

And so we still don't know exactly what to do with "Troilus and Cressida," wise as we are in this 20th century. And so I have another few days to enjoy my perplexity, until "Secret Service" and "Boy Meets Girl" and that Monty Python bunch have driven it out of, or further addled, my head, were asked for. I think that Dick Gerdeau, who prodoced the 'pro' segment, and Jim Benjamin, who did the 'anti.' are both rather complemently convinced that they made the best case."

The only ground rules given to the two producers; Misa-Sanders continues, was that, while making the best case they could for each side, they had to deal fairly and skeptically with the often inflated and superheated assertious regularly invoked when the issue is discussed. Both Benjamin and Gerdeau favored stricter handgun controls at the start, As the senior man, Benjamin was given the choice at which side to take; he picked the anti-control side. "I don't own a. gun," he reports. "I haven't even fired one since I was in the Army. So it wasn't that I agreed with the arguments against gun control. It just struck me that it might be that side that needed telling."

Perhaps partly because of a lawyer-like need to

believa that his client is innocent and partly because of his research. Benjamin had a change of heart. There is no question, be concedes, that having 40 million pistols and revolvers in private hands—the generally accepted minimum estifired a gun io his life, was happy to be advocating the cause of stricter cootrols, and his research gave him no reason to change his views: "Everyplace I. weot people wanted me to take a couple shots. It was a great temptation to make like Clint Eastwood; but I resisted it. The main problem, and Jim told me be had the same one. was in turning down all the people who wanted to be interviewed on camera. There was a succession of offers to film Ramsey Clark, but I said 'no' because I thought his reputation, deserved or not, as an ultra-liberal would turn off a lot of viewers."

To bolster his case, Gerdeau sent his reporter, Brit Hume, to interview a lobbyist for the National Rifle Association, whose evident mania about "radical groups" . that want to disarm the American people. Gerdeau believed, would discredit those who oppose control

Gerdean also asked Howard K. Smith, who has delivered sharp commentaries on the ABC Evening News in favor of more strict controls to narrate the pro-control segment and present a personal editorial cooclusion. Benjamin chose John Scali, a former ambassador to the United Nations, to narrate the anti-control segment.

Both 'segments focus on Massachusetts, which already has a law on the books making the illegal possession of a handgun punishable by a mandatory sentence of a year of Investigation. in prison. The state will vote this fall in a referendum on whether or not to probibit the manufacture, sale or importation of such weapons. Against a visual background of blood running in the gutters, wailing sirens, bereaved relatives and the like, the point is made that the only function of handguns is to kill people, that there are 10,000 victims of handgun murders in this country each year, and that nearly as many perish in handgun accidents and suicides. Because the hric-a-hrac in so many homes includes a pistol or revolver, Smith points out, family quarrels frequently end in murder rather than a black

In bearing down on tha need for crime control rather than more handgun control. the "anti" segment points ont that 20,000 laws concerning ownership are already on the books around the country, and that almost all of them are pretty much dead letters New York State's Sullivan Law, for example, makes the unlicensed ownership of a handgun a felony, but the police estimate that there are 1 million illegal weapons in New York City alone, and on the rare occasion that violators are convicted, they are seldom sent to jail. However, there are glaring omissions in "Gun Control: Pro and Con" that might not have occurred if tha program had been created as an integrated whole; the lack of a clear-cut analysis of the issue and a consideration of the social context in which the rapid increase in handgun ownership has taken place. There are passing references to the frontier, the perpetuation of the cult of the gun in cowboy and gangster films. and the assassinations and attempted assassinations of recent years. Monday in the midseason shifts. All now have been cancelled. Even a program as popular as "M*A*S*H" nearly was undone in its new Friday-night mission last September: CBS rescued it by reassigning it to Tuesday.

Confident that "All in tha Family" is not subject to such vagaries of the dial, CBS is placing it on Wednesdays at 9 P.M. in the hopes of accomplishing several objectives. The first is to build a new block of situation comedies there, since the half-hour comedy form in groups of three and four has been the network's most effective programming. "All in the Family' had been the foundation of the network's powerful Saturday night lineup and then became the keystone for its Mondaynight roster, which included "Rhoda," , "Phyllis" and "Maude." It will have the same, function in the new Wednesday - night structure consisting of "Good Times," Jim Bouton's Ball Four" and Norman Lear's new sit-com entry, "All's Fair."

A second aim of the network is to demolish the competition in the critical 9 P.M. time period. "Camou," which occupied that slot this year, fell to the competition from "Baretta" on ABC and "Chico and the Man" on NBC By throwing against them its No. 1 series, CBS expects to wreck one or both, or et least to send them packing.

Finally, CBS means to reclaim its domination of Wednesday, which it lost to ABC this year. Wherever "All in the Family" has played, CBS has ruled the night. Next stop could be Friday.

Reynolds Returns

Well before he became a nude centerfold in a womeo's sing when it played on bitue and a movie star of the large but lived up to some some star of ne when it went to in two television series, neither of which lasted long nor promised the celebrity he has come to enjoy. In both be played a detective, first "Hawk" on NBC then "Dan August" on ABC. Each limped through a singla sea-

In 1973, capitalizing on Reynolds's emarging popularity. CBS got hold of the "August" reruns for a summertinic engagement and had itself a winner on the cheap. Now. NBC is hoping to do the same with reruns of "Hawk," in which Reynolds portrayed a New York cop who happens to be an American Indian. The repeats start this Wednesday and are scheduled to run into September. If "Hawk" plays as successfully as "August," Reynolds may gain the dis-tinction of being the only performer known for making hit reruns and first-run flops.

Manson-mania

The ratings were phenomenal for the four-hour dramatization of "Helter Skelter," the Vincent Bugliosi book about the Charles Manson killings and trial; which aired on CBS two weeks ago. Part II, on April 2, was the highest-rated show of the week, drawing 59 percent of the households watching television; Part I, on the previous night, came in third with 56 percent. The program that fell between them was the Oscar awards, which usually outdraws everything.

Considering that the book was a best-seller, the mur-ders so gruesome as to dely belief and the Manson "family" a widely-publicized social aberration, it probably shouldn't have been surprising that the two-part madefor TV moves fared so well. Yet, what really made the film's ratings noteworthy was that stations in five cities including the secondlargest television market in the country, Los Angelesdidn't carry it, while 13 others delayed the broadcast to the late-evening fringe time (11:30) to protect the chil-.

In addition to Los Angeles, the blackout occurred at CBS affiliates in San Francisco, Portland, Me., and Bellingham, Wash.; the CBS affiliate in Pittshurgh also rejected it, but a non-affiliated UHF station there did carry it.

Not to have premium exposure in that many cities could ordinarily meen that a show cannot succeed. In every city where it isn't shown, the program scores a zero, and every zero naturally lowers the national aggregate ratings. Besides, wherever Helter Skelter" was delayed to the late-night hours, it reached only a fraction of its potential viewers, By a rough estimate, the movie was either not made available or offered at an inconvenient time for more than 15 percent, of the national audience. This suggests that if it had played in prime tima everywhere, "Helter Skelter" might have broken records.

Actually, the final score for the television movie won't ba in until after June 10 and 11, the dates to which it has been delayed by the Los Angeles station, KNXT. The showing was held off there not because of tha film's subject matter but because Vincent Bugliosi, the protagonist in the story, is running for District Attorney in the June 8 elections. Additional millions of viewers are bound to be added to the total then, and that will probably make "Helter Skelter" the higgest show of the year.

rick S. Plerce, president of ABC Television, was brimming over with enthusiasm for the 47 prospective new programs his network then had in development. At the time, he pointed out, as if to boast that ABC was kicking the habit, that only three of the candidates were police shows. Yet when the ABC schedule was announced a formight ago, two of these three police melodramas had made it, while 37 of those that were not cops-and-robhers had slid into the backwash. Plainly, there's still a sense of security in baving a badge or two around.

Commercials And Awards Don't Mix

he giving of awards on television has expanded to plague proportions. At the very center of the A month or so ago, Fredeblight, there remain the big three: Hollywood's Oscars, Broadway's Tonys (which will be presented this evening) and TV's Emmys. But surrounding these recognized heavyweights (all is relative in the world of hoopla) is an array of lighter spectacles that include awards for music as judged by the recording industry, for music as judged by the performers, for comedy, for a variety of beauty contests, for best performing animals, for commercials and, it seems, for anything that strikes the fancy and publicity ambitions of an advertising agency.

A recent and representative example was provided with the fouth annual "Women of the Year" awards, which have been created by the Ladies' Home Journal magazine and are sponsored for television by Proctor & Gamble. The event received more media coverage than usual because of a strike by technicians at NBC-TV. Some of the women scheduled to appear-Governor Ella Grasso, a recipient, and Representative Bella Abzug, a presentersent regrets when faced with the possibility of having to cross a picket line. But the affair was held at a Broadway theater, where a temporary restraining order halted the picketing shortly before the arrival of Betty Ford, the nation's First Lady and herself an award recipient

The possibility of technical difficulties, though, cancelled plans for live transmission of the ceremonies. Instead, the presentations were taped earlier in the evening before a curiously staid and unresponsive audience. Petula Clark and the Fifth Dimension sang their songs well enough, but the audience response seemed to indicate group boredom.

As the host of the ceremonies, Barbara Walters continued to demonstrate that established success and personal attractiveness are shamelessly compatible. But even the cool newswoman displayed an uncharacteristic touch of nerves. In her introductory remarks, Miss Walters allowed that she knew most of the winners personally and that "I know first-hand what this evening means to me." Pause. A gurgling of embarrassment. "What this evening means to them," she quickly added.

But this was merely the standard stuff, ranging from flubs to hyperbole, of awards shows. Far more irritating, if not insidious, were the manipulative roles being played by the Ladies' Home Journal and Proctor & Gamhle, As creator of the awards, the magazine was mentioned frequently and at regular intervals during the 90-minute broadcast. The plugs were then reinforced by print ads about the show, proclaiming that "the awards make a glorious point: that more and more American women are forging ahead to leadership positions on many fronts, providing increasing role models for younger women."

But this very point was constantly being undermined by the product commercials scattered throughout the proceedings. The dignified speech of a worthy award recipient would be followed by the bouncy vocal inducements of an off-camera male announcer: "Pearl Bailey! Petula Clark and more when we come back after this word from Pampers." And then, in many of the commercials, the audience was served those depressingly recurrent images of the American woman as moronic housewife.

In a pitch for Zest soap, "Sandy Carpenter" held two photographs in tubs of soapy water. Tha viewer was told that Sandy was performing this test hefore a hidden camera; yet Sandy kept the photographs perfectly within the camera's range. Was that, in fact, Sandy Carpenter or an actress posing as Sandy Carpenter? Was that "Mrs. Marilyn Kelley" conceding that Jif Peanut Butter "just tastes the hest" or was it an actress? There are rules established by ad agencies and broadcasters for determining that sort of thing, but they are confusing and finally pointless. A hustle is a hustle is a hustle.

Tha silly images rolled on relentlessly. A young woman patronizingly assured an older woman that her best dinner glasses, being rushed to the table for last-minute company, were not contaminated with "spots." The younger woman used Cascade in her dishwasher. Grateful relief permeated the obnoxious vignette. In another scene, a mother fretted idiotically as her teen-age son insisted oo doing the family wash himself. But he was safely equipped with All-Temp Cheer. Once again, grateful relief.

These insulting, ridiculous, perhaps even insane images of women simply won't do for a "women of the year" concept that purports to be "increasing the borizons of their sisters around the world." On the contrary, the commercials are reducing the sisters to mechanical trivia.

The women of the year for 1976 were: Beverly Sills, the performing arts; Betty Furness, business/ecocomics; Ella Grasso, political life; Bettye Caldwell, humanitarian service; Maya Angeloo, communications; Micki King, sports; Margaret Mead, science/research; Shirley Hufstedler, government, Annie Dodge Wauneka, education, and Betty Ford, inspirational leadership. These are all extremely accomplished women, the awards to whom were determined by a jury of equally distinguished women. The recognition is certainly deserved. Their inspiration for the future is essential. A project of such unquestionable magnitude cannot tolerate the shoddy, business-as-usual context typically offered by commercial television.

This Is The Very Model Of a Modern useum Catalogue

he reading of scholarly museum catalogues is unlikely ever to become a popular pastime, even among the many people who like to go to museums and look at pictures, and there is probably no reason why it should. It is, after all, the pictures—and other works of afford us the esthetic revelations and gratifiwe seek in museums, and the kind of data nly to be found in museum catalogues is entirely to the esthetic experience. In a world, moreover, ch we have plenty of reason to feel that every ant art object is in danger of being engulfed in a printed matter—and, more often than not, matter most dubious relevance—there is probably an nt to be made against cluttering up our minds segular accretions of commentary and fact about of the imagination that, if fully realized, ought to to speak for themselves.

It may not provide t word on any subject, but it is very often the vhere the first useful word can be found.

> anyone with an interest in such matters, especially. modern painting is concerned, the Solomon R. Gugn Museum has just performed an indispensable in publishing, in two well-produced volumes, a Rudenstine's catalogue of the museum's "Paint-880-1945." These are expensive books-$85 for o volumes in the hard-cover trade edition, $40 1 paperback available only at the museum-but MAR 20 at this price they are unlikely to bring anyone but make a profit. Mrs. Rudenstine, who occupies the in of research curator at the Guggenheim, has the for over five years on the preparation of this gue, and the result is a marvel of what such a pub-n should be. It is, so far as I know, the first " gue of its kind that any museum devoted to modern yet produced, and it sets a standard one hopes confidently, to meet.

their writing. Since the paintings of Kandinsky occupy a ciai place in the Guggenheim's permanent collection, the eotries devoted to this artist are particularly important. What do we find in them? Well, in the first item we encounter in Volume II, we discover something quite startling. The large "Portrait of Marya Anastasievna Chroustchova" (1900), long considered-by Will Grohmann and other Kandinsky scholars—as the outstanding early realist painting by this creator of abstract art, turns out not to have been painted by Kandinsky at all, but by another Russian srtist, Dmitri Nikolaevich Kardovsky. As the Guggenheim Museum had been founded as a kind of shrina to Kandinsky's genius, it is astonishing, to say the least, to discover that as recently as 1950, when this painting was acquired by the museum, such a mistake could still be made by the guardians of Kandinsky's sup-utation. Mrs. Rudenstine's lengthy antry on this palaring gives us a vivid glimpse into Russian artistic life at the turn of the century as well as an intelligent account of the way an investigation into the authorship of the painting has been pursued.

Less dramatic but no less interesting is ber handling of some of the early abstract paintings. The question that has lately been at issue with these paintings is whether they are really abstract, or, as many specialists now believe, actual representations of an esoteric religious iconography. In a lengthy entry on one of the key pictures in this series—"Light Picture" (1913)—Mrs. Rudenstine draws together all the relevant materials in this dispute, and in another, on a painting called "Small Pleasure (also 1913), she questions a recent interpretation of this work that would have us regard its title as an ironic reference to a transfiguring apocalypse. Only rarely, bow-ever, does Mrs. Rudenstine intrude with an opinion of ber own. Her great virtue in this catalogua is in focusing attention on the key issues, and in directing us to the materials necessary for their resolution. With the Kandinsky entries, certainly, the museum has at last published something indispensable to the future study of the artist it was established to celebrate.

But the information to be gleaned in this catalogua is of many kinds. Take the matter of the game that is being played in Henri Roussean's delightful painting "The Football Players" (1908). Is it rugby or soccer or, as Mrs. Rudenstine writes, "just a game of bandball?" It is, she firmly asserts, rugby, and talk us ruby: "Not cally is the firmly esserts, rugby, and tells us why: "Not only is the ball an oval one, but the players are most explicitly using their hands, something which only the goalie is permitted to do io soccer." And then, for good measure, she reproduces a 1907 cartoon from a French newspaper, which Rousseau may have seen, about the French-English rugby match of that year, and then goes oo to talk about the rugby pictures of Gleizes and Delaunnay.

It is wonderful-and unusual-to see a project of this sort done so well, and sustained at this length (the two volumes run to 746 pages), and everyone connected with it, but especially Mrs. Rudenstine, is to be congratulated.

To mark its publication, the Guggenheim Museum has done another unusual thing. It has filled its entire building with a selection of paintings from the permanent collection that are discussed in these two volumes. One need not bother with the cstalogue, of course, in order to enjoy the pictures, most of which we rarely get to see, but it certainly adds to the pleasure some of us will bave in this exhibition to be sble to have this catalogue in hand (or rather, considering its size, on our desks).

Of course, one can quarrel with details of the installation-was it really necessary to paint the walls of the upper ramps a dark gray guaranteed to wipe out the delicate grays of the Cubist paintings?-and with more than a few of the selections. Surely it is time to retire the paintings of Rudolf Bsuer, for example, from serious consideration. Although they always have a certain comic interest, looking, as they do, like a Hollywood set designer's notion of a real "modern" picture, there is no longer any reason to show them in a museum, and it is embarrassing to find them still around. Not the least engaging thing about Mrs. Rudeostine's catalogue is the way she bandles this artist-with an almost unbroken

GENE THORNTON

It's Hard to Miss With a Show of the 30's

Sitwell, are every bit as impressive as the documentaries, and their juxtapositioo says more about the thirties than a book could.

It is hard to miss with the 1930's, however, for, as the examples on view demonstrate, it was one of the great decades of photography. Brassal's "Aveoue de l'Observatoire" captures the mysterious beauty of Paris by night. Berenice Abbott's "Pennsylvania Station" reveals the limpid light and noble open spaces of the station's old passenger concourse, now destroyed. Beaton's portrait of Edith Sitwell (she was a popular subject) shows the great lady playing tha harp in a flowered dress and looking as though she had just stepped out of the antique tapestry that hangs behind her.

When Cecil Beaton is good he is very, very good, but when he is bad, be is horrid. But even when he is horrid, as he is in most of the photographs from Joseph Cornell's collection currently at the Schoelkopf Gallery, he is horrid in a fascinating way. It takes a kind of genius to be that bad.

Most of the pictures at Schoelkopf reveal Beaton's passion for elegant geegaws and theatrical studio lighting. Everything in them is either dripping with jewels and feathers or lighted from four different directions at once, or both. Some of the pictures are still lifes, but most are portraits of movie stars or fashionable ladies posing like movie stars.

There is, for instance, Princess Natalie Paley, grimfaced but beautiful, emerging like an unsatisfied vampire from the clouds of tulia and angel's hair that swathe the prone body of an extremely handsome young man who seems to be either sleeping or dead. There is also a dreamy-eyed Dolores Del Rio, clad in a lei and grass skirt and reclining in a wheat field, every eyelash distinct and a battery of unseen lights creaming her skin and highlighting every hair. There is also the self-portrait of the photographer in his studio, a dapper, debonaire young man in a room bedizened with feathers, jewels, baroque wallpaper, plaster casts, paint brushes, palette, drawings and paper flowers, all lit from behind and both sides and in front. After such campy kitsch, it is hard to remember how good Beaton is at his best.

In the early part of this century, "academic" was a derogatory term used to describe painters such as Bouguereau and Alma-Tadema who tried to adapt the subjects and styles of the Old Masters to tha tastes and understandings of newly-rich millionaires. Now "academic" can just as properly be applied to the works of universitybased artists, such as Robert Fichter, who bring the gospel according to Warhol and Rauschenberg to the campuses of Tuscaloosa, Kalamazoo and Wichita Falls.

Fichter, who is currently showing photographs and other art works at Light Gallery, is assistant professor of art at Florida State University in Tallahassee. He works at drawing and etching as well as photography, and be operates a mean airbrush to boot. He is also the sort of philosopher that sophomores love, for the mottos and aphorisms inscribed on some of his drawings reveal him to be against war, pollution and nuclear power plants.

His photographs are large blueprints worked over by airbrush in pink, lavendar, chartreuse and lemoo yellow. He favors cute subjects such as stuffed alligators and pink cows (spelled "kows" in one picture), as well as anapshots of himself and a female friend, sometimes semi-nude. Similar subjects turn up in his drawings and etchings, which sometimes show an art school competence, but sometimes look like the scrawls of an industrious but not very gifted child. Fichter does not worry that these may seem banal or in bad taste. In fact, according to a spokesman at Light, be purposefully cultivates bad taste as a way of freeing art from the tyranny of good taste.

Baron Adolph de Meyer is best known today for the fashion photographs and celebrity portraits be did for Vanity Fair and Harper's Bazaar from 1913 into the 1920's. However, bis earlier achiavements as a salon photographer won him the admiration of Alfred Stieglitz, who published two groups of his pictures in Camera Work in 1908 and 1912. The small but interesting show of his pictures currently at Helios Gallery includes all 21 of the Camera Work photogravures plus two later portraits of Charlie Chaplin and Jeanne Eagles, the original Sadie Thompson in Somerset Maugham's play, "Rain."

In many ways, de Meyer was a typical salon photographer of the period. He photographed most of the favorite subjects of pictorial photography: still lifes of flowers and fruit, rich and elegant ladies, picturesque bits of foreign scenery, and exotic types such as gypsies and Arab street urchins. The soft focus and subtle tones of his pictures were admirably suited to the platinum prints and photogravure plates that were the favorite mediums of early 20th-century art photographers.

There was, however, a harshness and darkness

of vision in his early works that is quite unlike the high key, brightly lit romanticism of his later magazina photographs. For example, his beautifully back-lit picture of a hydrangea in a plain, cylindrical glass has an austere simplicity that is no doubt derived from Japanese art, but is nonetheless forward looking. His most famous early portrait of the Marchesa Casati (1910) has a dark and dramatic intensity that is reminiscent not just of John Singer Sargent in a Spanish mood, but of the authentically Spanish painting that doubtless inspired them both.

But before the chemical aspects of pH can be digested. it is important for the gardener to appreciate where all this takes place: not in textbooks, but in the soil.

Soil is not a dense mass. Instead, 50 percent consists of open spaces called pore spaces. The other half is made up of different sized soil granules, sticks and stones, worms and insects. fellow nematodes, bacteria

The pore or open spaces ere extremely important because it is here that the soil constantly juggles air and water. Growing things require air in order to obtain oxygen. Water is critical because without moisture the roots cannot get at the nutrients which cling to the soil particles. But too much water can suffocate roots. This rob-Peter-pay-Paul characteristic is the reason why so many intrepid gardeners agonize over the physical structure of their soil.

The solid portion of the soil is where the action is. Consisting of varying proportions of sand, silt and clay. and organic matter. The chief element is clay (moist clay feels slick) which has the ability to absorb moisture

In the half century that contract bridge has been played one might suppose that every conceivable type of defensive strategy bas been discussed in the literature of the game. But that WEST would be a rash assumption, and there is a lot to be said for the propositinn that bridge is an inexbaustible mine for the analyst

As an example of this infinite variety, cansider the diagramed deal from the Vanderbilt Knockout Teams in Kansas City, Mo., last month. A top-ranked player, who won a majnr title in another event, found bimself with the West hand facing a thugh defensive prob-In the heat of battle, with limited time for reflectinn, he failed to solve it. The reader who wishes tn test his own analytical powers should cover the East and South hands and study the situation. The contract is five clubs doubled, and West has, rightly or wrongly, led the ace of clubs. The bidding has suggested that South is vaid in spades, and has 11 nr 12 cards in bearts and clubs combined. (East-West were using a canapé bidding style, and East's rebid of one spade promised a five-card suit).

What defensive plan should West make? After making up his mind, the solver should examine the whole diagram to determine whether his plan would have succeeded. And while he is about it, he should cansider bow East-West would have fared in a contract of five spades, assuming good play but not

With the vulnerability in favnr of North-South it was ioevitable that East-West would oot be permitted to play in four spades. In an expert game North might easily become the declarer in five clubs, rather than South, if East opens one diamond. South could bid two oo-trump, announcing a twosuiter in the hearts and clubs, the low-ranking pair of unbid suits. If North did not choose to sacrifice eventually over four spades, South could force him to choose by bidding four no-trump.

In practice South decided to bid his hand routinely by overcalling one heart and later bidding clubs. As the bidding stayed tempotarily at the one-level, he was able to suggest considerable distributional strength by jumping to three clubs. When North went to five clubs, West chose what seemed the safe course by doubling. It did not occur to him that five clubs might succeed, since he held three aces and his partner had opened the bidding. West might have chosen to lead the spade ace, with the idea of shortening the declarer's trumps. But he would then have been faced with a similar defensive prnblem in a slightly more difficult form. In practice he tried unsuccessfully. Another plan is to force the declarer to ruff, hoping that he will run out of trumps before he can make use of his side suit. This would also have failed bere as a little experiment will show. If West had led the spade ace and continued with that suit at every opportunity. South would still have been able to draw trumps and establish his

If West had taken the time for a complete analysis and realized that his objective should simply be to defeat the contract, he would perhaps have found the solution—a very remarkable one. He knows that South is void in spades, and if South bas a diamond loser the contract is doomad in any event. So West should assume South has the hand he actually has, twn sixcard suits with a singleton diamond ace. Thinking on double-dummy lines, he can foresee what will happen on any nrthodnx defense.

West must try to insure that his heart jack will score a trick, and to do this he must force South to ruff in the dummy prematurely. The key play, either at the second trick aftar leading the after leading the spade ace and taking the cluh ace, is to cash the beart aca and lead another heart. South must then ruff high in the dummy and is helpless. He cannot ruff out the beart jack until he removed East's last trump, and once he does that dummy has no trump left to deal with the beart

club ace nr at the third trick

A lengthy post-mortem centered nnt nnly on this most difficult defensive problem but also on whether West should bave bid five spades. Careful analysis sbows that this can always be made. If North keeps all tracts in which the declarer his diamonds, a cross-ruff has a two-suiter, the defense succeeds; and if not, East can 'score a diamond trick tween two strategies. One is to prevent ruffs in the eventually.

I add to the plastic by building up certain spots with plastic cement, it makes a good mustache, a fancy plume or even fur. It gives a rough hairy look. Autn body putty is another material that I use for something like forming a new chin."

Most newcomers are surprised to learn that the unis forms for these figures are made from bathroom tissue. "You can't use one of those soft brands of tissue," Herock explains. "lt's got to be fairly stiff. I cut each piece of the uniform to measure-the front, collar, back, sleeves, cuffs, everything. Then I piece them together on the figure by using airplane dope on the seams. This hardens quickly and several coats really cover a seam thoroughly. I can even file

if I have to." The airplane dape actually serves twn purposes: it stiffens the tissue uniform and it holds the pieces together. However, the uniform cannot be allowed to dry while clinging to the figure. Mr. Herock patiently uses a fine stick or the wooden end of an artist's . brush to pull the tissue away from the figure while it is drying so that the "uniform" hangs away from the body with a realistic lnoking three dimensinnal ef-

Looks Don't Count

More than 65 years ago, the German theoretician, Siegbert Tarrasch, insisted that a strong move had to look beautiful, that is, that it had to strike one immediately as harmoniously fitting the position. He was particularly outspoken in his criticism of the then world champion, Emanuel Lasker. Lasker, he said, made "ugly moves"; ever after those "ugly moves" had thrashed him twice in their two title matches, Tarrasch refused to shut up. Nowadays, everyone accepts Lasker's side of the argument, holding that the inner logic of the move, not its superficial appearance, is what counts. And yet it is easier to agrea with Lasker in theory than it is to emulate him in practice-we all too often quickly reject the move or fail to consider it hecause it is ugly.

For a prime example of an ugly move proving to be a powerful weapon, consider White's fifth move in the game between Oleg Romanishin and Tigran Petrosian in the 43d Soviet championship in Erevan.

At any rate, Petrosian's defeose, 18 . . . QR-K1, 19 . . . B-Q1 and 20 . . . R-K4, was excellent, but he goofed with 21 ... Q-B2? when he could have saved himself by 21 . . . N-N5; 22 Q-B4, N-B3. Once Romanishin was allowed time for 22 R-N3 there was oo way to prevent the pow-

A Flag Cover Recanceled With H

With all the unhappiness among collectors over the sloppy and destructive cancellations of flag stamps applied at state capitals, there is one heart-warming tale. It is also an extraordinary tale of a happening that, unfortunately, in the postal service occurs very rarely.

The story is told by Edward R. Bucklin, a New Yorker, in a letter passing along a "little story that so far has a happy ending and sheds some glory on at least a few of the hard working people "in the U.S. Postal Service."

"An apologetic note has been received from the Cheyenne, Wy. post office," be relates, "advising this writer that inadvertently the cacheted, stamped envelope he had mailed to that unit for the special Feb. 23 cancel had been canceled with the wrong die, Enclosed with the note was one of the incorrectly canceled covers along with a replacement cover.

"The remarkable thing is that the postal people had gone to the trouble to obtain an exact duplicate of the 'botched' cover-as it happens from those well-known Cheyenne people who specialize in first-day covers—had put on the appropriate Wyoming flag stamp, and most incredible of all, had obtained a mint copy of the stamp commemorating 50 years of Wyoming statehood that matched the one the writer had affixed to the original cover. Then all had been correctly canceled.

"Not even the most discriminating cover collector could fault the quality of the replacement, yet with it came an offer to provide the special concellation on the writer's own replacement cover if he was not satisfied with their effort,"

Mr. Bucklin is still waiting for the rest of his Wyoming covers, but be is waiting with a glow and with hope. The bulk of the letters to this column, and there

There have also been complaints about double cancellations, faint cancellations and poor positioning. There went out to all post offices a directive from the Logistic Department of the United States Postal Service warning that covers with state flags were not to be over-canceled, were not to be back-stamped and were not to be marked with notations, or defaced or folded or mutilated and that all as philatelic mail. The directive appeared in the Postal Bulletin of March 11. There were only 10 satisfactory covers out of 50 state flag covers sent out by this

National Coin Week begins tools to work with And," today, and it has seldom had more auspicious numismatic fort will be officially recogsurroundings. Not only have coins and medals been playing the leading role in commemorating the nation's Bicentennial this year, but the public's attention has also just been even more dramatically refocused on numismatics as the result of last week's rebirth of the $2 bill. Now it is up to the individual collector and the local coin club to put it all together. · The theme of the week which runs from today through next Saturday, is "In the Spirit of "76," The sponsor of Na-tional Com Week (this is the 52d annual N.C.W. observance) is the American Numismatic Association, headquartered in Colorado Springs, Colo. Hundreds of A.N.A. affiliated coin clubs throughout the country received N.C.W. promotional kits several weeks ago, but that was merely an A.N.A. service; it does not imply that National Coin Week par-ticipation is in any way limited to A.N.A. clubs or individual members. "Every collector." A.N.A. emphasizes, "should consider himself a vital part of National Coin Week. Whether he collects U.S. or foreign coins, paper money, medals or tokens-anything numismatio-he can attract the general public's attention to the many fascinating aspects of the hobby in countless ways: by setting up exhi-bits in local banks (or any other reasonably secure place), by giving talks on his specialty in local schools and at civic or fraternal group meetings, by writing articles on the bobby for the local newspaper, by arranging a special "open house" meeting of his local coin club in fact, by any one of a bundred other promotional activities.

Collectors in and around the northwestern Texas Panhandle city of Amazillo have a made-to-order promotional focus for National Coin Week in the annual convention of the Texas Numismatic Association; it opens on Friday for a three-day run in the Civic Center in Amarillo. Hours on Friday and Saturday are 9 A.M. to 9 P.M., and on Sunday from 9 A.M. to 6 P.M. The show will feature large exhibit and dealer areas, an education forum co-sponsored by the Organization for International Numismatics, and a two-session auction conducted by Jess Peters, Inc., of Decatur, Ili: Several specialty groops. including the Maximilian Numismatic Society, will hold meetings (all open to the public) during the conven-

Medal Query To the Numismatics Editor.

I have purchased the first four of the five-piece series of commemorative medals issued (in 1972, '73, '74 and 75) by the American Revolution Bicertennial Administration. And I have been looking forward to the fifth and final medal, which you said would be, issued sometime this spring; you also stated, in that same column (last Sept. 28), that the fifth A.R.B.A. medal would honor Thomas Jefferson and the Declaration of Independence, Recently I received an order form from the U.S. Mint announcing the "National Bicentennial Medal," but this medal has the Statue of Liberty on the obverse side and the Great Seal of the U.S. on the reverse. The order form stated that this medal, in bronze, is

No More Uncirculated Sets

The U.S. Mint normally gives plenty of advance warning before it cuts off the ordering period for any of its various coin offerings. Under the pressures, apparently, of its many coin and medal activities in this Bicentennial year, the Mint-for the first time in memory-has slipped up. The ordering period for the regular annual 1976 non-silver 12-piece uncirculated coin set, which opened Feb. 2, was cut off by the Mint as of last Thursday, April 15, but the official announcement was not

(April 11). Mint officials have expressed regret over this

The 12-piece 1976 uncirculated set was the second of the Mint's regular annual coin set offerings. The ordering period for the other offering, the six-piece non-silver

1976 proof set, was closed Jan. 23. The special three-farmers have been known to shoot them. Around these parts, red-wing blackbirds are our very good friends, protected by law. During the time they spend with us, in early spring and late fall, they gobble enough grub and weed seeds to gladden the heart of any property owner lucky enough to be honored

Make note of the fact that the first arrivals are all males. Their breeding plumage is glistening black ex-cept for two crimson wing patches tipped with dusty white. The brilliant red is revealed like a pettern on en opened fan when the bird is in flight.

Traditionally, an early vanguard of small flocks migrates northward in late Februsry. Every day thereafter, more red-wings swell the pla-toons, stopping occasionally preen themselves and gurgle something like "oka-lee" or "kongeree," interspersed with a "chack" or Don't expect the red-wings to occupy bird houses. It is also unlikely they will settle down in the backyard. Their favorite homesite is a fresh-water swamp or marsh. although occasionally they will choose a grassy field.

Communities of red-wing nests may be found among bulrushes, cattails and reeds, suspended a foot or two above water. The nests are woven of sedge hiades, coarse grasses and cattail leaves into a deep cup lined with finer material from marsh plants. It is a cozy arrangement with the several spouses of each male settled in adjoining or nearby domicles so he can keep a sharp-eye on everybody. "Everybody" may include quite a brood since each female lays from three to five eggs. These eggs are pale blue with spots and zigzag lines of black and purple. The mother sits on them for an incubation period of eleven days. When the eggs are hatched, father is frantically busy beiping feed the young who normally stay in the nest for ten to eleven days. He must also be vigilant in protecting his numerous offspring from predators.

Eastern red-wings are never molested by farmers because they will fly as far as a mile from their swamplands to find food in fertile fields. They will follow the plow with little interest in grain but a voracious appetite for crop-destroying in-there are two directions to go; egricultural lime will "sweeten" the soil, that is, raise an ecid soil toward alkaline levels. Sulfur, on the other hand, will force e soil toward more acid conditions. Most soils in the Northeast usually have to be oudged slightly upward since the abundance of rainfall tends to produce acid solls.

If the soil is high in organic matter and/or clay, then the amount of lime will have to be greater than a sandy soil with the same pH.

In terms of that all-important bartering process known as cation exchange where plant root hairs exchange useless ions for nutrient ions, lime plays a crucial role: Ground dolomitic limestone (recommended) contains both calcium carbonate and magnesium carbonate both of are important elefor proper plant ments

When the soil is limed, the strongly charged particles displace the abundant hydrogen ions which cause the soil to be acid. At the same time, they become easy targets for other nutrients such as nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium as well as the minor elements, calcium, magnesium, sulfur, and the host of trace elements. In short, lime makes the soil come alive with ions racing every . the soil.

Get the GROWING POWER of compost in your garden.

You can grow more exciting vegetables, gorgeous flowers and luxurious lawns. But only if you add growing power to your soil with plant food and conditioning humas. To do this, you could buy expensive peat and fertilizer. Or you can make naturally balanced growing power compost from the free supply of garden and kitchen wastes that you always have available.

Drop garden waste in-shovel rich compost out!

The Rotocrop 'Accelerator' compost bin will help you turn "worthless" garden waste and kitchen garbage into rich compost-quickly... and generally at no cost. By the same recycling method found in nature. But, by providing ventilation and retaining fermentation heat and moisture, the Rotocrop 'Accelerator' speeds up this wonderful biological process. Cut grass, leaves, prunings, even kitchen leftovers become rich, crumbly, sweet-smelling natural food for your garden-in weeks.

English gardeners were the first to use the award-winning Rotocrop 'Accelerator' and acclaim its efficiency. Now over 200,000 gardeners throughout the world are composting the Rotocrop way.

Compost in weeks clearly, simply, easily. Just set up the 'Accelerator' in your garden, drop in garden and kitchen wastes regularly; then, after a few weeks, slide up any of the panels and shovel the rich compost out from Decomposition is fast because the bin is cylindrical-no corners to cool off. Fermentation extends right to the edges of the heap. The rugged PVC plastic panels retain this essential warmth because, like wood, they have good insulating properties. But, unlike . wood, they won't rot-will last for years.

An inflatable cover keeps heat in, rain out. And there are no unpleasant odors to attract bugs. A series of precisely calibrated air vents provide vital ventilation—let in just the right amount of air without loss of heat or moisture. So there is no need to turn the heap.

Pays for itself the very first year! The smallest 'Accelerator' #14 produces 34/2 cubic feet of rich, ready-to-use compost in a season. This is roughly equivalent to $43 worth of peat moss and fertilizer, at today's going prices. The capacity of 'Accelerator' #18 is worth $71. So your 'Accelerator' more than pays for itself, the very first year. And it continues to produce valuable compost at the same rapid rate, to save you big money every year...for years to come!

Unconditional guarantee. We'll ship in two weeks. If you are not completely satisfied return it within 14 days for full refund. All parts guaranteed for 6 months.

of the hobby. We have to really know whether a particular uniform has six gold buttons or eight. And we have to know the exact placement of those buttons, with no guessing, Everything about the uniform—from the hat right down to the bootshas to be just so. Information about a detail that I can't find. at home, or at a friend's library, I often can send to England for,"

Many collectors agree that England is the best source of information in this hobby. By joining the British Model Soldier Society, (York Hall, Caxton Hall, London SWI England), one can receive their publications and make contacts with collectors of similar interests and perhaps more experience.

Until quite recently England also made the very best miniature figures for these hobbyists, with the Stadden being possibly the best known, (London's Stadden Shop is called Tradition, and it is located at 188 Piccadilly, London W1, England.)

But there are plenty of sources of help in this country as well. Peter Blum, proprietor of what is probably the best known of our retail outlets for military figures, the Soldier Shop in New York City, feels that newcomers can get most of the information they need at their local libraries. He also recommends joining The Company of Military Historians, located at 287 Thayer Street in Providence, R.I. They provide members with excellent research material and publish a set of prints several times a year, which give uniform details. Hobbyists in search. of information can also go to the Armament Room of their local museum, as well as to such places as the West Point Army Museum Metropolitan and the Museum's Arms and Armament Collection in New York City.

Some of the larger retail specialty shops and mail order dealers who sell figures also publish newsletters and catalogues which contain much useful information for the collector. The Soldier Shop, for example, has a mailing list that goes out to 14,000 collectors around the world, and their catalogue, which costs $3, contains over 150 pages, Other retailers with catalogues available are listed below:

Kodak Makes Its Response To Polaroid —At Last

The New York Time

Walter A. Fallon of Kodak, whose new camera will take pictures that develop themselves.

By MICHAEL C. JENSEN

ROCHESTER—The Eastman Kodak Company, which has dominated the photographic industry almost from the day George Eastman coined the word in 1888, has a lot riding on the Polaroid-type camera it is to unveil on Tuesday.

The company's profitability, its reputation with investors and camera buffs, and its status, as the most imaginative and technically proficient company in the mass photography field are all on the line, to a greater or lesser degree.

Kodak has moved vigorously ioto the production of office copier-duplicators and does a blgger business in chemicals than all but the largest chemical manufacturers, but its basic strength still lies in photography.

Many analysts believe Kodak must come through with a camera that captures the imagioation of the American people the way its instamatic model did in the 1960's, if it is to justify the six-and-a-half year lapse since it first acknowledged that it was working on a Polaroid-type system.

Kodak could clearly use some good news. Uncharacteristically, its earnings have declined for two consecutive years, falling 2.5 percent in 1975 after a 3.7 percent drop to 1974. And it slipped from 25th to 32d in sales volume among the nation's fodustrial companies between the beginning of 1974 and the beginning of 1975.

In eddition, the GAF Corporation, one of Kodak's major competitors, is pressing an antitrust suit aimed at breaking up the big "yellow box" company and forcing it to give up its trademark—making Kodak a geoeric term like aspirin.

For Kodak, widespread speculation about thenew instant camera has been both a blessing and a bane. On the plus side is the burgeoning interest of potential camera buyers and photo dealers.

On the negative side, investors have been kept in suspeose for more than six years, while Kodak grappled with the technical problems of producing an instant system that would be competitiva with Polaroid's but not violate any of the patents held by its Massachusetts-based competitor, which has had an instant-type camera since the 1940's.

All of this has to be viewed against the backdrop of Kodak's pre-emineot position in the photo industry. To an extent rarely matched by companies in other industries, Kodak dominates many of its markets.

For example, the company has sold more than 60 million Instanatic cameras since the 1963 introduction of the model, according to analysts. During the same period, the analysts say, Kodak's worldwide competitors together have sold about 10 million cemeras in the United States.

When Kodak enters a new market, it is hardly

One of the industry's basic complaints is strikingly evident here. The distillery provides two, homes on its grounds, one for the manager and one, at a modest reot, to the Government's tax man. He's here to make sure that not a drop of Glengoyne malt whisky leaves here without his knowing it.

Americans are a part of the iodustry's overall problem. The world's leading consumers of Scotch; importing half of all that Britain sells abroad, Americans have been switching to vodka. Vodka sales now exceed oot only those of Scotch in the United States market, but also of home-grown bourbon.

Last year, Americans bought 7.8 percent less Scotch than they did in 1974. Much of what they did buy was not the well-known, bottled-in-Scotland brands such as Cutty Sark, Johnnie Walker and J&B, but bumbler concoctions with nobler names, such as King George bottled in the United States.

IV and Vat Gold, that are shipped in bulk as concentrates to be diluted and bottled in the United States.

Business was bad in Britein, too. Consumers, pinched by falling living standards, have been cutting back on everything from beer to champagne. Scotch sales fell 6 percent in volume and the industry thinks it will be another year before domestic sales revive.

A lot of the problem is price, and a lot of the price is taxes. A fifth of Johnnie Walker Red Label sells at retail in Bfitain today for the equivalent of about $7. Of that about $5.60, including $1.28 that was added last year alone, goes to the Government. Earlier this month the take went even higher; Denis Healey, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced another 60-cent tax hike oo fifths of hard liquor in his annual budget mes-

Hills of S.E.C.: Is He Defanging the Tiger?

By ROBERT D. HERSHEY Jr.

WASHINGTON—The suspicions about Roderick M. Hills seemed well lounded. Within weeks of taking over as head of the Securities and Exchange Commission last October—a job for which he was sponsored by three of the most powerful men in Wall Street—interesting things began to happen:

4The commission announced a major program that would reduce the "reporting burdens" of securities firms as part of a streamlioing of its decision and rule-making processes.

4A deep split developed among the five commissioners about how much companies were obliged to tell about foreign payments and bribes. Mr. Hills emerged with those seeking less than maximum disclosure.

These developments, along with knowledge of Mr. Hills's previous post as a leader of the President's regulatory with knowledge of Mr. Hill's previous post as a leader of the President's regulatory reform task force, sent ahudders through those who believe in an intensely adversary role for the S.E.C. That Federal agency is, after all, charged with the integrity of the securities markets and with seeing to it that busioess provides enough information for investors to make sound decisions.

The new chairman, under the guise of regulatory reform, was apparently in the process of making the commission a toothless tiger.

But now after six months on the jcb, Mr. Hills seems to have dispelled the fears of many, although some, particularly in the middle echelons of the S.E.C.'s enforcement division and among those naturally wary of business, remaio unconvinced, "I'm reserving judgment." one former commission staff man said last week.

Mr. Hills, of course, is sensitive to the suspicions and he dismisses them out of hand.

"It's just nonsense to think I was sent bere to defang" the commission, he says, adding that he put high priority on making the enforcement division strong. "For one thing it keeps people interested in the stock market."

Of course, more reliance on self-regulation and the competition of the market-place would seem to call for a comparably bigger reliance on the mechanism for punishing violators, too. And the director of auch S.E.C. enforcement, Stanley Sporkin, at times called the bete noire of the American executive suite, seems to back Mr.

"From the very start, other than on some minor points of methodology, he's been tremendously supportive," says Mr. Sporkin. "He doesn't look at enforcement as an ogre. In fact, he's given a blueprint of other areas

Mr. Hills, propping his feet on a table and puffing on a pipe during a recent interview in his office overlooking Washington's Uoion Station, made clear that his S.E.C. priorities flow from his own experience.

The Arab Boycott and American Policy

By EDWIN L. DALE Jr.

WASHINGTON—Sometime before the end of September, the Congress, the Ford Administration and the American business community are going to have to face up to the question of whether United States laws relating to the Arab boycott of Israel should be changed and tight-

Sept. 30 is the expiration date of the overall export control law, which covers much besides the boycott-There is little doubt that the law will have to be extended. The question is what, if any, provisions should be 'added covering the com-phiance by American compa-nies with all or parts of the boycott.

One problem is that it unclear exactly how the Arab boycott is actually applied. In principle, for example, it has nothing to do with the Jewishness of ownership or management of any compa-ny, here or abroad, but relates only to the extensiveness of the company's dealings with Israel. But it is not clear that this principle is always adhered to.

Indeed, a staff member of the Senate Banking Com-mittee which studied the situation said: "We have docevidence, testimony, that the boycott does operate on a religious basis."

Among those who are deeply troubled by the entire question is Ghazi al Gosaibi. the Saudi Arabian minister of industry and electric pow-The American-educated official is bere to, among other things, explore poten-tial United States investment and other projects in the huge $140 billion Saudi development plan. His worry is not about the present situation, but about efforts in Congress to make it more difficult, or at least more embarrassing, for American companies doing business in his country to make the necessary boycott declarations and certifi-

"We need you," he sald in an interview. "So often American companies, American technology, are the best. If new legislation relating in the boycott harms our economic felations, disappointment would be s mild word for my feelings."

Mr. Al Gosaibi makes a familiar Arab case: The boycott, the refusal to do business with a company is not directed at Jewish cootrolled firms. There are, for example, Turkish, Iramian and Pakistani companies as well as publicly owned American corporations on the boycott list. The list is said to consist of companies whose business relations with Israel help its economic capacity or defense capacity. ¶An economic boycott is a classic and accepted international instrument in cases like this, where there is a ¶Companies that simply normal export-import business with Israel are not but on the boycott list. The other side of the story is presented in the Senate Banking Committee's report poned until consideration of the underlying Export Ad-ministration Act that would tighten the American law relating to the boycott.

The committee bill would not bar American companies from complying with the boycott — making certifications that Arab bound goods involved were not made in Israel, for example. But it would change things in a number of ways:
¶An American company

could not disclose information on the race, religion or national origin of officers, directors, shareholders or employees. Theoretically, the boycott does not require this, but there have apparently been examples of such requests. Administration officials the Capital Tables cials like Gerald L. Parsky, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and James A. Baker, Under Secretary of Com-merce, have said in recent speeches that the United States will not support dis- and the like-including such crimination on this basis. and President Ford made a similar declaration. Their po-aition on this point is essentially the same as the Senate

¶An American company could not refuse to do business with another American company on the ground that the second company was boycotted—a kind of secondary or tertiary boycott. The committee report cited the case of a United States company, unnamed, with an order to supply bases to an Arab country. The bus maker had routinely ordered seats from a supplier. It was then informed that the supplier company was on the boycott list, and in the end the bus manufac-turer decided to buy the seats elsewhere in order to retain the business.

¶American companies deciding to comply with boy-cott requests for information

—would have to disclose their decisions to the Government, and the Government would make them public. The report saya that "the Com-mittee is sensitive to the concern that public disclo-sure could subject United States firms to harassment by private interests opposed to the Areb boycott," but it added the committee's conclusion that "the potential adverse consequences were minimal and far outweighed by the potential public benefits." It said, among other things.

that adverse reaction "will depend on the nature of the compliance." noting that a simple certification that goods are not of Israeli origin "is an aspect of the primary hovest over which the Israel boycott over which the Unit-ed States has little control" in any way by United States compaoies. It is this kind of possibility that most troubles Mr. Al Gosaibi who says that "we can have no objection in principle to reporting and disclosure."

"In a way we are encouraged," he said. "We see signs that people are asking questions and beginning to think more deeply about the issues and principles in-volved."

For Saudi Arabia the business stakes are very large. Although there have been predictable difficulties with labor supply, port congestion and housing shortages, the huge plan is moving ahead, according to Mr. Al Gosaibi.

American exports of goods, excluding investments, management contracts and the like, could total more than $20 billion as a result of the plan in the next five years, according to estimates of Mr. Parsky of the Treasu-

Mr. Baker of the Commerce Department points out that exports to the Arab countries have more than tripled in the last three years to $5.3 billion in 1975 and says that "the importance of this market to the nation's wellbeing is apparent."

There remains the point made by the Senate Banking Committee report: "The Committee strongly believes that the United States should not acquiesce in attempts by foreign governments through foreign governments through secondary and tertiary boy-cotts to embroil American citizens in their battles against others by forcing them to participate in actions

Dear Tourist: It's Not Money If It's Not Dollars

By DANTEL M. MADDEN

The United States can marshal an extensive inventory of surprises for the visitor from Europe, most of which are less than daunting. But how does one deal with the second-class treatment handed a visitor by first-rate midtown Manhattan banks?

Almost without exception. Fifth Avenue banks turn a cold shoulder on a basic need of the visitor from overseas:

A European resident visiting in New York finds this situation curious for several

For one thing, New York is a tourist mecca and the financial capital of the world. Then, too, American banks have proliferated abroad to the point that in Europe, their shingles hang everywhere, projecting the impres-sion of being as globally oriented as the Secretariat of the

The most tourist-traveled thoroughfare in North America is the stretch of Fifth Avenue between 42d and 59th Streets, along which it is difficult or impossible for a foreign tourist to exchange his country's perfectly good currency — or his foreign traveler's checks—for dollars in that area.

Of 17 banks visited along Fifth Avenue and on 42d Street, a dozen turned down recent requests to exchange major Western European currencies for dollars. Of the five banka which did offer exchange facilities to non-customers, three had restrictions, either on the amount ($25 maximum) or the nationality of the currency they would cash (British, Cana-dian and West German were

Mr. Goldfarb made ioformal inquiries to determine if the Justice Department would be interested in bringing a test case to see whether the Fairfax County Bar Association's minimum fee schedule in particular, and all bar associations' schedules in general, constituted price-fixing in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Justice Department officials bad been complaining publicly for several yesrs about lawyer fee schedules, long used throughout the nation to set floor prices for various standard legal services—divorce cases, estate planning, adoption, bankruptcy and debt collection, among others. Rhode Island lawyers first established the practice in 1795.

The Supreme Court decided the Goldfarbs' case against the Fairfax County and Virgioia State Bar Associations on Juoe 16, 1975. In a unanimous opinion by Chief Justice Warren E. Peter H. Schuck, director of Consumers Union's Washington office, said the A.B.A.'s action "doesn't boot our case at all."

Three months ago, the F.T.C. brought an antitrust complaint against the American Medical Association'a ban oo doctor advertising.

The Justice Department sued pharmaceutical associations for codes of ethics baoning drug stores from advertising retail prices of prescriptioo drugs, and the F.T.C. has proposed a rule to preempt laws or codes forbidding prescription drug price advertising.

Last mooth, Consumers

Union challeoged in Federal court the composition of the Pennsylvania State Board of Optometrical Examiners, complaining that the board, which by law conaists only optometrists, has creased the prices paid by coosumers for eyeglasses and has reduced "competitive forces" in the profession.

The F.T.C. staff says, for example, that if drugstores were free to advertise prescription drug prices, con-sumers would save more than $200 million of the $7 billion they spend annually for prescription drugs. To be sure, Government agencies often claim their actions will bring buge savings to consumers—savings that later are a bit bard to find.

The assumption that competition reduces prices without reducing quality, of course, has been behind antitrust actions since the Sherman Act was passed in 1890. But lawyers, doctors and oth-er professionals do not agree that what is good for other business necessarily is good for the professions.

Justin A. Stanley, pres ideot-elect of the American Bar Association receotly declared that commercial advertising is "a very bad way" to inform consumers of legal services. The American Medical Association has asserted that "we think there is enough bucksterism in this country without hucksteriz-ing medicine."

"Advertising by a profes-sicoal is the very antithesis of professionalism," said the A.M.A. in response to the F.T.C. complaint." Physicians shouldn't solicit patients. A patient should go to a doctor the basis of need, not on the basis of advertising." F.T.C. and Justice Department lawyers reply that they are oot trying to equate the sale of professional services to, say, promotions for soap. Mr. Wilson, of the Justice Department argues that meaningful advertising, "far from demeaning the profession, would provide a dignified and responsible method of communicating price." -In any case, the Government asserts, there are laws against misleading and deceptive advertising. Such laws, of course, are ofteo ineffective or unenforced.

While the Supreme Court egreed with Mr. Goldfarb and the Justice Department that professional price-fixing is illegal, it is uncertaio whether the. Court will agree that of a growing pressure on the traditional ways in which professional services are de-Mr. Wilson of the Justice Department says, for in-stance, that resolution of the lawyer advertising con-troversy "will have an effect" on the development of pre-paid legal services plans. Professional services traditionally have been delivered on e fee basis hy individuals or partnerships. Group prac-tice under pre-paid medical and legal plans has been advocated by some consumer and labor groups and Government officials as a means of improving efficiency and reduciog costs. Doc-tors and lawyers strongly hava resisted any changes in their traditional profes-sional and economic relationahips with patients and

But price competitioo and advertisiog may tend to erode traditional relationships and encourage the growth of pre-paid group practice, some consumer groups and government lawyers say. Meanwhile, Lewis Goldfarb says that his suit is about to be settled and the bar associations will pay several bundred thousand dollars to be distributed among the 2,000 home-buyers.

Just how much money consumers generally are saving is another matter. In many communities such title searches are done by title companies, not individual lawyers. And even in the Washingtoo area, who saves what is questiooable.

Benny Kass, a Washington lewyer calla himself a "people's lawyer" and charges $250 for a title examination and related work, less than some others charge. But even Mr. Kass says to get a lower fee in the area a home buyer has to "know eoough to shop around. Otherwise you're still charged according to the old fee schedule."

In a footnote to his Gold-

be unrealistic to view the practice of professions as in-

FREE. GOOD HORSE SENSE ON MUNICIPAL BONDS

The workhorse of the investment world is still the tax-free Municipal Bond.

Municipal Bonds have always been the workhorse at raising money for America's cities and towns.

And they're also a workhorse for you.

Because the interest they pay is tax-free. And that can save you a lot of money every April 15th.

We know how it is to have a sum of money sitting in the bank that you haven't touched in years, and every year at this time, to be paying all that tax. Especially when your savings could be earning interest that is free of all three taxes we New Yorkers pay on savings bank interest.

For example, someone filing a joint return on $35,000 a year in New York would have to get 14% from a bank or other taxable investment to match the 7% that we can get you taxfree from investment grade Municipal Bonds as this ad goes to press, And other brackets benefit proportionately

Any investment that pays returns like these is more than pulling its share.

The only trouble is that a lot of people are uninformed about Municipal Bonds or confused by them or afraid of them because of the Moratorium on New York City notes. (The Moratorium is on the notes and notes aren't bonds. The bonds of New York City are being paid in full right along.)

Your 1976 Municipal Bo Informati

But if you're having difficulty distinguishing between notes and bonds and that's one of the problems that's keeping you out of the bonds of any city, town or state, then you should send for Lebenthal's free new 1976 Municipal Bond Information Kit.

It's full of good horse sense about safety, Municipal Bond ratings, tax-exemption, bond arithmetic, the New York City crisis, revenue bonds vs. general obligation bonds, the mechanics of getting started, how to pick the right bonds for your own situation, and even how to sell your bonds if you have to. You'll also get a GET A HORSE button with your kit as a little reminder of what tax-free Municipal Bonds are all about.

In the 1960's, he organized Hershey's first marketing department-Hershey's dominance in the market had allowed it to get along without one until then-and in 1967 became vice president for sales and marketing. In 1971, Mr. Dearden took over operating control of the chocolate and confectionary division, then guided It. through perhaps the most difficult period io Hershey's history. First, there were the Government wage-price controls, which beld prices down despite rising costs. Then came spectacular rises in the prices of sugar and cocoa-Hershey's primary ingredients. Raw sugar, which averaged about 10 cents a pound in 1973, soared to 66 cents a pound io 1974; cocoa weot from about 64.4 cents to $1.30 a pound in the same period.

In January 1974, Hershey felt itself forced to increase the price of its standard chocolate bar to 15 cents from 10. To ease the sting, it also increased the size of the bar, to 1.4 ouoces from 1.26 weight was cut back to 1.2 ounces, consumer resistance stiffened and division profit began to suffer.

But by the end of 1975, the division seemed headed back on the right track. Sales rose 15 percent to $483.4 million last year while operating income increased almost 60 percent to $80 millico. The pre-tax profit margin widened to 16.5 percent from 12 percent. That performance pushed total corporate sales to a record $556 million and net income to $32.9 million, or $2.53 a share. One major factor was that cocoa and sugar prices, baving peaked during 1974, headed back toward 1973 levels and held there.

It was just before Christmas when Harold S. Mohler, chairman, announced he was retiring as chief executive officer and asked Mr. Dearden to take over. "No one was more surprised than I," Mr. Dearden recalled Surprised or oot, he jumped into the top operating slot on March 1.

Mr. Dearden sees himself not so much an authority on chocolate as an authority on human behavior. He believes strongly in team management and surrounds himself with "generalists" who know all parts of the chocolate business Encouraged by the success of its newest product, the Kit Kat wafer bar, Hershey will expand test marketing of two new products this ye late-covered raisins and Toffo caramels.

"We think there's a great future for chocolate and confectionery." Mr. Dearden said. "We just keep selling more bars year after year and don't seem to be hitting saturation."

His theory is that people eat Hershey bars not because they are hungry, hut because they need a psychological lift. "Me?" he says, "I nibble them all the SHORT HILLS, N.J.-Ira D. Sahlman, a textile converter and fabric supermarketer, sees himself as "the little guy who survives in the land of the jungle"—the jungle being the fad-ridden textile business, where giant corpo-rations dominate.

The Sahlman tale might be told as "how he came back from the depths of the double-knit debacle to ride the crest of the crinkled cot-

In ooe decade, the textile industry swung from its age-old reliance on woven fabrics to knitted ones, particularly polyester double-knits.

Forecasting a market in which every pian in America. as well as every woman and child, would be garbed in these easy-to-care-for materials, the industry went on capital investment binge. But the expensive doubleknit machinery bought in the early 1970's soon yielded an overproduction problem.

Falling prices, the hand-maiden of glut, resulted in big losses in the industry. Many of the giants wrote off their mistakes and exited from double-knits. The most recent was M. Lowenstein & Sons which announced in February its phase out from double-knit production, taking an after-tax loss of $8 million. Countlese lesser producers went out of businese altogether.

Then there were the little guys, like Mr. Sahlman, who just held on, one way or another, until the cycle swung back to woven fabrics, especially those made from natural fibers, like honest-to-goodness cotton.

Mr. Sahlman had worked for Cohn, Hall, Marx & Company, a diversified textile producer, for 14 years. He left in 1961, spent a couple of years with Crown Fabrics, a small converting concern. and "got the inspiration to do it myself," he says.

Tussah Fabrics, the textile converting company he start-ed in 1960, had a dozen good and so-so years before it went out whimpering in the spring of 1974, a victim of the double-knit boom.

The saving grace for ir. Sahlman was that in Mr. Sahlman was that in 1972, he had entered the retail fabric husiness with a new company, Fabric Emporium. The retailing saw him through the bust years year-old who resembles an chullient Woody Allen, uses the analogy of a movie prnducer, "The converter hires everyone and takes the risks," he says.

The converter buys raw goods from the mill, usually known as "greige" goods but pronounced "grey" goods by industry idiosyncrasy.

By whatever name, raw goods are sent by the convert-er to dyers and printers to be transformed into apmanufacturers or to retail

Mr. Sahlman said, "I would have had to take a job again and watch from the outside when my business came back.

"Now I have to figure out what it's going to be after the crinkles fade," he said "One day every lady in America is going to pick up the phone and say, Crinkled cotton, yech'."

Usquabae means whisky. In the citadel of Scotch whisky, no one uses ice. Purists mix the whisky with an equal quantity of water at room temperature.

"You must add water," said Jack McLean, the head tester at Robertsoo and Bax-ter, whisky merchants, here. "Without water, you find it nips your nose." Businessmen usually drink it that way, taking one before lunch and two before dinner. In pubs, however, the cus-tomary order is the "half and balf-pint"—a big shot of whisky and half pint of beer to chase it down.

In pubs bere Scotch is measured by the dram and in are elastic quantities. The fancier the pub, said one pubgoer, the smaller the dram.

."In the last year, 38 countries put various new impositions of some form or another oo whisky," said John A. R. MacPhail, managing director of Robertson and Baxter, the Scotcb whisky blender that owns the Gleogoyne distillery. In Brazil, he said, a fifth of Cutty Sark costs the equivalent of Scotch, like other liquor, has always been a vulnerable target for taxes. "It's a luxury item," Mr. McPhail said, 'and people like it."

But there's a newer, accelerating trend to use the tax system to do what prohibition laws have failed to docurtail alcoholism. Early this rear, a prominent Glasgow health official disclosed that alcobolism in northern Scot-land, the ceoter of the industry, was 12 times as serious as in England, and that it was a major cause of serious

Meanwhile; during the last gasps of Wall Street's go-go era a few years ago, scotch wbisky became a problem of another sort, as an "investment vebicle."

Little-known futures brokers offered speculators investments in whisky that was maturing in the distilleries' casks. In five or six years it would age to liquid it was hoped, and would then be sold to bottlers for blending.

Most investors bought grain whisky, distilled in Scotland from American corn and used as the tasteless base of blended whiskies. Wiser, or more fortunate, investors bought single-malt whis-kies, such as the one produced here, that are made from Scottish barley.

Grain whiskies bought four years ago for about $3 a gallon are now worth about $1, eccording to industry sources, because of oversup-

ply. Some of the higher grade malts, on the other hand, bave at least maiotained their original values.

A few investors are almost antirely out of pocket—those who bought blends. Bottlers do their own blending, so most of the speculetors' holdings are worthless.

There are other problems for the industry. The price of barley, the grain on which all Scotch malt whisky is built, jumped 40 percent last year because of grain shortages elsewhere, and whila that price has begun to re-cede, the recession that de-

Robertsoo and Baxter also owns a cooperage that makes oak casks to age Glengoyne's whisky; it sells the brands of a company that owns other distilleries, and it owns half the Glasgow company where Cutty Sark and several other brands are

EYE-OPENING STUDIES

In a series of flow-of-funds and monetary studies, The Holt Investment Advisory has analyzed some of the little-ooticed but highly significant developments in the banking system as well as in the stock market. It explains in considerable detail why we believe the risks of buying and holding stocks have become unacceptably large.

This issue of the Advisory also presents a complete list of securities to implement Holt's latest Recommended Investment Strategy for capital building in the market environment ahead.

Caution: As in early 1973, Holt's current view of the market is distinctly different from the bullish stance of most Wall Streeters. (In late 1974, when the Dow was only around 600, we were also greatly outnumbered by other experts. Then, we were advising investors to buy bargains aggressively.) It is always possible that the Cooventional Wisdom will be right this time.

Nevertheless, unless you, too, are unvieldingly bullish, you will probably find the logic behind Holt's research compelling—so much so that you will want to read these special reports over and over again.

JOHN EXTER, NOTED BANKER, WARNS:

The current recovery will abort and the economy will sink into a depression of unparalleled proportions"

John Exter is a retired senior vice-president of First National City Bank, the nation's second largest bank, where he served in its loternational Banking Group. Before joining Citibank, he was a vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, Currently, Mr. Exter

Now, io an exclusive interview with the Silver and Gold Report, Mr. Exter discusses his concern for our banking system, the economy, and individual investors.

What does Mr. Exter foresee for the banking system? "The American banking system is in scrious trouble. The problem can only get worse. More bankruptcies and defaults are a certainty."

How will this affect the economy? Mr. Exter's answer: "I don't agree (with most economists) that a major recovery lies ahead. I believe the current recovery will abort; and the economy will sink into a depression.

What does Mr. Exter expect to cause the depression? "Debt...The banks are overflowing with the obliga-tions of illiquid debtors. The coming depression will be ushered in by snowballing bankrupteres and defaults."

How severe does he expect it to be?

"The coming depression will be more severe than the Great Depression of the 1930s. I hate to say it, but many, many people are going to suffer."

Moreover, in this interview, Mr. Exter discusses why

It Might Have Been 'Kabisdik'

"A trademark should be "A trademark should be short," said George Eastman, and "vigorous." It should be "incapable of being misspelled to an extent that will destroy its identity." And, "it must mean nothing."

So, in 1888, more than half a century before such copyrightable corporate designations as Exxon and designations as Exxon and Avco became the rage, George Eastman coined the term

"Kodak" for his products.
He later explained that the letter "K" bad long been a favorite. "It seemed a atrong

ture quality would be at least as good as Polaroid's, the dealers iodicated that on average they would allocate 70 percent of their buying to the new instant products from Kodak — which tradi-tionally allows them a higher profit margin—and only 30 percent to Polaroid.

Large discount houses. however, probably will continue to push Polaroid prod-ucts to a greater extent than the specialty dealers will, Mr. Enderlin says.
It seems likely that the instant camera will have a salutary impact on Kodak's earnings, modest at first, and then increasingly substantial.

Some analysts predict that the system may add 5 cents or more this year to the $3.80

a share Kodak earned in 1975. Mr. Enderlin, for one, thinks the instant system could be adding as much as 75 cents a share by 1979.

Furthermore, because of a geoerally improving business climate, many analysts say they think Kodak's earnings this year will reach $4.50 to $5 a share. (Kodak will say only that it expects to have a "good" year.)
"The ability to enter the area of instant photography is one of several issues important to Kodak, but not, io our opinion, the most important." says Raiph Kaplan, associate director of research at Oppenheimer &

Instant photography could increase Kodak's earnings by about 10 percent over a threeyear to four-year period, he said, but a general recovery to traditional profit margins would raise earnings by more

For consumers, however, the critical point is the price of the soon-to-be unveiled Kodak camera. The betting at the moment is that several models will sell in a range from $50 or $55 to over $100. The list price of Polaroid's cheapest competing model, called the Pronto, ia $66, although the camera typically selled at discount for as little sells at discount for as little as $48 or $49. Another in-stant camera, the Keystone Wizard, has recently sold at discount for $46.88. Although Kodak is relying beavily on the instant camera to help regain its momentum. the company also has moved vigorously into the office copier-duplicator field. Last year, Kodak introduced a new office copier which, hoth Kodak and received by customers.

More recently, the com-pany held a splashy introduction in Manhattan of another copier, which automatically collates and staples multipage documents. The machine's features were im-pressive, although it jammed several times during the demonstration (and had the same problem a week later when demonstrated privately for a visitor at Kodak's education center). Richard S. Lannamann of Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Company, sald the new line of copier machines rein-forced his belief that Kodak "will be a very viable com-petitor to hoth Xerox and I.B.M. in this husiness."

sion last year. Another $1.1 billioo, bowever, came from Eastman Chemicals, which manufactures man-made fi-bers, such as Kodel, and plas-tics as well as chemicals, many of them used in photographic products. The only apparent cloud on Kodak's horizon is called "antitrust."

At the moment, three private antitrust suits are pending against the company, and the Justice Department is pursuing an investigation it began in 1970.

Probably the most impor-tant of the actions is the suit by GAF, formerly the Geogral Aniline & Film Corporatioo. According to Bache Halsey Stuart, the suit has important merits.

"GAF management," the firm says, "appears to be more interested in achieving structural industry changes than in a mere cash settle-ment, and can be expected to press its claims. This is the most serious risk facing Kodak."

The GAF suit, filed in United States District Court in Manhattan in 1973, points up the ubiquity of Kodak's army of stockholders—237,-527 at last count.

The first judge to preside over the case was Inzer B.
Wyatt, and on May 31, 1973, two attorneys for GAF reminded him in his chambers that by its very nature, the outcome of the case could affect the price of Kodak stock — in particular "the value of your honor's invest-ment in Eastman Kodak."

Judge Wyatt wasted little time, according to a published transcript of the meeting. "All you have to do ing. "All you have to do is say, as I gather you do say, that you think I ought to disqualify myself," be responded. "The answer is, it's done. Good day, gentlemen."
Kodak, meanwhile, has proven as formidable in the courtroom as in the market.

courtroom as in the market-place, responding to GAF's requests for information with a series of tough questions of its own.

In a legal process called discovery, Kodak has submit-ted dozens of such requests, including two that seemed to question whether GAF prod-ucts might bave been deficient at a moment of great crisis for the nation.

States Government, the De-fense Department, or the Air Force "in connection with or after the Cuban Missile Crisis, or at any other time, crisis, or at any other time, refused or declined to purchase aerial film" from GAF.

Also, Kodak asked whether any of the same agencies had "destroyed, discarded or otherwise disposed of any otherwise disposed of any inventories or supplies of ae-rial film" purchased from

A spokesman for GAF, asked to comment oo the questions, said: "This is going to be a hard-fought, visible case. We'll keep it in the courtroom." Kodak declined to comment oo the questions. the discovery stage and Ko-

Nearly one out of six members of the greater Rochester labor, force is on the Kodak payroll, and the company makes its presence tic Investments of all time." For the most part, Kodak employees, who are nonunion, also seem to be as enthusiastic about the com-felt in a variety of ways.

Some of Kodak's facilities are small cities io themselves. For example, the company's "Kodak Park" facility, which employs about 30,000 workers has a 90-mag fire workers, has a 99-man fire department, 29 cafeterias, 25 miles of street, and 17,000 generously to local charities and public interest projects (it provided the land for the city's educational television station, for example) it is occasionally criticized for its spreading influence.

The company bas come under fire, for example, for buying up houses near its Kodak Park facility and converting the property into parking lots.

Nevertheless, Kodak keeps a relatively low profile in Rochester and seems oo bal-ance to behave like a benevolent parent—perhaps be-cause so many of the compa-ny's top executives are home grown.

Typically, a Kodak executive joins the company after graduating from the University of Rochester or some other nearby college, then moves up through the ranks, in marketing or research for example, before finding a bome at "Kodak Office," the corporate headquarters in downtown Rochester.

Gerald B. Zornow, Kodak's
60-year-old board chairman,

The newest entry in the Polaroid line is the Pronto. More than 30 years of letter mical and commercial history lie behind the Eastman Kodak Company's scheduled exhibition Tuesday of a long-awaited array of film and cameras for the instant photography field. tography field.

It started in December 1943, during a family holiday in Santa Fe, N.M., when Edwin H. Land, then as now the chairman of the Polaroid Corporation, took a photograph of one of his daughters. The little girl asked, "Why can't I see the picture right away?" Dr. Land asked himself why not.

self why not. On Feb. 21, 1947, at a meeting of the Optical Society of America in New York City, Dr. Land demonstrated a "one-step" photographic system in which silver-containing molecules migrated from negative to positive— with the aid of chemicals squeezed from a "pod" at-tached to each frame of film —to produce finished prints on the spot.

The system was demon-strated to Kodak, which ad-mired it as an elegant inven-for its second great step in instant photography, the in-troduction of a color film in 1963, Kodak did participateas the supplier of the color film's elaborately layered negative, which was totally covered by Polaroid's patents. From the negative, dyes mi-grated over to a positive sheet (manufactured by Polaroid) to form a final With the one-step color system, Polaroid began mar-keting lower and lower priced cameras, demonstrating the mass appeal of its particular photographic culture.

It became only a matter of time before Goliath decided to compete with David. Kodak began serious development of its own instant-picture system in 1969.

Ten Miles Per Gallon, but Who's Counting?

Price increases on automobiles are nothing new in this era of rising costs, but Rolls-Royce has just announced what may be the biggest increase in history. The British producer of luxury cars has just raised the tab for its new Camargue model by $15,000 — from $75,000 to

Because the car is hand-crafted, only 50 were pro-duced last year. The company plans to build 100 this year, with 30 marked for export to the United States starting later this month.

The Camargue ia a two-door coupe with a traditional Rolls-Royce front bot a sloping rear that is reminiscent of a fast-back. Designed by Pininfarma of Italy, the car is the first standard Rolls-Royce model ever designed outside the British Isles.

Standard equipment in-cludes a two-tier temperature control system that permits the driver to maintain a cool head and a warm body. The Camargue's gasoline consumption, roughly 10 miles a gallon, is "not a factor" io its appeal, according to Mr. Williams.

Tax Audits Up

BUSINESS ROUNDUP

Not all of the returns are io, but the Internal Revenue Service already plans to audit more of them this year than last and expects to find more mistakes in the process. As usual, it appears that more taxpayers will owe money than will get refunds. According to Wilson Fade-

ly, an I.R.S. public affairs officer, close to 2.5 million individual, estate and gift tax returns will be audited in fiscal 1976, up from 2.1 mil-lion io fiscal 1975. The overwhelming majority of audited returns belong to individ-uals; last year only 122,399 individuals had overpaid.

The I.R.S. is also being more selective in choosing whom to audit because, as Mr. Fadely explained, "It's a waste of time and money to audit somebody and then find that the return is O.K."
Last year 23 percent of the audited returns turned out to be accurate. In 1968 43 percent were accurate.

It also appears that the Americao taxpayer needs encouragement to file on time. As of April 9, the number of returns filed was down 3 percent from 1975. "We had a big crunch early last year because we promised to process the rebates as soon as the returns were filed.' said ao I.R.S. spokesmao.

of payments deficit in 1976 and no oeed to borriw from private banks nor to draw down its international reserves.

The Treasury estimate for 1976 shows the aggregate current account deficit of nonoil less developed countries improving by at least $3 billion over 1975, shrinking to $34 billion. This estimate may well prove quite conservative. The actual improvement could be several billions of dollars greater if the economic recovery now under way in the industrial countries gathers the momentum many experts in those countries enticipate.

Assuming the Treasury estimates are accurate, however, the funds that private banks will be called on to provide will probably decline from last year's $7 billion to some $2 billion in 1976.

A relative handful of less developed countries hold the bulk of private debt. Many are simply too poor to qualify for private lending and must rely on official assistance. It is among the middle and mostly upper income developing countries that we find the major borrowers from private banks. Two of them, Brazil and South Korea, are representative.

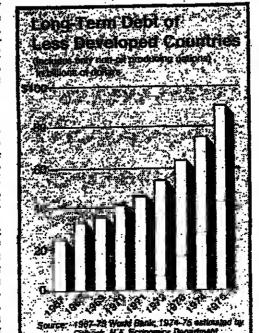

Especially hard hit by the oil price increase, Brazil faced a $4.6 billion trade deficit in 1974. Last year it took steps to restrain import demand, accelerated currency devaluation and tightened monetary policy. Real growth was cut almost in half to 6 percent, although at the end of the year a turn-around was anticipated.

Brazil's balance of payments management in 1975 produced encouraging signs of improvement, including a $300 million surplus in the second balf. The trade deficit was reduced by more than 25 percent with exports climbing 19 percent to $8.6 billioo and imports rising only 4 percent to $12.1 billion. Brazil expects a further substantial reduction io its trade deficit of $2.5 billion during

Although Brazil's total external public and private indebtedness is high at $22 billioo, it has managed over the last five years to stretch out debt maturities to create a better debt profile. It should be noted that Brazil's indebtedness includes $4 billion to $6 billion of inter-company loans of a semiequity character. Moreover, Brazil still retains $4 billion in reserves and has $1 billion available io International Monetary Fund facil-

Brazil will remain credit-worthy as long as its export sector is strong and its borrowing wisely managed.

South Korea is an example of a country that more or less borrowed its way through the recession and succeeded in avoiding a severe drop io growth. Uncertainty over possible military conflict with North Korea diminished during 1975. In the second half textile exports began to rise, a record rice crop helped reduce food imports, and international reserves increased by almost $500 million.

Korea's external debt, mostly owed to governments and international institutions, is high but well managed, and the capital is effectively used in atimulating development. The Government seems aware it must continue in 1976 to pursue economic policies designed to help stem inflation and carefully manage its balance of payments.

1 expect Korea to qualify for private capital markets in 1976 to meet its anticipated balance of payments dericat, indicating that private iovestors are confident about its

A generation ago the world economy was less able to belp less developed countries. Significant developments bave since built resilience into the international financial system and the developmental process.

Bankers look even more closely at lending abroad than they do at home. They look stable socio-political environments and a sound productiva base providing strong export earnings. The quality of a country's economic management is the most important criterion.

Banks have been lending to governments for many years, but since World War II not one cent has been written off for balance of payments reasons. As for rescheduling or restructuring debt, most in the past has involved official, not private, loans. Most governments take a responsible attitude toward such negotiations. Ofteo these negotiations are initiated at the request of the lender, simply to avoid bunching maturities, thereby aiding both parties.

Also, most governments are careful to maintain their creditworthiness in the private market because they know it is an increasing ly important source of finance for loog-term economic growth.

The Economists' View

By THOMAS E. MULLANEY

government and in the private sector have been patting themselves on the back for the patting themselves oo the back for the perceptiveness of their forecasts last fall on the likely performance of the American economy this year-and with good reason. Some have even begun to tilt their projections slightly upward now that nearly everyone is convinced that the incumbeot recovery is not a mere flash in the pan.

The generally optimistic assessments made by the economic analysts last fall have been confirmed in highly favorable statistics so far this year. The pre-liminary figures on business activity for March and the first quarter, issued last week, signaled an economy rising even a bit faster than generally predicted a few

Their unchallenged message was this: The nation's recovery from recession, now 11 months old, is very much alive and graining stature, though still not free nf some normal growth pains.

Even the pessimists would find it difficult to fault the domestic economy's achievements in the first quarter of 1976. Real economic growth, after subtracting the effect of price increases, was strong in the last three months, and inflation has continued to subside. Moreover, industrial production gained steadily throughout the quarter, raising the level of factory and mine output about 10 percent above the recent recession's low point, even though the recent rate of increase has been tapering off slightly, and production currently is still about 4 percent under the pre-recession peak in September 1974indicating a degree of slack in some industries that some observers would like to see narrowed.

Other upbeat data included: the continued rise of personal income, at a pace faster than the inflation rate, signaling higher disposable income for the public and buttressing the improving level of consumer confidence; the surge in auto and other retail sales, by 30 percent in some categories, to almost-boom proportions; further gains on the employment front, and a favorable money and interest-rate climate.

"The icing on the cake," as one commentary observed, was the first-quarter surge in the stock market. That surge, however, came to a halt in recent days in much slower trading, leading some analysts to ask whether the market is foretelling a change of pace for the overall economy later this spring or summer Will all of the first quarter's good news continue in a broader-based advance, or was that period's gait too fast

In general, on the basis of a recent survey of more than 600 business economists and a questionnaire sent to a dozen leading members of the profession by The New York Times, the view is that there is further good news in store for the American economy this year. The economic world believes that the American economy still has strong momentum that almost certainly will push it to impressive new gains for the rest of the year. Still, some caution exists about the climate in prospect for early 1977, or sooner, in the areas of inflation and unemployment. Recent upturns in commodity prices, especially steel and other metals, are a cause of growing

The most frequent comment heard these days is that the recovery is proceeding "normally, though not spec-tacularly." Prof. Murray L. Weidenbaum of Washington University, responding to a query from The Times, said: 'The doubting Thomases will be proved wrong; all of 1976 is likely to be a year of continuing, albeit not booming, recovery."

Essentially, that was the view expressed by the other 11 respondents to the Times questionnaire although Prof. Walter W. Heller of the University of Minnesota commented: "The direction of the economy is good, but. its level is still dismal."

To avoid a slowdown next year, he called for an increase in the Federal budget to the area of $415 to $420 billioo, an extension of the tax cuts beyond mid-year, a rejection of a payroll tax increase, and a continued policy of keeping "the Fed's feet off the monetary brakes." Similar sentiments were beld by Nat Goldfinger, director of research for the American Federation of Lah Congress of Industrial Organizations. He also I mended the adoption of un accelerated public-work gram and a greatly expanded public-service jobs pri "The economy," he said, "remains weak, full of tainty and vulnerable to any adversa impact from at home or abroad."

Although many of the other business economies Times sampling also felt that Presiden. Ford's & lion for the next fiscal year was too tight and ware and suggested that it could run up to $15 billion all of them recommended that strong efforts be m keep it in that range, and not push it much higher

AFRAID TO QUIT?

Progressive Companies Are Always Looking

If you've been thinking about quitting, the chances ere that you should. It's better than waiting until you're tired. Because people who are unhappy with their jobs are also non-productive and poorly rewarded. And they're the first to go when the going gets tough. It you're earning $17,000 ... or $70,000 annualty; a work situation which is better suited to your talents is bound to be more satisfying, more rewarding and more secure. To find out how to make the most of your talents—and how to lind greater satisfaction in what you do-why not phone or write for e conflidential interview. No cost, the obligation. You'll wonder why you clich't quit a whole lot sooner.

meis, in fact, must be watchsides. The success of Palestiionalist candidates in last ections on the occupied West the Jordan River, following oting there, has presented ithorities with the prospect eater intest and more insisands for independence. There. w disturbances yesterday. local administrations had gely aligned with Jordan's sein and, in most cases, had d with occupation authorimilitant new leaders identify ely with the Palestine Liberanization, whose claim to repe people of the West Bank, rather than Kiog Hussein's, has been recognized by the Arab powers.

Israeli officials expected some changes from the voting, but not the sweeping radicalization that occurred. During nine years of Israeli occupation a generally better-educated generation of Arab leaders has emerged. Arab successes early in the 1973 war and the increasing international recogni-tion of the Palestinian movement ap-parently have helped create a growing nationalistic spirit.

Arab leaders contend the results demonstrate the preference of the West Bank's 600,000 inhabitants for an independent Palestinian state there and in the occupied Gaza strip. (See story on page 2).

Blumenthal Wins A Personal Vote

The law came down firmly on Albert Blumeothal's side last week, as the bribery-perjury indictment of the New York Assembly majority leader was thrown out of State Supreme Court with gusto. While a comfort to Mr. Blumenthal, the court's highly critical explanation for the dismissal represented a first and major setback for Charles Hynes, the state's special nursing bome prosecutor.

The indictment grew out of Mr. Blumenthal's relationship with Bernard Bergman, the New York mursing bome entrepreceur. At issue were the nature of Mr. Blumenthal's efforts in 1971 to help obtain a license for a Bergman nursing home, whether the legislator was acting in an official capacity and whether be accepted a bribe from Mr. Bergman.

In the judgment of Justice Aloysius Melia, who last month accepted Mr. Bergman's plea of guilty to bribing Mr. Blumenthal, Mr. Hynes did not even come close to having a case. Justice Melia said that the fact that Mr. Bergman understood his transaction with the Assemblyman as a bribe was no evidence that Mr. Blumenthal construed it as such. He said "Nobody claims, nor is there any proof, that the defendant ever received a cent from Bergman, or anyone on his behalf. . . ." And whatever Mr. Blumenthal did for the operator. the judge added, be did as a private citizen. Thus Mr. Bergman has pleaded guilty to bribing the Assemblyman and Justice Melia found no proof that Mr. Blumenthal had accepted a bribe.

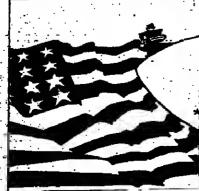

As for the perjury charges, the justice found the evidence too murky and elusive to sustain them. He scored Mr. Hynes for exceeding his jurisdiction; for technical reasons, the judge said the perjury charges should have been prosecuted by the Manhattan District Attorney, not Mr. Hynes. He said Mr. Hynes had piled "inference upon inference" to make a case and bad "unduly coerced" the grand jury, by, among other things, pressing it to reach a decision when some members wanted to adjourn for the night.

Mr. Blumenthal and his Democratic colleagues were understandably elated over the dismissal. The party has been having its share of trouble with the law, and with elections in the fall, it is concerned about its image.

Though Mr. Blumenthal's legal troubles are cleared up, assuming Mr. Hynes does not get the case reinstated on appeal, the matter of political involvement in the New York nursing bome scandal is not. As part of a deal with the prosecutor, Bernard Bergman, who was well-connected with both Democrats and Republicans, promised to tell all he knows about "political people."

Since January 1975, when be was appointed to investigate the state's nursing bomes, Mr. Hynes has gained a reputation as a cautious and discreet prosecutor, and has been cited favorably by critics of the legal tactics of Manrice Nadjari, the outspoken special state prosecutor on corruption. Last week, Mr. Hynes was being criticized much as Mr. Nadjari has

The Mideast Turmoil May Yet Produce Some Hope

By TERENCE SMITH

JERUSALEM-Restraint, that rarest of commodities in the Middle East, has been on conspicuous display in the region recently, leading to hope here that something positive may actually emerge from the year of chaos in Lebanon and other developments in the area.

In a curious way, the bloodshed in Lebanon bas stabilized the situation on the Israeli-Syrian front. Both nations are too preoccupied with the Lebanese crisis to risk a confrontatino with each other. As a result, it seems likely that Syria will agree to renew the mandate of the United Nations peace-keeping force on the Golan Heights that is due to expire on May 30. There are even some optimists here who believe that there is a chancejust a chance—that some sort of Israeli-Syrian negotiation can get underway after the Lebanese situation cools down. It is far from a certainty, but what seemed inconceivable a few months ago today seems at least within the realm of possibility.

Other developments' in the region could seem to reinforce the possibilities for meaningful change. President Anwar al-Sadat of Egypt bas moved further away from reliance oo the Soviet Union and is actively seeking Western aid. King Hussein of Jordan maintains his links to Washiogtoo but also aligns himself closely with Syria, The Palestine Liberation Organization, distracted by Lebanese events, has no time for military or diplomatic action against Israel. The long-quiescent Arabs of Israel and the West Bank have demonstrated their commitment to Palestinian nationalism.

Taken together, these seemingly disparate developments demonstrate one thing: Even in a presidential year, the situation in the Middle East continues to change and evolve, opening up both promising possibilities and the potential for more trouble. Some of the more promising include the following:

• Syria has played its hand in Lebanon with remarkable restraint, carefully co-ordinating lts moves with the United States, which has in turn cautioned Israel against any hasty, knee-jerk reactions. This new willingness of Damascus to cooperate with the West, could in the opinion of some policymakers here, extend to a reconsideration of the carlier decision not to enter into any negotiations with Israel on the Golan Heights under American

Sucb negotiations seemed out of the question a few months ago both because of Syria's insistence that the Palestinians be involved in the next diplomatic phase and as a result of the huge gaps between the Israeli and Syrian positinos. In sum, Syria is demanding a complete Israeli withdrawal from the Golan Heights while Israel is offering-at best-a "cosmetic" withdrawal of a mile or two.

The gap between the twn positions has not oarrowed. Sentiment remains strong inside Israel for retention of the Heights, and the presence of Israeli settlements there is a major obstacle to concessioos. But the Syrian-American co-ordioation during the Lebanese crisis has at least improved the atmosphere between Damascus and Washington.

 Israel, too, has demonstrated unaccustomed restraint throughout the Lebanese crisis. The Government has held back, despite repeated statements by Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabio and others that Israel would "not stand idly by" if Syrian troops

The Syrians are now indisputably inside, though estimates of their number and role vary, and Israel bas contented itself with warnings against crossing "the red line." The term has not been publicly defined, but it is interpreted here as meaning greater numbers of Syrian troops than would be reasocably required to deal with the immediate Lebanese crisis, or their deployment south of the Litani River, in the area of the Israeli frootier.

Everyone Wants Stability

Short of that, Israel seems likely to cootinue to hold back. The restraint is partly because of American pressure, but also because in the shortterm at least, Syria is playing a stabilizing role in Lebanon. The Syrians bave been actively promoting a compromise that would prevent a partition of Lebanon into a Christian redoubt surrounded by a militant, leftist Moslem state. Since Israel wishes to avoid that as well, the short-term Syrian role is viewed here as constructive. The stress is on the phase "short-term," bowever, since Israeli officials believe Syria's long-term ambition is still to control and eventually annex Lebanon into a 'Greater Syria."

· Almost unnoticed amidst the furor in Lebanon, tha latest Israeli-Egyptiao disengagement agreement has gone into effect and is working smoothly. More smoothly, in fact, than most persons had hoped. Israeli and Egyptian soldiers are observing the cease-fire scrupulously and are even sharing electricity and water in the Abn Rudeis area. The result is a remarkable degree of stabilization, a kind of tacit peace, on the most important and potentially destructive front in the Middle East.

As a result, the prospect of major new fighting in the area seems less today than it did just a few months ago. Lebanon could still explode, of course, and the diplomatic deadlock remains in effect, but the fact that the countries bave so far weathered the Lebanese situation bas changed the atmosphere in the Middle East. Possibilities exist today that would have been unthinkable at this time last year. The question of whether they will be explored depends largely on Damascus and the Syrian willingness to expand the contacts with the United States. For that relationship, Lebanon is the test case.

The Law Is Never Far From Public Officials

By TOM GOLDSTEIN

In the view of the law, public officials and public servants may be different from other citizens. Under a Supreme Court ruling earlier this month, policemen can be told to wear short hair and not to wear beards; under the Hatch Act, Federal civilian employees cannot engage in partisan political activities; under the Sullivan case libel ruling, public officials, without recourse, can be defamed to a way ordinary persons cannot.

In many areas of the law, bowever, a single standard prevails. Last week, after a judge dismissed an indictment against him, Albert H. Blumenthal, the New York State Assembly majority leader, said: 'I believe that this is a reaffirmation and reassurance for all public officials that they will ultimately be protected from patently false charges."

In dismissing the indictment, Acting Supreme Court Justice Aloysius J. Melia excoriated the special state prosecutor, in language seldom seen in judicial opinions, for violating several well-established legal rules designed to protect the rights of defendants.

Assuming the indictment is not restored by an appellate court, Mr. Blumenthal will have had bis legal vindication, but he has no way of restoring the damage that may have been done to his repotation-no small matter to a person who needs the periodic approval of voters.

And while in theory the same standard of justice applies equally to everyone, in practice public officials are more exposed to the working of the law. Reasonably so, since in holding public office they hold the public trust and are therefore more closely watched. That natural teodeocy bas been accelerated by the disclosures of Watergate (as Mr. Blumenthal noted). The result could be greater and beneficial protection of the public from its elected and appointed trustees, but it could also mean uneven and sometimes unfair enforcement of the law.

Special Pressures

It is arguable that if Henry F. O'Brien, the Suffolk County district attorney, were a private citizen, he would not now be the subject of a engaged in sexual abuse and sexual miscooduct, two misdemeanors that are rarely prosecuted. The case is the outgrowth of a political dispute between Mr. O'Brien and the Suffolk Police Commissioner, Eugene R. Kelley.

Like other prosecutors, special prosecutors are obligated to see that justice prevails, oot merely to seek indictments and convictions. But they are under special pressures as well: Invariably, they have been named after publicized allegations of serious wroogdoing that bave created a public expectation of indictments.

Maurice H. Nadjari, the special prosecutor for corruption io the criminal justice system in New York City, was named in 1972. The Knapp Commission, which had investigated allegations of widespread police corruption and official laxity in dealing: with such corruption, recommended that such an office be established.

The scope of the new office was extended beyond police corruption. The commission noted "numerous accusations of corruption among prosecutors, lawyers and judges," but it did not offer any documenta-

A public expectation bad been established, an . expectation that was reinforced by Mr. Nadjari. Two months after be took office, be said he was. checking the records of "more than 20 judges." So far, be has obtained indictments against nine / jodges, and his noe conviction has been overturned.

Governor Carey, criticizing Mr. Nadjari for "not getting close enough to people high enough soon enough to suit me," tried to dismiss him last December, but the attempt was thwarted. The special prosecutor was given until June 30 to complete his investigations.

It is an open and ultimately unanswerable questioo whether the apparent lack of success of some special prosecutors to indict and coovict high-. ranking officials is a result of time pressure, political. pressure, incompetence, the difficulty of developing such cases or simply because the existence of official corruption has been overstated.

What is less open to debate is the fact that the presence of such prosecutors has contributed to a public expectation that more public officials will be brought to justice.

Public officials are not, bowever, without protection. In 1857, during an investigation of charges of corruption within its own chambers. Coogress hurriedly passed a law providing immunity from criminal prosecution for all persons testifying "for any fact or act touching which he shall he required . to testify." That was the first immunity statute, and it had the effect of inducing the most suspect members of Congress to come before the committees.

But attitudes toward immunity statutes bave undergone constant shifts. In the late 1930's, there were expressions of public shock that public officials could retain their offices although they would' not waive immunity. The New York Legislature passed a series of laws requiring public officials either to testify without immunity or lose their jobs.

Other states have similar statutes. These laws have come under severe scrutiny, and many have been declared unconstitutional on the ground that it is unfair to penalize an individual for exercising his privilege against self-incrimination. It is one nf these provisions that is now being challenged by Patrick J. Cunningham, the Democratic state chairman and party leader in the Bronz, who has refused to waive immunity before a special grand jury investigating alleged political corrugation.

The World

In Summary

Trouble on the Left, in Both Italy and France

Very little changed last week in the Italian political crisis that seems certain to force national elections in June, but the political paralysis is hurting the already-weak economy. The lira has fallen to the lowest point ever in relation to the dollar.

The lira has dropped 30 percent in value against American currency since January; then a dollar was worth 600 lire, last week a dollar was worth 900 tire. The reason for the immediate economic crisis is largely political: The coalition behind President Aldo Moro's fragile minority Government crumbled two weeks ago in a dispute over abortion reform. Elections in June, a year earlier than scheduled, seem inevitable. The parties spent much of last week maneuvering for the best possible precampaign positions, each blaming its rivals for the current crisis.

The principal concern about those elections is the likelihood that the litalian Communist Party will either win outright or make gains that will require its being included in the Government.

France's Uneasy Spring

An apparent shift to the left by voters is bebind the earlier-than-usual start of campaigning in France for national elections that will not be held uotil the spring of 1978. The opposition Socialist - Communist alliance is already predicting victory, and President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing is worried. They may be right.

Mr Giscard's troubles include divisions within his governing coalition and popular resentment over the country's chronic economic difficulties. Last week violence erupted during a protest march that was tangentially related to the conflict between the political parties. About 20,000 students were demonstrating against changes in educational policy that will correlate university curriculums with the needs of French business. The demonstrators advocated continued emphasis on liberal arts and opposed closer ties between business and the universities. They were said to be mainly leftists, and Prime Minister Jacques Chiriac claimed that their activities were part of an effort to weaken the Government.

Concern in Washington

The possibility that Communists night gain power in a government belonging to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization was addressed once again by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and by foreign policy experts associated with past Democratic Administrations.

Mr. Kissinger went beyond his previous warnings and advanced the rough equivalent of a European domino theory: If Communists gain formal power in Italy, he said. "other European countries will also be tempted to move in the same direction."

George W. Ball, Paul C. Warnke and Zbigniew Brzezinski, all distinguished foreign policy analysts, like Mr. Kissinger, addressed the American Society of Newspaper Editors. They argued that while the United States should not encourage Communist participation in the Italian Government such a development would not be fatal to the Atlantic alliance, and that rather than trying to prevent it from happening the United States should prepare to deal with such a government.

Back to Cyprus, By Indirection

The Ford Administration has accelerated its effort to insure that the United States will have long-term use of what it believes are important military facilities in Turkey and Greece. But the parallel agreements it signed, last month with Turkey and last week with Greece, must be approved by Congress. Such approval seems unlikely without progress in the stalled negotiations on Cyprus.

The tentative agreements provide for direct military aid to Turkey of $1 billion and to Greece of $700 million over the next four years; additional aid to help modernize Greek and Turkish armed forces, and administrative control by the two governments over the installations that bave normally been under American jurisdiction. Turkey also has agreed to reopen the 26 American bases it closed last year (in retallation for an earlier, Congressionally-mandated American cut-off of arms).

The Administration will try to get both agreements approved by Congress simultaneously but, because there is substantial opposition in Coogress to the agreement with Turkey, the White House may wait for movement on the Cyprus negotiations. Last week, thosa talks appeared near another breakdown, with each side blaming the other and both sides probably responsible. Turkish Cypriots are not eager to bargain away any of the 40 percent of Cyprus they now occupy; Greek Cypriots reportedly hope that the breakdown will spur rejection by Congress of the arms aid to Turkey.

With the two sides deadlocked, however, the American agreements may bave another effect: The State Department bopes that the financial aid in each agreement will encourage Greece and Turkey to move toward settlement on Cyprus.

India, China Rapprochement?

India and China are planning to exchange ambassadors for the first time since a border dispute alieoated the two nations 15 years ago. The moves could have an important impact throughout Asia, especially if New Delhi's action represents a desire to essert a degree of independence from the Soviet Union.

India relies beavily on military and economic aid from Russia; a new five-year trade agreement between the two countries was signed last week. Nevertheless, renewed ties to China are being taken by some observers as a sign that India wishes partially to resume a policy of conalignment in great-power politics. Since the border war, India and China have kept diplomatic contact at a level below that of ambassador.

Improved relations between New Delhi and Peking, both oow members of the "nuclear club," could also affect India's immediate oeighbors, Pakistan and Bangladesh. China has always strongly supported Pakistan and has sought to gain leverage with the new regime in Bangladesh, where India was the principal outside influence until the assassination of Sheik Mujibur Rahman last August. Lessened tension between India and China might be expected to lessen tension among the neighbors on the subcontinent.

Asian diplomats also suggested that the rapprochement between India and China is important for what it tells about Chinese foreign policy. After the death of Prime Minister Chou En-lai last January and the dismissal of Deputy Prime Minister Teng Hsiaooing, there was some question that Peking might abandon its outward-looking foreign policy of recent years. The Indian overture seems to indicate it will not.

Prague Remains A Moscow Echo

The 15th Congress of Czechoslovakia's ruling Communist Party that ended yesterday was characterized, not surprisingly, by strict Communist orthodoxy and expressions of loyalty to the Soviet Union.

to the Soviet Union.

Czechoslovakia remains the most repressive of the Eastern bloc countries. The Soviet Union maintains its dominanca through military means—about 70,000 Soviet troops have remained since the 1968 invasion to suppress a liberal regime — and through economic influence.

The pro-Moscow rhetoric served to gloss over a conflict within the Czechoslovak Communist Party between a faction led by Gustav Husak, the party's First Secretary, and one led by Vasil Bilak, a Polithuro member, that advocates even closer ties with the Soviet Union.

Not all of the disagreement was beneath the surface. Mr. Husak opened the party Congress with an offer of leniency to followers of Alexander Dubeck, the relatively liberal party leader who was deposed after the Soviet-led invasion. Mr. Bilak, in a newspaper article, subsequently attacked "revisionists" who place national interests "ahead of the interests of the world proletariat." Mr. Husak and Mr. Bilak were rivals for party leadership in 1968 when Mr. Dubcek was removed.

Kindness Persists Even as Children Are Brutalized

By JAMES M. MARKRAM

BEIRUT—It is easy to be ambushed in the shell pocked, garbage-strewn streets of Beirut—by teenagers with real weapons or, more often, by scampering packs of children emulating their elders with sticks, pieces of lead pipe or, in the wealthier quarters, with plastic submachine guns.

"Bangi Bangi" cry tha children, pleying at the war that has been their environment and reality for a year. They are no different from American or European children acting out the same sort of thing, but the Lebanese children have lost relatives or friends, trembled through nights of artillery and rocket duels, bave probably seen corpses in back.

This is a war without statistics. The estimates of killed run from 10,000 to 20,000, the number of Christians and Moslems displaced by the violeoce runs into thousands, the number of Lebaoese who have fled abroad runs into the tens of thousands, the population of Beirut itself may have halved, but no one may ever measure its toll in definite numbers.

A geoeration of young Lebanese has been brutalized in a struggle that has so many undercurrents and dimensions. A young man who for a pittance once washed the windsbields of rich foreigners and Lebanese oo Beirat's Mediterranean esplanade will understand ooe thing if this war ever ends. With his Kalashnikov assault rifle in his hand, paid deceotly by some warlord and giveo off-duty pillaging privileges, he was perhaps bappier and certainly wealthier.

"It is oot the fighting," said a noocombatant Palestinian discussing the impact of the war on his 13 children. "They will forget that. It is this Christian and Moslem thing. In Palestine we never talked of such things. Now all my children hear is Christian-Moslem, Christian-Moslem."

And yet at night, when the 155-millimeter artillery shells rained down on thia Moslem's lower-middle-class neighborbood, his family took refuge in the basemeot of his apartment building with Christian families who bave lived unmolested, though uneasily, in a part of Beirut dominated by Nasserite gummen.

The picture of Moslem versus Christian has always been too simple, too sweeping, for, particularly in the beautiful mountains of southern Lebanon, thousands of Christians have lived out the war untroubled. In some cases, leftist organizations have disarmed them, but there are innumerable stories of Christians and Moslems rescuing each other. The gunmeo who rule Lebanon are a minority. The telephooe lines hum nightly with concerned people of different faiths inquiring about each other's well-being.

But this bas also been a frightful confessional massacre—reminisceot of the killing when the Indian subcontinent divided bloodily in 1947—and Lebanon is infected with religion-grounded paranola and hatred. It will take a loog time before the memories are effaced. After all, some militant Marooite Catholics think they are still reliving the massacres of 1860 at the hands of the feudal Druzes.

A Failure of Leadership

If there is one thing that a majority of it agree upon, it is that the old men who is into this conflict must step aside. It is question as to whether this will happen, ordinary people would like to end a situation a trip of a few blocks may mean death if it the wrong religion listed on their government identity cards, there is no sign that a new, minded leadership is about to take over.

There are tentative efforts to build a se form movement—among young Moslem Inte by the Greek Catholic Bishop of Berrut, Haddad, by a Greek Orthodox doctor nam Abu Haidar—but so far they are in a losing tition with the gun.

Lebanon has no government, no police, and, if it does not explode into the scen next Middle Eastern war, it is almost certa under the tutelage of Syria and the Properties movement. It seems that Syria supported by the United States and Franclike to retain the traditional ruling class country, tampering with its antiqueted system to make concessions to the Moslem that has been underrepresented for so lo traditionelists, who have suffed the emergence leadership, will certainly not object propped up.

Beirut, once the lively cosmopolitan ground of the Middle East, bas sunk to it of a violent provincial backwater. Its conheart has been gutted end looted and it some time before an interoational comp think about doing much more than salvifiles and electric typewriters here.

Yet, the Labanese have an astonishing to forgive and forget; after all the death and tion, many Lebanese who have stayed clesstruggle privately caution their foreign against overhasty post-mortems.

A year ago, shortly after the massace Palestinians ignited the war, a Lebanese culture and great toughness, was trying to his complicated nation to a newly arrive can. Raising his glass of cloudy arak, he a macabre toast: "Even while we are his other we are loving each other."

Black Nationalism, White Racism Are Forcing a Choice

American Options in Southern Africa

By LESLIE H. GELB

WASHINGTON—The black-white issue in southern Africa is forcing American leaders to confront ever deeper levels of what is realistic and what is right in forming policy. The potential for human catastrophe imbedded in this vestige from another century can no longer be ignored in Washington now that Moscow and Havana, with the world looking on, are threatening to liberate the blacks by force.

When Secretary of State Heory A. Kissinger files off to Africa on Friday, his speeches and briefing papers are expected to dramatize the Administration's commitment to majority rule with mioority rights, to more economic ald, and to an Africa free from superpower conflict. The question that will dog him at every stop will be "is this enough?"

As goals, these will obtain wide support, but by themselves, they could mean very much or nothing. The meaning of the policy will be revealed in the means—the pressures that could be brought to bear on the whites, the amount and the conditions of aid—and in the domestic political costs incurred, particularly with American business interests but also with those whose only interest in Africa is in stopping Communism.

There are three sets of countervailing factors that any United States policy will have to address. First, the commitment of many black African leaders to the struggle against white supremacy in Rhodesia, South-West Africa and South Africa will clearly require outside economic aid for the black countries. Their economies will be harmed not only by the mobilization but because their economies are largely dependent on the white states.

Second, the military weakness of the black states, the divisive rivalries within black liberation movements and the military superiority of South Africa and Rhodesia means that the blacks would not stand a chance in a war against the white states without substantial and active outside military belp—including the direct use of force.

The Historical Certainty

Third, deeply-rooted white determination to maintain their economic and racial privileges is counterpoised by the historical certainty that a few million whites cannot forever keep down many millions more blacks and the fact that southern Africa has now become a major arena for rivalry among the United States, China, and the Soviet Union.

The Administration has three bruad alternatives to shape these factors toward its goals: (1) straidle the black-white issue and concentrate on deterring further imilitary moves by Moscow and Havana; (2) tilt slightly in favor of the blacks and help to organize the blacks against the outsiders; and (3) commit fully to the blacks in the hope the "ootsider" problem will then go away.

The straddle option has little support oow, even in the Administration. Justifying covert aid in Angola primarily to keep the Soviet-backed faction from power did not work with the blacks or with Congress. The tilt-toward-the-blacks alternative is what the Administration has chosen: brandishing the rhetorical sword at Moscow and Havana to deter "future Aogolas" while issuing more urgent and lous calls for majority rule. Most Africado not want Soviet advisers and Cubirunning amok on their cootinent. With mind, Mr. Kissinger can be expected the put together a black diplomatic coalition superpower intervection.

The notion is that the need for direct inly outsiders to bring about black liber, be minimized by a number of steps.

These steps would include: encouragend dropping the word "peaceful" from statemethe need for change in southern Africand more visible association with leftist bless; economicald to nations such as Zai Mozambique to help them weather the difficulties of closing their borders to the Rhodesia—of course conditioned on their anot to let in Soviet or Cuban troops. Whe African specialists in and out of Governmento be the weaknesses of this alternative are in a third alternative.

Self-defeating Policy

This would be a clear-cut commitmen: blacks. It has been advanced most pro by Senator Dick Clark, Democrat of Io the Senate's reigning expert on Africa. made two arguments against the Admini approach. He believes that the two-trac is self-defeating because threatening Mosi Cuba with American force could serve encourage the white Rhodesians in their sigence against negotiating majority rule bope that Washington will bail them out it Mr. Clark also contends that the best get rid of the Sovlet threat is to solve t problem. He sees the Africans as heing line to demand that the Russians leave, progress is being made toward liberation.

A number of specific measures would On Rhodesia: Put a lot of Administration behind the repeal of the so-called Byrd am that allows the United States to import and other raw materials in defiance of a Nations resolution; crack down on Americannies doing business there.

On South-West Africa, where South Afritinues to rule despite a United Nations it declaring that oation to be free and independent a Treasury Department ruling that allow States firms to recaive tax credits here it paid to South Africa on business operation

On South Africa: Give encouragement to in its efforts to persuade Rhodesia to peaceful settlement with the blacks, but i clear that the nub of the issue to Ambibeir own policy of apartheid.

It is far from clear that Congress would many of these measures. The House of reptives recently voted, for example, not to the Byrd ameodment. But it is also far from that doing less will be enough to re-estably United States in African eyes. In days give the Admioistration could have waited to see was time to judge what would work. We russians and Cubans are there, and the have an alteroative.

In the end, the third option, the one that the most promise to those who know Africa, a tates paying hard domestic political costs the administrations would be willing to best election year. And there seems to be enough to get through until next January. But the Administration may not have that luxury.

ries, many and commentators has strage ing for some time oow of American "withdrawal," "paralysis," "oeo-isolationism," eveo "abandonsponsibilitiea." The phrases flow after each oew Patrician and Angola, and reach vietnam, Watergate, Responsible officials do not make it sound quite so drastle, but they share a sense of uncertainty ebout what to expect from the United States, and many of them complain of American retrenchment. At e recent meeting of Common Market government heads in Luxembourg, the mood was one of helpless and even bitter

France warned that Africa was about to topple loto the Soviet orbit, taking perhaps more seriously than other observers the Ford Administration's warning ebout what would happen if Congress refused to intervene in Angola.

There was e general awareness of the growth of Soviet military power (which the leaders have known about for years, but which seems suddenly to have struck their coosciousness anew) and that the rhetnric of déteote might work to demonilize the West and benefit Moscow.

Some high officials think there is a sea-change coming in America, as a result of a shift in the power balance between the President and Congress. Some think that is a threat, not yet realized. Some, the veterans, tend more to suppose that election year blues will lift when the ballots are counted and the United States will show its familiar, 13

The worries are not clearly focused. Nobody influential has suggested that the United States would not go to the defense of Western Europe in case of attack, nor that an ettack has become any more likely. But there has been more talk of the danger of Europe's "Finlandization."

The general public has not paid much attention to these politicians' and officials' enneems. Countries are focusing inwards, on their immediate grievances and troubles, and when they speak to their electorates, the leaders are following this trend. The result is that they do not speak openly nf their fears. Another result of this concentration on the hnme-front is that judgments about what is happening in the United States and the world tend to reflect internal partisan squshbles even more than usual.

France's iofluential daily, Le Moode, took the Kissinger-Sonnenfeldt statements on American policy, made to a group of Uoited States ambassadors last December, as further proof that Washington is determined to prevent the rise of an effective power partner in Europe. Others have taken the compressed policy review as an indication that the United States is losing the will to cootain Soviet

The confusion has only compounded itself as the question is put about what the Europeans wish America would do. One, sage, retired participant in the highest councils said: "Don't worry. The West has only lost where it was wrong-Indochina, Portuguese Africa, and next will come Rhodesia." He belittled the widespread complaints among European officials that revelations about the Central Intel- :ligeoce Ageocy, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, corporate hribery, were undermining America's authority.

"There has never been so much American intervention, and clumsy at that, in European affairs as now, with your laadera shaking their fists about which governments they will and won't tolerate," he said. It was a reference to the Ford Administration campagn against Communists in France and Italy.

But among the people who make policy, this calm, eveo bemused view is the exception. More common is the fear that somehow America may stop being willing and able to shield Europe, not only on its own territory but in areas of the developing world where it has vital interests.

In an inchoate way, the fear is begioning to spread to layers of society who feel they can only lose as the uncertainty spreads, A group of French businessmen said that many of their friends were sending money abroad now, to Canada, the United States and Brazil, not to West Germany nr Switzerland. It isn't clear whether they are worried about the Russians or the French Communists. But they do say, they lack confidence in the future of Western Europe.

The fraying fabric of the Common Market, reflected in the failure of the nine government heads to agree on anything, even a hland communique, when they met io Luxembourg, is an element in the loss of hope and assurance afflicting European policy-makers. It is generally admitted that there simply is no longer any point in mouthing slogans about a common European defense, either to displace American influence as the Gaullists always wished, nr to huttress and if necessary replace it, as the Atlanticists have sought. It isn't about to happen and that makes the Europeans more conscious of their dependence on America

It isn't so much the election-year dehate on foreign policy which has upset the Europeans, as their perception of American unwillingness in undertake major foreign interventions during an election year.

But the lack of cohesion and seose of common purpose among Europe's leaders has gone so far that they can't even reach a common view on what they wish America

Perhaps, hy the time of the alliance's spring meating in Oslo next month, a nucleus of the Europeans will manage to come up with some kind of suggestion to America. But nobody is betting on it in the present mood.

By most standards, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt Germany should be the dominant leader of the European democracies. distrust is only one problem, and there are those e that Mr. Schmidt could overcome that if he would really try to assert himself. Instead, as his domestic political campsign comes closer, he is drawing back into a narrowly political role aimed at the home audience.

His difficulty at home amounts to this: Nothing scares Germans more than inflation and unemployment, the disastrous combination that led to Hitler and World War II. To Americans (or Frenchmeo, or Britons), West Germany's 5.2 percent unemployment and 5.4 percent inflation rates may seem enviably low. To Germans, they are the highest sustained rates since they began picking themselves up out of the rubble of the war.

Hslmut Schmidt proposes to wio in October by playing up to the domestic perception of things. "I will tell the people here from what kinds of dangers io neighboring countries we have protected them." he said in an interview last week. That is-Germans, look around at Communists on the rise in Italy, at double-digit inflation to France, at labor unioo chaos in Britain, at the sinking pound and liva and think about the strong D-mark. Europe's in had shape,

This may be good domestic politics, and it may be what Mr. Schmidt needs to overcome his Social Democratic Party's recent unpopularity with voters in II state and West Berlin elections. Ha and his coalition partners, Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher's Free Democrats, now have a 46-seat majority in the West German Parliament, but the opposition Christian Democratic Union and its capdidate, Helmut Kohl, could whittle this majority down considerably in October, or even win.

So his own assessment of his domestic political needs doesn't leave Helmut Schmidt much to do at meetings of the Common Market leaders (like the one early this month io Luxemhourg) except to lectura, and carp.

At home, he is telling his people in speeches and interviews that the best thing they can do for Europe is to be a shining example to their neighbors. Other countries, he says, can learn from the "co-determination" system that fills almost half of a West German corporation's board room with labor representatives and helps keep the strike rate here so much lower than in France, Italy, or Britain.

This spring's wage agreements in the major industries have been running at just over 5.4 perceot increases for the year, certainly uninflationary. But a model for the French and the British? Hardly, the people in those countries think, their societies are much different, with class distinctions that are much sharper than in postwar West Germany. Besidea, it isn't moral posturiog from Bonn that other European countries oeed. Money, something like a West German Marshall Plan, might be more like it. Aod that simply is not in the cards—not under the hard-nosed Helmut Schmidt, and not under his conservative challeoger Helmut Kohl either, for that matter.

Mr. Trudeau, However, Won't Accept Ordinary Boundaries

By CLAUDE RYAN

MONTREAL-After 11 years in public life, nearly eight of them as Prime Minister, Pierre Elliott Trudeau can still surprise his fellow Canadians and Americao observers.

Mr. Trudeau has always been controvarsial but some of his actions and those of associates in recent weeks have made him even more so. The official Opposition, the Progressive Conservative Party, denounces Mr. Trudeau as a dictator, an irrepressible spender of public funds, as a friend of Communists such as Fidel Castro, and as a leader who allows political subordinates to profit from their offices. The Tory criticisms are partisan but they reflect a feeling of uneasiness about Mr. Trudeau that goes beyond his political opposents.

The uneasiness about Mr. Trudeau was recently accentuated by two initiatives. In the closing days of 1975, during a televised interview Mr. Trudeau was asked about the intention of his Government regarding price and wage controls imposed last year. Mr. Trudeau could easily have avoided trouble by merely reciting the main features of the law. But he chose instead to muse, as he likes to do no soch occasions, upon different theoretical options.

Mr. Trudeau's main argument was that cootrols having become necessary, there must have been important failings in the free market. He wnodered openly about whether it might become necessary to introduce fundamental changes in the existing economic order. He talked about the prospect of the oew society in which big government, big business and hig labor might play an increasingly important role in the economy.

The evocation of the new society raised such a storm in financial and business circles that the Prime Minister felt compelled to present a public explanation of his remarks. About the same time, Mr. Trudeau's troubles were aggravated hy his visit to Cuba, even though he had strong political and economic reasons to go there. Cuba is Canada's largest customer south of the Rio Grande, Further, Canada began 15 years ago to treat Castro's Cuba in a way quite different from the United States approach. As Canada tries to broaden her international contacts, it was only logical that Mr. Trudeau, who had gone to China, Russia, Western Europe and the United States, should also visit Latin American countries such as Mexico, Cuba and Venezuela.

But Mr. Trudeau and his wife established rapport with Mr. Castro and obviously developed personal admiration: for him. By citing Mr. Castro as a leader of exceptionalstature even as Cuban soldiers were fighting in Angola Mr. Toudeau infuriated his critics at home and some friendly people in the United States.

But these criticisms miss the real Trudeau. Before entering politics as a Liberal, Mr. Trudeau had strongly sympathized with Canada's version of European social democracy, the New Democratic Party. While studying at the London School of Economics, Mr. Trudeau was impressed with Harold Lasky's teachings. It was natural that upon returning to Canada in the early 1950's he should have been interested in what seemed to be the Caoadian equivalent of Britain's Labor Party.

Because of those antecedents, Mr. Trudeau's conversion to the Liberal Party in 1965 was received with skepticism. Friends accused him of having betrayed the ideals of his youth. Old-line politicians suspected him of infiltrating the Liberal Party merely to attain power more rapidly.

in the light of Mr. Trudeau's record, both interpretations appear unfounded. Mr. Trudeau has always been attached to individual liberties. He has always placed them above so-called collective liberties. He has always had a deep distrust of all collective forces iocluding trade unions, tha press and other established elites. The Liberal Party, with its absence of rigid doctrine and its flexible political positions, provided a natural home for a person like Mr.

A Progressive Record

Mr. Trudeau has been a reasonably progressive leader. Increased family allowances and old-age pensions, a vigorous policy of hilingualism in the Federal Government, a modernized and liberal employment insurance program. increased equalization payments to the poorer provinces, continued efforts to liberalize criminal laws and, more recently, a renewed attempt to abolish capital punishment, stiffer laws to regulate competition, bave been earmarks of his "Just Society." Most of those measures were put into effect without hampering the free enterprise system, Mr. Trudeau has always been keep on redistributing wealth hut has been conservative wheo it came to tampering with the economic system.

Some of his recent initiatives at home and abroad may have made Mr. Trudeau appear as a staunch Canadian nationalist. In fact, he has always been ao internationalist What he wants for Canada is not any abandonment of its international responsibilities hut a greater independence from the United States.

Canada had emharked after World War II upon a course of economic and cultural integration with the United States. Integration had been so successful that in several areas it had become synonymous with assimilation or excessive dependence. When it sets limits upon the entry of foreign capital and seeks closer links with the European Economic Community, Canada is not pursuing an anti-American policy. It is trying to assert its own identity.

Having no colonial past or imperialistic interests, Canada does not arouse in developing countries the suspicions which attach to the United States and Soviet Russia. Mr. Trudeau has seen this opportunity. After working on domestic affairs for most of his two terms, he now gives the impression of being interested in a broader role. He has made several previous attempts to achieve such a role, but without success.

It has become fashionable to criticize Mr. Trudeau in Canada. But to suppose that Canadians are ready to dismiss him is another matter. After being elected with a large majority in 1968, Mr. Trudeau was nearly defeated at the polls in 1972. A subsequent election in 1974 showed, however, that Canadians had wanted to chastise Mr. Trudeau rather than dismiss him. His Government is aging, like all governments which stay in power too long. But the newly elected Progressive Conservative leader, Joe Clark, still has much to do before he can establish himself as a real match for the Liberal leader.

A Little Late, Agreement on A Campaign Law

Congress has reached a major station on its slow progress toward reconstitution of the Federal Election Commission with agreement on compromise legislation. But, even if President Ford does not veto the bill, Federal subsidies to Presidential candidates probably will not resume until mid-May at the earliest, and there is growing evidence that a number of campaigna are beginning to hurt.

The leading Democrats on the ballot in Pennsylvania, a state that on April 27 votes for the third largest delegation to that party'a national convention, are barely niesting operating expenses there, and their advisers are in disagreement about bow to spend what they bave. No candidate has the cash oo hand to buy significant television and radio time; all of them are being diverted from campaign to fundraising appearances,

Ironically, the campaign spending reform law that provided for the subsidies also reduced caodidates' options for meeting deficits. Loans from individuals, for example, are now subject to the same $1,000 limit as contributions.

Of all the candidates for the Presidency, the man who now holds the office, Gerald R. Ford, appears to be in no financial difficulty. The campaign of bis challenger for the Republican nomination, Ronald Reagan, former Governor of California, is curreotly nearly $1 million in debt. The two men meet next in Texas May 1. For the Democrats, most analysts agree, anything that tends to promote confusion or prolong stalemate also tends to help Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, a candidate in all but name.

Matching funds were last paid out March 22. All that was required for them to continue, by meeting the objections of the United States Supreme Court, was passage of a simple bill providing that the election commissioners be appointed by the executive branch. The requirement became the occasion for a multitude of Congressional arguments about, and ameodations to, the campaign reform act itself.

The compromise bill provides the commissioners be properly appointed. It also continues to permit unions and corporations to solicit contributions from members and stockholders, respectively; requires, for the first time, unions and corporations to report funds spent to promote any candidate if the amount exceeds $2,000; and modifies the commission's power to establish and enforce campaign groundrules without Congressional supervision.

Pennsylvonio, Ex-Governor of Georgia Jimmy Carter's unfortunate turn of a phrase in discussing ethnicity was the main issue in the campaign last week. Both Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona and Senator Henry M. Jackson of Washington have tried to make political capital of Mr. Carter's use of the term "ethnic purity." But each has also been careful to declare, like Mr. Carter, that as President he too would preserve the ethnic integrity of established neighborhoods while upholding "Federal integration laws."

Texas. The May contest is the first and probably most important in a series of Southern and Midwestern tests for Mr. Ford and Mr. Reagan. The President last week termed Mr. Reagan a formidable opponent, and his choice of words was more than charitable. The Texas race is considered very close.

Utilities Drop Plan For Big Utah Plant

A plan to build the nation's largest coal-fired electric generating plant on Utah's scenic Kaiparowits Plateau has been abandoned by its sponsors, a consortium of power companies, because for a variety of reasons it had become economically risky.

The utility companies began planning the installation in 1963 to meet the anticipated power needs of southorn California and Arizona. The decision to end the project, they axid, was based upon rapidly increasing costs, the threat of environmental lawsuits and uncertainty about whether and when state and Federal regulatory approvals would be given. The companies were also evidently concerned because the region's demand for power had not been growing as quickly as had been expected. A similer trend are in underway nationwide.

Over the years the project's attractiveness as an investment had diminished. The plant was originally expected to produce 6 million kilowatts at a construction cost of $600 million; more recently the cost had been estimated at $3.5 million and the output at only 3 million kilowatts. Part of the added cost. $600 million, was attributed by the utility companies to increasingly stringent environmental protection standards imposed by the Federal Government.

Environmental groups, including the Sierra Club, had objected that the plant would degrade the air quality and other natural assets of a region of outstanding beauty. The plant site, near a number of national parks, forests and recreation areas, had been chosen because of its proximity to large coal deposits.

The abandonment of the Kaiparowits project could lead to a reevaluation of plans to build similar facilities in other parts of the west. Those projects have also been criticized on economic and environmental grounds.

Company Bribes, British Style

Two major European oil companies bave provided evidence that the practice of making payments to foreign political parties was not restricted to American corporations. British Petroleum and the Royal Dutch Shell Group have admitted secretly paying more than $6 million to Italian political parties from 1969 to 1973 to secure favorable government policies.

Several American oil companies, including Exxon, Mobil and Gulf, have already acknowledged contributing money to Italian parties for similar purposes. But unlike the American firms, which are privately owned, British Petroleum is controlled by the British Government, raising the possibility that the contributions could be viewed as interference by a foreign government in Italy's interoal affairs. The payments are under investigation by an Italian Parliamentary committee.

British Petroleum and Royal Dutch Shell, which is owned by a private Anglo-Dutch consortium, are said to have contributed to parties of Italy's ruling coalition to persuade the Italian Government to retain oil prices that reflected the cost of transporting oil around the Cape of Good Hope even though some of the oil involved traveled the much shorter distance from Libya. The companies also desired changes in oil excise taxes that would have saved them large sums.

According to unconfirmed reports. published in Britain, on two occasions the companies were granted tax benefits after talks between industry and Government officials. In one instance, it was said, the benefits were opposed in Parliament. The reports quoted from company memorandums describing a quid pro quo relationship between the contributions and advantages for the companies.

In the United States, the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation agreed last week to appoint a special committee to investigate and report publicly upon the corporation's 14 year practice of making payments to foreign government officials to secure orders. In return, the Securities and Exchange Commission has dropped legal charges that the payments, totaling about $25 million, violated Federal fraud and reporting laws. The Lockheed investigation could lead to disclosure of the names of the recipients.

Miss Hearst Decides to Talk

Patricia Hearst has decided to cooperate with the authorities in a number of possible cases involving her former associates. The decision presumably will mean a lesser sentence for Miss Hearst, who was convicted for taking part in a bank robbery, and might also head off her prosecution on other charges.

How much information Miss Hearst

How much information Miss Hearst will provide, and about whom, is not fully clear. William and Emily Harris will be the most immediately and perhaps most affected. Last week they were formally charged in an Alameda County court with participating in the kidnapping of Miss Hearst Feb. 24, 1974. Miss Hearst will testify in that case.

Miss Hearst is also said to have named Emily Harris as the person who fired the shot that killed a woman customer in a bank robbery in a Sacramento suburb last April.

Miss Hearst is reportedly willing to be a witness in a case involving three members of the self-styled Symbionese Liberation Army who allegedly took part with her in the bombing of two sheriffs cars.

According to transcripts of pretrial psychiatric interviews. Miss Hearst had considered plea bargaining sbortly after her arrest last September. The transcripts provide a detailed picture of a process that is not usually public, the evolution of a defense. Although Miss Hearst was hesitant about the efficacy of asserting she had been the unwilling victim of coercion, one pyschiatrist told her it was "the best explanation" he could think of for her participation in the activities of the Symbiocese Liberation Army and reassured her that it would not require her "to rat on people who don't deserve that from you."

Miss Hearat had another misfortune last week. She was taken to a hospital with a collapsed lung and minor surgery was performed on her. Her illness is not considered serious.

Mr. Ford Opts For Low Tariff

President Ford has decided against imposing higher tariffs or quotas on shoe imports, and the decision is expected to have major implications for United States trade relations. It also provides Mr. Ford's domestic economic policies with an added bonus: Shoe prices, at least, will stay stable.

Recently, modest restrictions were imposed on specialty steel imports, and a number of foreign countries had expressed concero that the United States was verging on reverting to protectionism. The restraints were placed under a part of the Trade Act of 1974 that established a variety of mechanisms, including tariffs and quotas, to assist American Industries claiming injury from imports: the shoe industry has petitioned for relief under the same provision. The decision on shoes will presumably help reassure other countries that United States trade policy is essentially open.

Currently, 40 percent of all nonrubber footware sold in the United States is imported, and the six-member International Trade Commission, established under the 1974 act to make decisions on injury, found unanimously that the domestic shoe industry is suffering from foreign competition and deserving of relief. It could not, however, reach a decision on what kind.

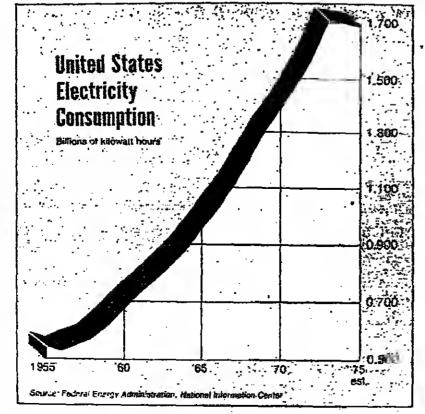

Three members bad recommended an increase of over 25 percent in the present tariffs. That Mr. Ford rejected as inflationary. He chose instead "adjustment assistance" for workers and companies in the industry. For workers, that will mean expanded unemployment compensation benefits; for companies, loans and technical assistance.

U.S. Sues to End Redlining

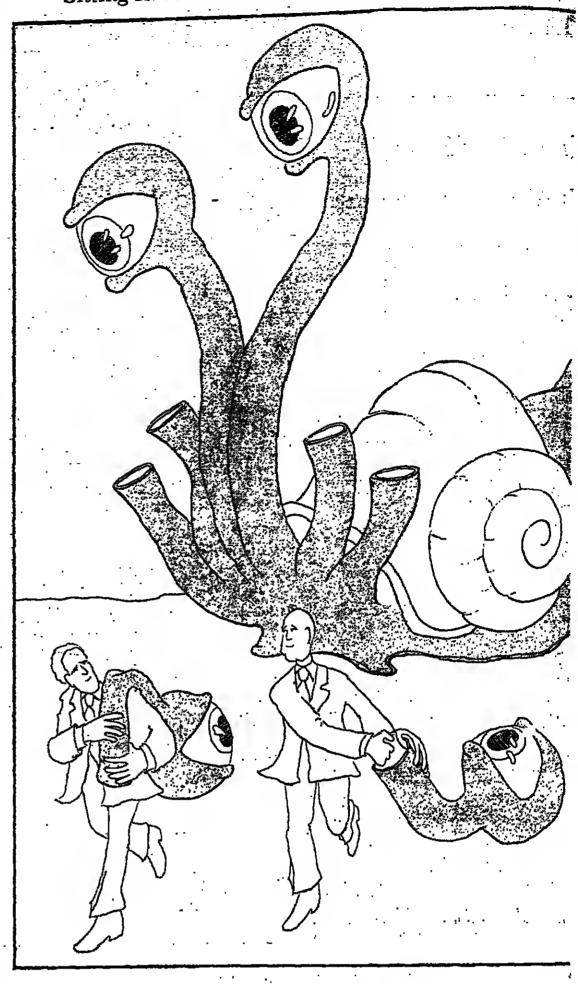

Lending institutions have often been blamed for contributing to the decay of black or racially mixed neighborhoods by unjustifiably refusing mortgages there; a practice known as "redlining." The Justice Department last week indicated it sbares that belief by filing a suit that accuses several nationwide organizations of banks and real estate appraisers of using racially discriminatory standards.

The department's object apparently is to persuade the defendants to agree to abandon guidelines that advise appraisers that dwellings in racially integrated areas "have a substantially lower value" and that loans on these homes are less secure than those in homogeneous neighborhoods. The department contends that these provisions violate Federal law and reflect not market conditions but the "myth" that property values decline when blacks move into a neighborhood.

Sitting In on a House-Senate Conference Committee

By WARREN WEAVER Jr.

WASHINGTON—A Congressional study designed to resolve the incongruities of the present Presidential nominating process has been abruptly shelved because some Senators wanted to be able to earn more than $15,000 a year in outside speaking fees. The action itself may seem incongruous, even by Congressional standards. But it was a completely consistent result of the procedure called the Congressional Conference that has determined the final shape of all important Federal legislation for the last 187 years. Until six months ago, conferences were closed to both the press and public; and no one reslly knew how such bizarre bargains were struck.

Last week, after four long and argumentative sessions, five Senators and aeven Representatives agreed on a single bill to reconstitute the Federal Election Commission and make several other significant chaoges to the campaign reform act of 1974. The course of their deliberations is a revealing lesson in the anatomy of a conference.

The purpose of a conference is the reconciliation of differences between Secate and House versions of a bill. The politics begin with the selection of a committee that must come up with a single agreed text. Senate leaders, in this case, adhered strictly to seniority in assigning their team, and consequently bad members that were strong on Senate prerogatives but light on experience with the long and complicated law. On the House side, Democratic Representative Wayne L. Hays of Ohio, the chairman, had been intimately involved in the House bill, and bad a solid phalanx of four conservative Democrats on whom he could rely. No campaign reform activists were on either team.

In conference, compromise language can only be adopted by a majority of both the Senators and the Representatives voting as two separate units. A natural consequence of the fact that one House can permanently block another from including any particular provision is an atmosphere of bluff and threat, two techniques that Mr. Haya has over the years reduced to a fine science.

Minutes after the first conference coovened, Senate members tried to push a provision in their bill that would add two independents to the three Democrats and three Republicans now on the commission. "We're not going to buy that," Mr. Hays announced, without benefit of any consultation with his House colleagues. After perfunctory discussion, Senator Robert C. Byrd, Democrat of West Virginia, moved that the Senate recede, the legislative terminology for surrender, and it did. Then a House provision requiring election commission members to give up outside employment, aimed at commission chairman Thomas B. Curtis, was also accepted by the Senate. Mr. Hays is an outspoken critic of the commission chairman, in public and private.

Discussing a compromise that would require labor unions to report only major political expenditures on behalf of favored candidates, Mr. Hays summed up a major principle of conference philosophy: "If the House takes the Senate version, it's got to have a little give to it."

Across the conference table—the Senators sit on one long side and the Representatives on the other—they call each other "Hugh" and "Wayne" with an informality uncharacteristic of most Congressional proceedings, But within each of the two groups it remains "Mr. Chairman" or "the gentleman from California." Still on occasion, theatrics colliven a session. When Mr. Hays wanted to illustrate

"voluntary" contributions made by union mem political committees, he turned to Representation. Deot. Democrat from Pennsylvania, a one-tir ficial, seized him by the lapels and shouted, "to contribute, don't you?"

Mr. Hays succeeded in defeating a Senate property of the service of the servi

was: "Over on your side, the staff writes the

The real crunch came late Tuesday morning, hours before Mr. Hays was scheduled to Senator Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, the Repleader, presented his honorarium package: the Sagree to a $30,000 annual ceiling oo speaking the current limit—if the fees were measured come basis after deducting booking agents the travel expenses of the speaker and his wife return, Seoator Scott explained, the Senate render the provision in its bill that would a member commission to study the Presidential system and to make recommendations carly n improvements in the current costly patchwork and caucuses.

The Senate would also give up a provisio all Federal officiala making $25,000 a year or a close their assets and income, and the Sena accept somewhat lower limits on the amount a can give party committees and party committees senate candidates.

Mr. Hays, who on principle strongly opposes I of any new commissions, said he would accept I but only if the speaking-fee ceiling were lowered. Senator Scott reluctantly agreed. House memit comparative obscurity often denies them suc engagements, resent those Senators who can defees. The Scott package had been drawn up meeting of the Senate conferees that morning the hour was devoted to the honorarium Issue to one informant, and Mr. Scott rallied his colinsiating: "There ought to be somewhere where our ground."

a 12-year-old program of bolstering the nation's nutri-by distributing food stamps is certain to be changed. sers of Congress are divided on whether the changes d be drastic or moderate, but there is remarkable ment that the program has grown larger, more incluand more expensive than was ever intended.

en the food stamp program was established in 1964, is regarded primarily as a farm program, a more inient and effective method of disposing of agricultural uses than the direct distribution of foodstuffs. In when citizens in only 110 counties were eligible to re the stamps, the program bad 424,000 participants ost $36 million. The latest attempt by Andrei D. Sakharov the dissident Russian physicist, to indicate his support for other Russian dissidents has ended with his being detained by police after striking two policemen. Mr. Sakharov had gone to the Soviet city of Omsk last week to attend the trial of a Tatar nationalist accused of slandering the state. When Dr. Sakharov and his wife, Yelena, were refused entry into the courtroom, they protested that the ban was illegal. Dr. Sakharov said that police then began to push him and others out of the corridor. and that he then struck two policemen. The Sakharovs were taken to a police station, where they signed statements describing what had happened and were released. It was not clear whether charges would be brought against them. but a charge of "violence or the threat of violence" against a policeman is punishable by up to five years in prison under Soviet law.

Vindicated

A case that scandalized and titillated England more than 50 years ago bas now been resolved by a committee of the House of Lords. The case involved the claim of Geoffrey Russell that he was the legitimate heir of John Russell, the third Baron Ampthill. In 1922, the elder Mr. Russell sued his wife for divorce, citing an unknown man as Geoffrey's father and insisting that the baby could not possibly be his. After a four year legal battle that was a London sensation, Geoffrey was declared the rightful heir to the Baron. But that claim was challenged after the Baron's death in 1973, by a son from a later marriage. After weeks of deliberation, the House of Lords rejected the challenge and named Geoffrey the fourth Baron Ampthill.

Exonerated

A Treasury Department report has concluded that, in 1973, Donald Alexander, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, personally ordered his aides to halt an audit of Senator Joseph M. Montoya, Democrat of New Mexico, but had good reason to do so. The report also said that Mr. Alexander's staff mistakenly concluded from some of his statements that no action against Sen. Mootoya was to be taken without first consulting Mr. Alexander. In a statement accompanying the report, Treasury Secretary William Simon said the actions taken by Mr. Alexander were "in the good faith desire to avoid further allegations of improper conduct by the LRS." At that time, Internal Revenue was under attack for allegedly conducting politically motivated audits. Sen. Montoya had been a vocal critic of the agency. The Treasury Department report was issued simultaneously with a Justice Department statement clearing Mr. Alexander of two other allegations of misconduct.

The all-American diet has largely become the allfabricated diet-consisting of foods that have literally been taken apart and put together in a new form. They are "engineered" from ingredients that may or may not include chemical additives, vitamins and minerals, according to Dr. Kermit Bird of the USDA Food and Nutrition Service. Currently, fabricated foods are an annual $18 billion industry in the United States, and sales are predicted to reach $23 billion by 1980.

Beame's Budget Looks Slim, But Is It the Clothing?

Mayor Beame has submitted bis budget for the 1976-77 fiscal year beginning July 1, much of it only a refinement of what was afready known about his three-year austerity program designed to eliminate a biflion-dollar deficit. That program, for which this budget constitutes a blue-print for the second year, has already been seriously questioned as not fully realistic by the Emergency Financial Control Board, which has the power to approve, reject or modify the city's plans.

The budget calls for total spending of $12.4 billion. $266 million less than the city expects to spend this year, despite inflation and, in the past, continual increases. The main question is whether revenues and expenditures are portrayed realistically. Control Board officials have already complained that the city is not meeting its own austerity program.

The budget makes no provision for an increase in the city's welfare caseload, despite the continuing depression in the city's economy. About $24 million in court costs and $36 million in City University costs have been assigned to, but not yet accepted by, the state. No provision has been made for wage increases, despite the fact that a number of city-employee contracts end on June 30 and it is expected that the unions will demand contracts comparable to that negotiated by the transit workers earlier this month. Such contracts could cost at least $200 million a year.

City officials oid not account for those items because, they say, they believe that welfare rolls will be stabilized, the state will offer the necessary court and university aid and that the city, by standing from will be able to prevent costly union contracts.

CUNY Solutions Are All Painful

It is increasingly clear that without greater state or local financial help, which is highly unlikely, the City University of New York will either have to charge tuition or end its open admissions policy.

Tuition will mean the abandonment of a principle that opened the university's doors to the children of immigrants for decades; the end of open admissions will mean the abandonment of a policy designed largely to aid the children of the new urban underclass, the blacks and Puerto Ricans. The choice therefore has major political implications, which may belp explain the maneuvering going on for months between the Board of Higher Education and the state's Emergency Financial Control Board.

The education board has submitted a budget-cutting program to the Control Board, which has the authority to approve or reject it. Despite the retrenchment, the budget is $30 million more than this year, an increase from $525 million to $555 million, largely the result of inflation and the loss of certain revenues available this year. The program apparently falls short of goals set by the city and the Control Board.

The education board says it cannot do more without specific figures on how much future state and city aid it can expect. Board members accused state and city officials of wanting the university board to make the potically unpopular choices involved. The board itself, however, may have offered its cost-cutting program largely as the first step in a negotiating process with its financial overseers.

The educators insist that if a choice must be made between tuition and ending open admissions, elected officials, or their surrogate, the Control Board, should make it. The Control Board insists the educators should produce a realistic budget, which probably would require the educators to choose choose.

If open admissions is ended, minorities stand to be hurt most; they have benefited most from the policy, begun five years ago. If tuition is ended, middle-class students will pay the greatest part of the bill, since tuition for the poor will be largely pald for by state and Federal assistance programs. Most observers believe that if it comes to a choice, tuition will be imposed.

Cunningham Isn't Giving Up

If Patrick Cunningham, the New York State Democratic chairman, finally cooperates in Special State Prosecutor Maurice Nadjari's corruption investigation in the Bronx, it will not be because he failed to explore the possibilities of legal exemption.

It was disclosed last week that re Mr. Cunningham, who is also the Bronx party leader, has been trying. R. In dismiss subpoenas for his personal and business records requested by for his personal appearance before the grand jury last week, he appeared, just long enough to refuse to sign a waiver of immunity from prosecution, then left. The prosecutor has called Mr. Cunningham "the principal at the center of the corrupt market-place of judgeships" in the Bronx. Without Mr. Cunningham's cooperation, Mr. Nadjari's examination is limited to what he can learn from other witnesses and, if they exist, wiretaps.

Also subpoenaed in relation to the judgeship inquiry were political associates of Mr. Cunningham: Paul Victor, chairman of the law committee of the Bronx Democratic Party; Jerry Crispino, a Bronx City Councilman; Gerald Esposito, a Bronx district leader, and Civil 'Court Judge Anthony Mcrcorella. The four political figures had also lost fights to dismiss subpoenas for their personal appearance before the grand jury. At least one of them, Mr. Crispino, is fighting a subpoena for his records as well.

Mr. Cunningham's uncertain legal situation puts him in limbo politically as he comes up for re-election this week for both county and state posts.

Mr. Cunningham is also seeking legal recourse in Federal court. Tomorrow a special three-judge panel is expected to bear his challenge of the state election law, which says that a party officer forfeits his job if be refuses to waive immunity.

Another Bleak Pension Report

A second report has been completed on New York City's public-employee pension systems, and though it takes a more positive tone than the first, the stress is once again on the need for additional contributions to keep the funds sound.

The latest study found the five city pension systems "in good shape," but recommended that $208 million more be contributed by workers annually to the funds. The city already is paying $1.2 billion a year into the systems, which cover 340,000 current employees and 90,000 who have

The proposals, submitted by Richard R. Shinn, chairman of the Meyor's Management Advisory Board, together with a recent state study made by Otto Kinzel. Chairman of the Stete Pension Commission, are to be put before the State Legislature. The proposals in both reports face strong labor opposition.

The Kinzel report, which also studied state pension plans, described some of the funds as actuarially unsound and said that unless remedial action were taken they would be under great strain by the middle of the next decade to pay even those people already retired, apart from those about to retire. The report urged increased payments into the system, but did not apecify who should make them.

Both studies said that pension benefits should be integrated with Social Security payments so that employees would not receive more in retirement than they did on the job. Both called for modernization of actuarial factors, some more than 60 years old. Both urged the end of what they described as overtime abuses that led in some cases to increased retirement income by increasing the annual salary in the year of retirement.

The Still-Strange Stavisky Story

Supporters of the Stavisky bill said the bill was for the schoolchildren; critics said it was for the politicians. No sooner did the New York Sun. Senate override Governor Carcy's veto, and the bill become law, than the supporters started talking commomise and the opponents, legal action.

The bill requires New York City to spend a fifth of its expense budget oo education, meaning a $150 million school-aid restoration next year. Governor Carey and Mayor Beame have said the bill threatens the city's fiscal stability. And before the override, most supporters conceded privately that the bill was deeply flawed. Having won, they are saying publicly that the bill can be amended; the bill was just a "constructive battering ram," as its Senate sponsor termed it, to push the state and city into reducing the heavy cuts in school budgets made during the fiscal crisis,

Why the Legislature went to such lengths to pass a dubious bill and, for the first time io 104 years, override a veto, has more to do with politics than pedagogy. The United Federation of Teachers and parents groups had lobbied intensely for the override. In an claetion year, the legislators were not about to alienate their constituents, or the powerful statewide union that is an enormous single contributor to legislative campaigns. The override also climaxed months of tension between the Legislature and Mr. Carey, arising from the pressures of the fiscal crisis as well as partisan and intra-party hostilities.

N.Y. State Gets All Its Loans

The most pressing part of New York State's ficeal crisis came to an end last weeth when State Comptroller Arthur Livitt announced that the state had met its $4 billion spriog borrowing need. The state is now assured of having enough cash to pay its bills and mett its lecal-aid commitments for the tiscal year without further borrowing from the public credit market until next spring.

For ments there was doubt that the state, which had been frozen out of the berrowing market since last fall, would be able to find willing creditors. But the investment community, or enough of it, has been convinced that the state's $10.9 billion budget is, though narrowly, balanced, and that the income to repay the loans will be there.

The $2.75 billion hoped for from the private lending market fell short by $300 million, a difference Mr. Levitt was able to make up with funds from the state's Common Retirement System, of which he is the sole trustce. Most of the remainder came from various state funds, including pension sys-

The interest rate of 7 percent, though higher than prevailed before last year, is lower than many had expected.

Albany Looks for Gold in Trenton

In an action that could help one financially strapped state but injure another. New York State bas gone into the United States Supreme Court to try to collect $225 million from New Jersey. Albany contends that Trenton's income tax on New Yorkers who work in New Jersey is unconstitutional and wants the return of revenues paid since 1967.

New York argues that the tax should be nullified because it falls exclusively on nonresidents. New Jersey does not have a state locome tax for its residents. New York imposes an income tax on New Jersey commuters but New York residents do pay a state income tax.

A similar suit against New Jersey, asking for $40 million, has already been filed by Pennsylvania. Governor Byrne considers both suits serious enough to have set aside $31 million in his already-tight budget to start reimbursements should his state lose. If New York wins its case, the money presumably would go to the state and not the commuters who paid the taxes. They have already received a credit on their New York State income taxes.

The List of Her Detractors Is Growing

A Layer of Red Ink Obscur Mrs. Grasso's Performance

By MICHAEL KNIGHT

In the best of times, almost any politician can do a reasonably good job as the governor of a small New England state. And in the worst of times no governor, however good, can expect to come away without a loog list of an expect to come away without a look and a

These have been among the worst of times in Connecticut, a blue-collar industrial state that is always one of the first to suffer from an economic downturn and one of the last to enjoy a recovery.

Consequently, the debate over Ella T. Grasso's performance as Governor oow offers, unavoidably and unhappily, only two positions to choose from: Has she done poorly, but about as well as can be expected? Oc has she done far worse than anyone had thought possible a year and a hall ago, when she was swept into office in a Democratic landslide?

Mrs. Grasso's supporters argue that she is doing the best that anyone can do while faced with a stagnating state economy, a projected budget deficit of up to $80 million, an overwhelmingly Democratic but highly unruly General Assembly that refuses to follow her lead, and no money to spend on the kind of ambitious social programs and flashy public works projects that even a middle-of-the-road Democrat like Mrs. Grasso wants to have on her record.

"She has tried to do the best she can with what she's got," argued Alice Ayers, president of the League of Women Voters and a Grasso supporter. "This is just an awful time for anyone to be in public office—she'd have been a very good Governor if things were different, and she might be yet if things change in time."

And Mrs. Grasso berself subscribes to the emptypocketbook theory. "Here I am, with no money, bare cupboards and I sit around counting pennies and trying to allot what little I have," she told Yale University students recently. "I just bope that in another reincarnation, I can return as the last of the big-time spenders."

Indecisiveness Charged

But the Goveroor's detractors—a growing and vocal band of former supporters who feel betrayed by her handling of the state's recent budget crisis—bay that hard times have only forced out into public view what they call a fallure of lcadership, a lack of compassion for the poor and the sick, and a panicky indecisiveness that, they add, led her to overreact when the first 1976 tax returns proved disappointing, and then to lapse into indecisiveness, compounding the state's difficulties.

And worst of all, they complain, events have disappointed their hope that because of her sex Mrs. Grasso would be a new and different kind of Governor. They low see only another not very special politician, this time in women's clothing.

"Our enthusiasm was whetted by the fact that she was a woman and we wanted desperately for her to win," recalled Gilbert Kelman, a Liberal who supported Mrs. Grasso's election before recently retiring as publisher of the Wallingford Post, "I had hoped that she was going to be considerably better, but she appeared to have been overwhelmed by the economic problems and then she panicked and overreacted and now she's just treading water."

The debate—limited so far to private party gripe sessions and cloak-room mutterings—seems about to spill out into the open next month in what promises to be a nasty primary fight over the selection of delegates to the Democratic National Convention in New York this summer.

Mrs. Grasso is backing the candidacy of Senator Henry M. Jackson of Washington, while what is taking shape as an anti-Grasso faction in the party is leaning toward former Governor Jimmy Carter of Georgia.

Mrs. Grasso's performance in the political arena bas been unimpressive at best and embarrassingly unsuccessful at worst, and there are many in Hartford who see ber as floundering without the sure hand of her political mentor, the late John M. Bailey, to gulde her.

The Governor lost badly, for example, when her budgetcrisis solution—a plan to abolish a politically-important pension fund for war veterans and a demand that state employees work an extra five hours a week without pay to lower overtime bills—twice went down in defeat at the hauds of her own party's legislators. She lost just as badly when she campaigned for the abolition of the scaodalplagued State Gaming Commission.

In addition, her performance in courting the votes of the state's 40,000 employees before the election and then singling them out for the worst cuts in the budget program left a bad taste. "She's a traitor to the people who elected her—the working people, labor, consumers," complained Michael Ferrucci, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which enthusiastically endorsed her candidacy after suffering four years of austerity programs under former Republican Governor

But both Mrs. Grasso's critics and her suppo agreement on the causes of her problems—it's and only mooey, they say—and on her major ments so far, all of which have cost the state next

For measuring the change in the blacks, the researchers presumed that the IQ of the children would have been about 90 if they bad been reared by their natural parents. The figure was based on data about the natural parents and about other black children of similar background reared in black

The findings showed that the younger any child was when adopted, and the better his care in the first few years, the higher his later IQ score was likely to be.

The conclusions drawn by the researchers, Sandra Scarr-Salapatek and Richard A. Weinberg of the University of Minnesota, were that environmental factors do exert a strong influence on intelligence and that the black-white IQ gap apparently is neither anevitable nor unchangeable.

In a report in Psychology Today, the researchers also noted some factors that tend to support the genetic theory. For example, black children with mixed natural parents scored higher than children with two black parents.

Deodorants Just Confuse Us

A recent report bas shown that bumans apparently have some ability to distinguish among themselves by odor. Communication by scent has long been known to exist among animals, and its possibility

J. Russell, a researcher on primate beliavior, freshmen college students were asked not to use soap, perfume or deodorant for 24 hours, then to wear clean white T-shirts for another 24. The shirts were then enclosed in cardboard ice buckets, with holes cut in them 10 facilitate sniffing. Mr. Russell found that $1 percent of male students tested and 69 percent of females were able to choose correctly between shirts worn by a man and a woman, and that 75 percent of all the students could select, from three shirts, the one that had been worn by themselves.

In one experiment by Michael mothers were asked to wear cotton pads ioside their brassieres, and their infants were tested to see if they responded 10 odors absorbed by the pads. Infants at two weeks tended to respond to any auch pad, but at six weeks, only one of the 14 infants tested responded to a strange mother's odor, while seven responded to their own mothers' scents. The experiments were reported in the magazine, Nature.

Distinctive scents, known as pheromones, are used by many animals, from insects to primates, to communicate sexual readioess. Among insects they have many other functions as well: for example, the marking of trails and the communication of disturbance in ant colonies.

The Secret of Woodpeckers

Like the migration of birds and the ability of whales to withstand the bends during deep dives, the hammering of woodpeckers without suffering bead injury has oever been fully explained. A team of California researchers has come up with some possible answers, and those answers, curiously, might help in such things as the improvement of protective belmets.

Wondpeckers use their beaks to bore into trees for food and nesting sites. They also peck at bollow limbs in mating rituals. They sometimes drum 500 or 600 times a day, and have been known to deliver 40-45 blows in less than three seconds. Yet the birds do not suffer concussion or brain damage.

The researchers suggest several reasons for this. A woodpecker has a very narrow space between the tough outer membrane of the brain and the brain itself, thus possibly reducing fluid transmission of shock waves. The bird's brain is thickly packed with dense yet spongy bone. The woodpecker also has large muscle system in its bead which could act as a shock absorber and distributor.

One of the researchers, Dr. Philip R. May of the University of California. Los Angeles, speculates that the principles involved in the woodpecker's mechanisms might have practical application for humans. Crash helmets now to common use consist of a hard, outer shell suspended from the skull by a harness and separated from the skull by an air space. Dr. May suggests that a better belmet might be formfitting, firm but apongy, with a hard outer shell.

U.S. Acts on Sex Bias in Lending

The Justice Department has filed suit against mortgage lenders in Cherry Hill, N.J., and Salt Lake City, charging them with such acts as requiring working women, but not men, to state in writing that they intended to go oo working, giving less weight to a wife's income than 10 her husband's and refusing to consider alimony and child support as income.

The suits are the Department's first such actions under a 1974 amendment to the Fair Housing Act of 1968, prohibiting sex-based discrimination against home-buyers.

The Justice Department has not yet brought any actions to enforce the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, which came into effect last October and prohibits discrimination in other types of consumer credit. But the suits against mortgage lenders are considered to be a warning to the lending industry as a whole.

How many more tanks, guns, planes, ships, soldiers, sailors and marines do we need to guarantee our security? Mr. President, just how much is enough? Why, despite the end of the war in Viet-nam, and detente, must the military budget surge

This budget would cut social programs and contioue high unemployment. But it would boost military spendiog by $10 billion — exceed-ing $100 billioo for the first time to American history. That's more than one-fourth of the $394 billion budget!

Do we really need a military budget this

It is the opinion of many informed critics that significant cuts in the Pentagon budget are possible, with no loss to our national security. For instance, did you know that the Pentagon recently closed down a huge Safeguard anti-ballistic missile operation that cost $5.9

Did you know that we now have 7,000 nuclear weapons io Europe? Military critics have long maintained that

1.000 would be more than enough to deter military attack there. Did you know that the B-1 bomber is being attacked by critics who cootend that the manned bomber...no matter how big or fast ... is already totally obsolete? The B-1 would probably arrive over Moscow several hours after our rockets had already landed! At $92 billion, this will be the most expensive weapon in U.S. bistory.

Did you know that the Navy plans to spend $3 billion on a single aircraft carrier? A type of vessel so highly vulnerable - in roday's missile age - that it would probably be one of the first ships to be destroyed in any sea battle?

Did you know that only 30% of our armed forces are for domestic defense? The bulk of our forces are for use in possible wars, includiog Asian wars. Did you know that we now have more.

Mr. President, just how many more bombs over where to cut one or two billion dollars.

We need to establish what kind of milital strength this nation needs to guarantee its security and vital interests. . And there is no longer any excuse for not

But now the Bureau of Labor Statistics shows that fewer jobs are produced by defense speodiog than by many other government expeoditures.

For example, while $1 hillion spent on the military creates perhaps 40.000 jobs, the same dollars spent in manpower training would produce 136,000 jobs; in VA health care. 89,000 jobs: public bousing construction, 60,000 and in private bome construction, 97,000.

What we need is real national security.

Our true national strength is measured much more by the health of our economy, by our industrial capacity, by our unequalled agricul-tural system, and by our advanced technologies. If we are to have real national security, pair. He then raised seven young birds, and in 1973 be loaned bis productive falcon pair to Dr. Cade.

By the following year Dr. Cade had produced more than a dozen fledged (fully feathered and able to fly) peregrines, and it was decided to release four of them to the wild. Two were released by Dr. Meng at New Paltz and are thought to have been killed, quite possibly by bunters. Two others were transported from Ithaca to Colorado where Cornell bas an auxiliary peregrine breeding facility, and released. They are believed to be living in the wild. Last spring at the Cornell bawk barn, 11 egg-laying females produced 25 offspring. Later in the summer 16 of the offspring were placed in either natural or artificial aeries in New York, Massachusetts,

New Jersey and Maryland. The sites, except for Maryland's Aberdeen Proving Grounds, a guarded area, were not made public for fear that the young birds would be stolen from their roosts by falconers or disturbed by curiosity

The scientists were aware that many known falcon nesting sites in the western states had been robbed by humans. At some sites it had been necessary to set up electronic devices, such as electric eyes along routes to the nests, that would warn game wardens of the approach of unauthorized have been reported, and Dr. Cade estimates it will be three years or more before clues to the eventual success or failure of the restoration project will become evident. The major clue will be evidence that the released birds have produced and fledged young of their own. It usually takes at least two years for the birds to mature sexually.

Dr. Cade bopes eventually to be able to breed and release from 100 to 200 birds a year within the next three or four years, as more mated pairs produce more young. Such volume, accounting for losses in the wild, could eventually result in the former wild population level of some 200 nesting pairs. At present there are about 20 in the peregrine project have been criticized by aome conservation groups, not for their propagation work, but because they are falconers themselves and fly falcons for sport. Even though Dr. Cade and his colleagues use falcons born in captivity, they are bracketed in the conservationists' criticism with the other falconers who take birds from the wild for their sport.

Thirty atates bave legalized falconry and about 2,500 permits are issued annually. The result, the conservationiats say, is that in 1974, for example, 659 birds of the falcon family (peregrines, gyrfalco-s, prairia falcons, merlins and kestrels) were taken from the wild by licensed falconers. The conservationists suspect that many more are being captured annually by unlicensed persons.

In response to the criticism, Tom Cade and his colleagues say that without the techniques, skills and knowledge learned by experienced falconers in bandling the feral animals, it would be difficult if not impossible to achieve the aims of the peregrine project.

Whether the bandsome hawk that bas been a symbol of wildness for centuries will ever return to its former territory in the eastern United States remains to be seen. If its restoration is successful, it will be due in large measure to one of the few instances in history where man bas been able to work knowledgeably-in this case, literally "hand-in-glove"—with nature, whose ways are often unfathom-

For the total studeot population, the general pattern of support has been about 60 percent from family and part-time work, 20 percent from scholarships, grants and loans, and 20 percent from other resources, such as Veterans' and Social Security benefits. Total student aid from all sources amounts to about $4.6 billion a year, available mainly oo the basis of need.

Higher education generally will cost 5 to 12 percent more next fall, depending on the institution, according to a survey released recently by the College Entrance Exaination Board. The average total expenses for a resident undergraduate at a private college, where tuition is high, will be $4,568, and at a tax-supported public college, where tuition is low or nonexistent. $2,790.

Tuition at many prestigious schools next fall will be above $4,000, some for the first time, and total annual charges will exceed $7,000. At Yale, for example, tultion will be $4,300, at Princetoo $4,275, at 5tanford $4,270, at Harvard $4,100 and at Bennington, $5,250, one of the highest.

Ever More Practical Math

To take some of the mystery out of mathematics, school officials in Oregon have developed a program to put math to practical use. rather than relying on the teaching of abstract computations.

The focus of the program is the elassroom laboratory, and a typical fourth-grade session might bave groups of pupils polling each other for their opinions about television ehows and translating the results into graphs; tossing wads of paper at a wastebasket and figuring the accuracy in shooting percentages, or thumbing through a merchandise catalogue and determining which items could be bought for $1,000.

School officials found that many teachers, mainly in the lower grades, had only vague notions of how math could be applied in everyday life. As a result, the teachers tended to perpetuate the traditional learn-by-rote methods that discourage many pupils, according to a report in the journal American Education.

Through workshops, the program introduces teachers to different concepts and techniques, and makes liberal use of games, puzzles, tools and audio-visual materials; these methods are not new, but they are generally not implemented on such a large scale as in Oregon.

As yet there are not enough statistical data to evaluate the educational impact of the program, but surveys indicate that both teachers and students are enthusiastic about the approach. Many local school districts plan to fund and continue the projects when a Federal Government grant for the program expires next year.

foreign-language requirement for graduation has quadrupled since 1966. Barely half of those receiving the doctoral degree today must demonstrate eveo a reading knowledge of a foreign language.

These changes in standards encourage and perpetuate the view that everything that an educated American needs to know is available in English, This cue has been picked up by the high schools.

Doubts over the value of knowing a foreign language and culture are nothing new in American life. For a century, the task of assimilating a diverse population of immigrants fell primarily to the schools, which ingly. For students, the path to fame and fortune lay through the scientific, commercial and industrial" training that Tocqueville saw as the essence of education in a democracy. Foreign languages were at best a frill.

Clearly, there are still many today that retain a similar attitude. The status of English as a world language, widely spoken, is frequently stressed by those who would minimize the importance of foreign-language study.

People with this view argue that, for example, if the United States can do $26 billion worth of trade each year with Japan, with few American businessmen knowing the Japanese language, then surely international education is of marginal value in such vocational terms. If political appointees can be sent abroad as ambassadors without knowing well any foreign language, as has often been the case, studeots may ask why they should be forced to conjugate irregular verbs in French or German. But the opposite view is that the utility of knowing a foreign language cannot be so easily dis-

Stephen K. Bailey of the American Council on Education defends international studies programs on the broader grounds that they are essential for "global coping." With the welfare of the United States heavily dependent on the actions of ether naticos, there is strong argument for understanding how those other peoples think. For this, language is a valuable tool. In this context, the fact that there are a billion people today whose languages are being studied at advanced levels by fewer than 200 Americans might give pause.

Critics of the trend contend that continued deckine in foreign programs could be costly to the nation in the long run. Such fields as government, business, law and journalism, they say, are denied a steady flow of new recruits with broad, yet specifie, foreign-area training for handling international

Such arguments, however, have not yet brought international education from its position on the periphery of the "core curriculum" to the center. Least of all have these arguments had any appreciable impact on the primary and the secoodary schools.

The apparent reason is that school boards and educators respond far more readily to what they see as the needs of individual students than to national needs. Yet, it is precisely in this respect, some educators say, that foreign-language studies have the most to offer.

In this view, problems with English will not be corrected until a student gains a sense of language as such. He can get this sense in many ways, but one is from exposure to a foreign language, whether it be German or Spanish or Latin or Tagalog. Confronting another language, this argument goes, the student will come to understand his own. The obstacles to change in approach appear to be formidable. One is a lack of internationallyoriented teachers. Only 5 percent of those studying in teacher education programs today receive any foreign-area training. The supply of top-notch language teachers is even smaller.

Even if these problems could be overcome, there remaios the basic question of whether Americans really want to reverse the trend. Various groups have proposed a Presidential commission on international education, but so far the White House has taken

Where We Stand by Albert Shanker President United Federation of Teachers

No Gimmicks to Subvert Stavisky-Goodman:

Time to Start Rebuilding the Schools

ast Wednesday the New York State Legislature overrode Governor Carey's veto of the Stavisky-Goodman Bill. It was the first time in 104 years that a governor's veto was overturned. But the fight to restore services to the schools is not over. The editorial writers of the city's three major dailies cootinue to attack the union, the new law, its sponsors and the Legislature. The Mayor has announced that the city will seek to upset the new law in the courts, and there are newspaper reports that, no matter what bappens, the appointed Emergency Fiscal Control Board will ignore the two-thirds vote of both houses of our elected Legislature.

Those who are still fighting to deny the schools their fair share of city funds are circulatiog some new arguments.

They argue that the UFT, the Board of Education, Assemblyman Leonard Stavisky, Senator Roy Goodman and the Legislature were unreasonable and hellbent for an override. Nothing could be further from the truth. All of us indicated our willingness to meet, to negotiate and to compromise in the many weeks which have passed since the passage of the bill in the Assembly on January 21. Throughout this time no compromise proposals were made either by the city or the state. (Even The New York Times, in an editorial last Thursday, admitted that the override of the veto "might have been averted if Albany and City Hall had approached the delicate negotiations with a more credible expression of concern for the schools' serious plight. The Governor and Mayor Beame failed to present an effective case for the city's and the state's intent to prevent the budget ax from falling unfairly on the city's schoolchildren...") The evidence on this point is clear. When we look at actual expenditures by the city for the first seven months of the 1974-75 budget year and compare them with the 1975-76 year, we find that:

■ Total city expenses increased 2.26%. Expenses in every major city mayoral agency increased.

Interest on city debt increaseed 20.25%; Human Resources - including welfare - increased 14.86%, and payments to private charitable institutions increased 5.71%.

During this same period. expenditures for health services decreased 1.8% and expenditures for elementary and secondary education decreased 7.93%.

On Tuesday afternoon all the parties met in an effort to avoid an override of the Governor's veto. Finally, after all the weeks and months, an offer was made. It was not an offer of money that was there—but an offer to try to get money. But even if the money proposed — $40 million — could be found, it would mean that the Board of Education would be further cut next June by $48 million. The schools would lose still another 3200 teachers. Class size would increase by another seven

The UFT offered to stop pressing for the veto override and to continue to negotiate a compromise if the city and state would guarantee only one thing; that the New York City schools would be held harmless, that there would be no further cuts. Had this guarantee been given, we would have continued talking about the amount and the timing of restoration of school services. It was only when it became clear that the Mayor and Governor were unwilling to guarantee that there would be no further school service slashes, that there was no alternative to pressing for an override of the veto. The charge of unreasonableness is clearly unwarranted.

A second ploy being used in the fight against the law is to invoke the concept of "home rule." This notion is dragged out whenever it is convenient to do so, but "home rule" is clearly not part of our state constitution or law. If state law can compel the people of New York City to spend over $1 billion on welfare, then the state can also mandate that we spend another $150 million on our schoolchildren. On what basis does the city choose to comply with some state mandates to spend money.

A third charge is that the legislators voted against their will - that they were coerced, pressured and threatened by a powerful union. There can be no question that on this, as on other matters, legislators took into account the feelings of their constituents - teachers, parents and a concerned public. The UFT and its parent. state organization, NYSUT, as well as the city and state AFL-CIO, supported the Stavisky-Goodman Bill. Legislators voted for the bill despite threats by two otherunions, threats by city and state officials to fire thousands of other employees and to close fire houses and police stations - and despite appeals to party loyalty. As in almost all such situations, the legislators were faced with many contending pressures. but in the end they were convinced by the facts. There had been no effort to save our schools until the last-minute offer by the city and state - an offer that would not in the least have mitigated the damage done to the schools - nor even allowed schools to continue at present poverty levels. The offer meant further cuts. Of all the services ty, there is only one which is a constitutional state responsibility that is education. The Legislature deserves thanks for meeting that constitutional responsibility and for withstanding the pressure of City Hall, the Governor's man-

It is not too late for the city and state to be reasonable. It is still possible to. guarantee that the schools will not suffer any more and for talks to take place that will determine the timetable for restoring services. This is what should be done rather than searching for some gimmick or loophole to subvert the clear intent of our elected government. Even if such a gimmick were found, it would only further undermine the public's confidence in government. It's time to stop fighting against the schools and to start talking about how to rehuild them.

'Ethnic Treasure'

Following hard on Jimmy Carter's unfortunate use of the phrase "ethnic purity," for which the former governor had the grace to apologize. President Ford on Bi-compounded the problem in attempting to explath it away.

"Ethnic heritage is a great treasure of this country." said; the President of the United States in response to a question, "and I don't think that Federal action should he used to destroy that treasure." In the context, Mr. Ford was referring to the role of the Federal Government in using housing legislation to encourage the integration of hitherto racially (or ethnically) unmixed urban areas. Put in blunter terms, what he was saying was that he did not believe in nudging Federally-assisted housing for low-income families into relatively higherincome, de facto segregated, districts in order to help minorities not only to get out of the inner-city ghettos but also to get in to areas—such as the suburbs—where upgraded and better paid jobs are now more likely to

As all the Presidential candidates, and non-candidate Humphrey (to whom the question was also put last week, and who also evaded it) know, the issue is not really the use of governmental power to block integration but the use of that power under the law to promote it. It is not an easy issue, nor can any broad and sweeping generalizations be made about its exercise: for each case where it arises has to be evaluated in terms of the specific conditions of the urbanor auburban-area concerned. But it is an issue that bas to be faced, not evaded.

On the face of it, of course, what the President said about the great "ethnic heritage" of this country cannot be faulted; but the President is, if nothing else, an experienced politician, and it would be most remarkable if he did not realize that the words he used could only be interpreted as a signal to the "ethnic" neighborhoods that he would in no way favor application of Federal funds or power to further the racial or economic integration of nonintegrated neighborhoods, as the 1968 Housing Act provides. While most if not all the other Presidential hopefuls have been saying pretty much the same thing, it is particularly discouraging to hear this kind of pandering to racial or "ethnic" prejudices come from the President himself.

The mixture of "ethnic" strains that make up the American people is one of the great sources of this country's strength; and the cultural cootributions of the original inhabitants and of the varied "ethnic," national, religious and social groups that have poured into this continent for nearly five centuries constitute a heritage of which every American should indeed be proud.

But the essence of America is not its diversity: it is the unity in that diversity-and this is in fact one of the unique contributions of American civilization to the world. In no place else on earth, on the continental scale in which it has taken place here, have so many peoples from so many lands, of such diverse backgrounds, coalesced into one nation, founded on the very principle of equality of every man and woman before the law, and aspiring to an integrated society that encourages unity and neither recognizes nor practices racial, religious or "ethnic" barriers among its people. Though this goal is still far from fulfillment, it is the essential goal: it constitutes the inner meaning of "E Pluribus Unum"; it is what the Statue of Liberty really stands for.

This is the genius of America: and this, it seems to us, is what the President of the United States should be emphasizing at all times, and especially in this year of the Bicentennial-even in the throes of a political

Unconstitutional Veto

President Ford has submitted to the Senate the nomination of William B. Posf to fill a Federal district judgeship in Virginia. Mr. Poff is a well-regarded attorney, a former preaident of the Virginia Trial Lawyers Association. He is approved by the har association, endorsed by the Republican Congressman from his district and acceptable to the Republican Governor of Virginia.

But to one man he is not acceptable. Senator William Scott, Virginia Republican, has invoked "Senatorial courtesy" against him. Under this peculiar custom, other members refuse to confirm a judicial nominee if a Senator from his state declares him personally obnoxious to him. This rule normally applies only if the Seoator making the objection is of the same political party as

The effect of this practice is quite different from what the framers of the Constitution Intended, Instead of Senate confirmation operating as a restraint on possible arbitrary action by the President, the power to appoint judges has been effectively transferred to Senators. When the President and the Senator are on good terms, the appointive power is, in effect, ahared between them through amicable private negotiations. Wheo they areon poor terms-Senator Scott is supporting the candidacy of Ronald Reagan against Mr. Ford-then a confrontation and a prolonged impasse result.

Only with regard to nominations to the Supreme Court and such specialized tribunals as the Tax Court and the Court of Military Appeals does the President have the freedom of action that the Constitution envisaged. On all district court judgeships and many appelthe court judgeships, the Senators are in a position to exercise a velo that is indefensible because it cannot be overridden, is usually exercised in secret and is subject to no accountability.

the Pull nomination calls attention to this long. standing abuse of power. Bar associations have a responsibility to examine this irregular arrangement and seek reform. Arbitrary one man power has no place in a constitutional democracy, whether it be wielded by a Presideni or a member of the Senate.

Soft on Inflation

The Administration has grown remarkably complaceot about the health and durability of the recovery. Long williog to tolerate high levels of unemployment-presumably out of fear that stimulative policies would spur inflation-the White House now appears just as tolerant of inflationary wage and price actions.

Instead of applauding the Teamsters Union wage settlement of roughly 10 percent a year, President Ford should have warned that such an outsized pay boost-if followed as a pattern in other major industries-would lock the economy into an inflationary trend. Such increases would run to triple the probable rate of productivity gain, the only dependable acurce of noninflationary growth, and thus build a floor of 6 percent or higher under the price

The danger in accepting that sort of inflationary floor is that any upset in current calculation, for instance, from a poor harvest or revived pressures from the oil cartel as the world economy revives-is bound to lift the price trend atill higher. Then, given the way organized groups struggle to gain "indexation" for themselves in a perpetually inflationary economy, one high price plateau leads to a still higher plateau.

This inflicts severe injustice on those individuals and groups too powerless to protect themselves. And the upsurges of inflation shake the stability of the economy, as consumers cut back, businesses rein in their capital spending and the monetary authorities, trying to halt the inflation, check the growth of the money supply, and drive up interest rates. Inflation is the enemy of prosperity. It is the poor and those most tenuously attached to the labor force who pay the heaviest price in unemployment when boom gives way to bust-as it did in

The time for the Administration, with the support of the Congress, to be moving against inflation is right now, when the economy is recovering at a moderate pace and there still is much slack in the system. Election-year complacency-born of an unwillingness by either Republicans or Democrats to confront fabor and management on the need for fellowing noninflationary guidelinesis likely to cost the nation dearly when the election

'Mine Field' in Lebanon

The cautious intervention of Syrian troops with Israeli. acquiescence—and the continuing mediation of Syrian President Hafez al-Assad, alded by iodepeodent American and French diplomatic efforts-appears to be stabilizing the off-and-on cease-fire in Lebanon's civil war.

"We're walking through a mioe field," Secretary Klssinger warned last week. "The situation could blow up tomorrow." But the new agreement between President Assad and the Palestinian commando movement headed by Yasir Arafat now gives promise of restoriog the truce and advancing a political settlement in the year-long struggle that has taken more than 10,000 lives. and threatened to trigger a new Arab-Israel war.

Despite mutual distrust and oervousness, Syria and Israel have a parallel interest in restoring unity and stability to Lebanon as a buffer between them. Syria's President clearly has recognized that an unstable Lebanon or one partitioned into weak Christian and Moslem regions - or a Palestinian-dominated Lebanon that became a confrontation state—would risk Israeli occupation of the south and a new, much longer and more dangerous Israel-Syria border than that at the Golan Heights.

Lebanon's Parliament has met briefly and amended the Constitution to permit President Franjieb's resignation, which apparently is imminent. The problem now is to achieve broad agreement on a new Christian President who can carry out the necessary reforms, reconstitute new Lebanese police and military forces and disarm the country's 30 or more private armies.

It will not be quickly done and there will be repeated opportunities for a breakdown. But the restraint imposed on leftists and Palestinians, the precedent now established for token use of Syrian forces with Israeli acquiescence—and the mutual Israelt and Syrian recognition of a parallel interest in a stable Lebanon-provide a new opportunity to achieve a political solution.

Easter

Since time immemorial, this has been a aeason of special celebration. It is the beginning of a natural year, a pastoral way of marking time, and it signals. the start of new growth, renewal of the old. It has long been the occasion of faith renewed, of belief and understanding given new life. It was the beginning of a new season in the earth and in the heart. of mankind.

We call it spring, this season, and we watch the first spring flowers opening bud. We sense sap-rise in the trees after long months of dormancy. We hear the ainging of birds newly returned from their distant winter retreats. We feel the warmth of the strengthening sunlight, see the lengthening span of daylight, know that summer lies ahead. Now we can transcend hope and know the strength of belief. We know that winter is past and gone.

And now we have come to the festivals of the season to Easter and Passover, which reach back to the beginnings of our faith, to the beginnings of our holy chronicles and beliefs. We celebrate life in terms of deliverance and resurrection. Ever since the first spring known to man he has stood at this season with awe in his eyes and wonder in his heart. Something deep within him has responded, knowing that now he faces the enduring symbols of ultimate truth. Something still responds.

Letters to the Editor

South Africa: Fact vs. Fiction

To the Editor.

Mr. Fraser's blatant defense of the racist regimes of Rhodesia and South Africa (letter April 11) can only be viewed; as offensive, not only in the eyes of the American people, whom he has selected to bear the onus of his attacks, but also in the eves of the international community.

I am a black American and have lived ten years in Africa, though none of this time was spent in South Africa or Rhodesia. Stringent immigration laws prohibit foreign blacks from living in or visiting these countries, just as they prohibit the re-entry of black South Africans once they have absented themselves. This is in itself a manifestation of the extremes to which these regimes will go in an attempt to restrict the mobility of blacks, both in and outside southern Africa.

I find it unfortunate therefore, in view of the foregoing, that Mr. Fraser, during the course of his attack on the United States, chose as a point of reference the black southern African's lack of hostility-a point poorly taken. The olacks io southern Africa may not be frothing at the mouth, but their hostility is evident in the number of those who have fled the country to

In conclusion, he burdens the reader with the well-known story used by many South African politicians in defense of their policies, i.e. how Africans throughout the continent find the prospects so good in South Africa that it must turn away hundreds, thousands, if not millions (depending upon the zeal of the speaker) of African job-seekers each year. Upon hearing this masterpiece of fiction, one would think that Africans throughout the continent were deserting their homelands in pursuit of a better life in South Africa. Hair and the Courts To the Editor:

You may have noted the tremendous flood of litigation plaguing the courts by litigants in the military and in police and fire departments who are protesting regulations relating to their hair length.

litigants who have serious legal questioos to be answered, and these "hairraising" cases are clogging the legal machinery, in spite of their unimportance. Judge Moore of the U.S. Court of Appeals recently wisely said in effect that this type of litigation had no proper place in the courts. I trust that other judges will adopt Judge Moore's very rational view.

To the Editor:

It is a tragic illusion to believe that the Palestine problem is really being solved. Rather, the fundamental issues are only being swept under tha rug. · Here is what is oot being attended to imaginetively: (1) the proposed establishment of a state for the Palestinians (numberiog over 2.5 million). on only 20 percent of their country (about 2,000 square miles) which lacks all viability, economic, political and military, and (2) allowing the Israelis to keep some 80 perceot of the country plus, perhaps, Egyptian and Syrian territories and keep operative such necessarily expansionist and discriminatory principles as the Law of Return. This is merely to put the two peoples on just another collision course. with the Palestinians at a disadvantage in the short run and with untold tragedy for both peoples in the long run. The principle of weakening one adversary while strengthening the other may work temporarily. Thus, neutralization of Egypt and the arming of the Israelis even with nuclear weaponry may constitute a serious setback to the Palestinians, but a study of history suggests it is very doubtful that they will mean much to the next generation of Palestinians. Nor are we to rely upon the present self-appointed Egyptian and Syrian rulers while ignoring their peoples, whose aspirations differ sharply from those of pollticians with limited horizons.

The seeds of the tragic conflict have to be extirpated if we mean business. We have to remove completely all the factors that perpetuate and generate a sense of injustice, insecurity and

Recently Spain and Portugal were big in the guessing game. After China and the United States, it will undoubtedly be Yugoslavia and the successors to Tito. But of course the local game for the moment is Jimmy, and Hubert Horatio Humphrey's "3-H Club." Most diplomats have written off George Wallace and Ronald Reagan but Jimmy Carter's success and Hubert Humphrey's comeback astound them. Most of them bad assured their governments long ago that Mr. Carter didn't have a chance and that Humpty Dumpty could never be put together again.

Fortunately, nobody checks up on the bad guesses of the past. Nixon would never go, most of them agreed, repeating the poor judgment of the press, and Ford didn't even figure in their guesses at the downfall of Spiro Agnew. But guessing is pleasant work if you can get it-almost as painless as writing a column.

Tha U.S.S.R.? "Get away with" things vis-à-vis Washington or vis-à-vis Moscow? This topic is as imprecise as the unfortunate word "organic" that set the samovar bubbling. Whatever Mr. Sonnenfeldt's intention, Moscow is right now being conoxious and Beigrade is bitting back. A virtually unknown flunkey of the Soviet Central Committee named Venyamin Midtsev has just published a pamphlet in Moscow which clearly has ideological approval. This brands as an "arrogant nationalist" and a "revisionist" anyone who holds the Soviet system 'would not suit his own country," which, of course, is what Titoism is all about.

The Yugoslav radio struck back promptly, calling Mr. Midtsey's views harsh and unacceptable to all those for whom it is intended." A leading Belgrade commentator added that Midtsev was renewing arguments fav-

Recently, in six of Yugoslavia's seven provincial republics, there have been trials of what are called "Cominformists," meaning people who favor or work for Moscow against Titoism It is well known that the Kremlin supports two active anti-Tito centers. one m Prague and one in Kiev.

The leaders of these two emigre groups obviously claim to have supporters inside Yngoslavia : because they accuse Belgrade of having "expelled or arrested" more than 200,000 Yugoslav Communist Party members loyal to Moscow.

If one places this factual picture of "obnoxious" acts by Soviet agents against the somewhat unclear background of U.S. official statements. their implications become even more I personally hope Mr. Kissinger favored "fruitful relations" with Beigrade and that Mr. Sonnenfeldt meant it when he spoke of Yugoslavia as "vital," asserting that if it shifted back to the Soviet orbit, it would be "a major setback for the West."-It

By Ray S. Cline

WASHINGTON-President Ford deserves high marks for quietly and skillfully distancing himself from the extravagant pretensions of Nixon-era "détente." The word bas been banished from our vocabulary as of March 1, 1976, and it was high time. We ought to quit trying to conduct our foreign policy in French, which confuses our citizenry, even wheo elucidated in dulcet German-American accents.

Détente means only a state of comparativa relaxation of international tension. This has occurred from time to time in Soviet-American relations even since the death of Stalin and President Dwight D. Eisenhower's participation in the first postwar summit meeting, in Geneva, in 1955.

The trouble is the consequences depend on which nation relaxes, bow much, and how long. In practice, it is usually the United States that relaxes its efforts abroad and its defense forces at bome-relaxes more and relaxes looger than the Soviet Union.

For some weeks Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has been out on the hustings defending what he delicately calls "the policy known as detente." In Boston on March 11, Mr. Kissinger said, "We have sought with the Soviet Union to push back the interests of "genuine co-existence"and be urged an "effort to . . . give co-existence a more reliable and positive character making both sides conscious of what would be lost by confrontation and what can be gained by cooperation." ..

In fact, cooperation is far removed from what Soviet leaders mean by detente. They have been remarkably candid in saying that detente is identical with Lenin's and Stalin's policy of "peaceful" co-existence"—that is, it aims at a situation in which tha Soviet Union can steadily increase its international power position without danger of total war. Vietnam and Angola are the fruits of detente.

The 25th Communist Party congress, held in Moscow in February, made it abundantly clear that Soviet policy anticipates unrelenting class struggle; worldwide support of revolutionary forces; diplomatic and political moves to restrict the parts of the world open to United States influence, trade, investment, and procurement of economic raw materials, especially now in the Middle East and southern Africa; and permanent, positive conflict between the Communist and capitalist social systems until the latter collapses in a "world crisis of capitalism."

Mr. Kissinger understandably feels a personal obligation to go on defending détente. He repeatedly calls for a oational debate on foreign policy but castigates critics of détente by saying there is no alternative except nuclear war. This is sophistry. There is an alternative, and that is what we are actually encountering, a continuous, low-intensity, yet deadly serious political and economic power conflict.

The right answers to a string of specific questions posed by Mr. Kissinger in Boston about alternatives to détente are clear. We should:

I. Recognize that far-reaching United States-Soviet "cooperation" in a "generation of peace" is a goal in the dim future, an illusion or a deception. 2 Say flatly that substantial Soviet expansion of control of territory, resources and populations cannot be tolerated, and that we will counter each Soviet challenge in strategic areas crucial to the United States at any necessary level-from diplomacy, political counseling of allies and economic aid to security guarantees and the deployment abroad of military forces for defense of threatened territory or regimes.

3. Restore primary strategic emphasis on alliance-building with relatively open political societies and oo strengthening transoceanic strategic economic ties with allied octions.

4. Recognize that we have abandoned our former military superiority without getting Soviet restraint in areas where their interests are involved.

5. Maintain military forces second

Reneging on a Promise

By Tom Wicker

First the Supreme Court and then Congress changed the rules of political financing in the middle of the 1976 election, and President Ford sooo will have his chance to make matters worse. An unfair burden has been placed on the backs of candidates laboring in the primaries, and the Presidential nominations of both parties might be decided as an unfortunate consequence.

Already the most activa major party candidates are considering a suit against the Government for psymeot of Federal matching funds that would be due them if the rules had not been changed - funds around which they planned their campaigns and which they had a right to expect would be paid. In the hotly contested Demo-cratic primary in Pennsylvania, for example, with three leading con-tenders involved, none is able to finance the kind of campaign required for good results in such a big and populous state.

That makes it more likely that Pennsylvania will not propel any of the contenders there into a clear lead for the nomination-and that in turn can only improve the chances of the noncontender, Hubert Humphrey. In fact, as long as the Federal matching money is not being paid, Mr. Humphrey-who is not running in primaries and has no special campaign apparatus or costs-is the Democrat who benefits most.

But his advantage is slight compared to that Mr. Ford enjoys over his single opponent, Ronald Reagan. Not only can Mr. Ford, if he chooses, campaign rather effectively and mexpensively from the White House; but as an incumbeot and a front-runner, he can more easily raise private money than a challenger widely viewed as having little chance.

. More than that, Mr. Ford mey well veto the bill now laboriously making its way to his desk to reconstitute the Federal Election Commission and thus to make the mstching mooey available. A veto, wbether justified or oot, might well be sustained in a Congressthat bas had a hard time agreeing on the bill; and the comparative poverty of Mr. Reagan and the Democratic contenders might well be extended on through the remaining primaries.

All this is palpably unfair to Mr. Reagan and the Democratic primary contenders who organized their campaigns and laid their financisl plans. oo the good-faith assumption that Federal matching money would be paid as promised. Surely, some way could be found to make those psyments as obligations of the Federal Government.

The situation arose when the Supreme Court found significant sections of the campaign financing law unconstitutional, iocluding the way the members of the Federal Election Commission had been appointed. Coogress then compounded the confusion; rather than making the simple legislative edjustment that wound bave. put the commission quickly back in business, it undertook more sweeping overhaul of the financing law. A long struggle between House and Senate ensued; conferees have now reached

The situation is considerably ag-25". gravated by the fact that restrictions in on raising private money remain much effect, while the supposed compensative tion of Federal metching money is not being provided. Thus, Mr. Reagan or, say, Senator Henry Jackson, cannot all turn to a wealthy supporter for any thing more than a $1,000 contribution. to tide them over the present difficulficulty.

Under the Supreme Court ruling, 10: bowever, a candidate can spend unlimited amounts of his own money, and former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia is already reported to bec? spending some of his. His wealth is 3. not exactly of the Rockefeller variety, us but if by chance someooe of unlimited; means were competing this year, his advantage would be considerable.

The Court also beld thet, as a right of free speech, anyone who wanted could spend as much as he wanted in 1 % support of a candidate, as long as he -? did oot coordinate the spending with a the candidate's campaign. Max Pale, vesky, a wealthy Californian, says he's considering mounting just such an independent campaign for Mr. Carter in California, primarily as a means of """ working against the possibility of a "" Humphrey, nomination. That may beauty free speech, but it doesn't seem toma meet Coogress's original intention to he limit the advantages of the wealthy in the American political system.

Will Rodgers thinks he won the Mabut he is wrong. Or, to be more accurate, he was running a different race.

He was trying to finish the race first. I, and the people who were running alongside me in our segment of that incredibly loog and colorful human ribbon, were just trying to finish, to run the 26 miles 385 yards from Hopkinton to downtown Boston and remain

The registered runners with autheotic numbers have officially qualified for the race. They look upon us with coo-descension. They wish we weren't around to clutter up the field. But happily, they can't or haveo't chosen to do much about us. As a result, the Boston Marathon is the only major sports event in which I, a 45-year-old nonathlete, can participate. I don't see why we cause them prob-lems. How could I hava got in their way? I never even saw the froot-runners. It was two minutes after the gun went off before our part of the line moved an inch.

Haven't We Met?

Our part of the race had three phases. Phase One was the acciable part, an occasion to find out where the next man (or womao) was from. Have you sver run before? What instrument do you play for the Buffalo Philharmonic?
What pace are you running at? I'm

In Phase Two, competitiveness began to enter our race. Conversations stopped, and running became a more individual matter. What a delicious experience to find those tall, lean, intimi-dating runners in the gorgeous track of the Hillel Foundations of Greater Boston. In 1973, he took up running ofter two friends had died of heart

I had to get as far as the point where my kids were waiting for me. I couldn't let them down. I had sworn not to try to push myself beyond my natural inclinations (foolishly oot realizing that 26 miles is beyond anyone's netural inclinations), but if I could get ar least as far as the kids, I could anyone the state of could quit

The desire to run comes from deep within us. From the unconscious, the intuitive, the instinctive. And that desire becomes a passion when the runner learns to race. Then the race becomes all. Rabbi Israel spent weeks before he found a Japanese translation of the Haggadah, the text recited at the seder. He also arranged for a Japanese translator. Unfortunately, Yamamoto did not arrive in Boston until a half-hour after the second and final seder.

One other problem, involving diet, concerned the rabbi,

A recent Mailbox letter talked of the pollution problem in Madison Square Garden resulting from smoking. When the Omni in Atlanta was opened several seats back, smoking was allowed. By the third period of hockey games, the haze got so bad that it was hard to see the ice from the upper levels.

However, because of complaints from fans, smoking was hanned from the arena thia year and allowed only in the concourse. Now the environment is quite pleasant. No-smoking signs are posted at entrances to the arena, and attendants notify fans of the ban if they light up in the arena. The new policy has worked well and is quite a relief for a nonsmoker like me. JACK ROSENBERG

Grant Is Assailed On Handling Mets

To the Sports Editor:

It's time that M. Donald Grant resigned or was farmed out to San Diego. His statistics as the Mets' chairman of the board have been somewhat short of dismal, and his relations with players have been worse.

How does Grant reward loyalty? Witness the unceremonial dismissal of auch Mets as Cleon Jones, Tug McGraw. Tommie Agee, Art Shamsky and Rusty Staph, whose salary demands rose to the level of their playing performances.

The imposition of the maximum 20 percent cut (later revoked) of Seaver's salary last year was the sign of a mean and niggardly man. Perhaps Met fans can look forward to new, young leadership that reflects a concern for people and oot for public-relations gim-mickry.

Yanks Need Talent, Not Shorter Hair

To the Sports Editor:

The New York Yankees' principal owner. Gaorge Steinbrenner 3d, sure has a lot of nerve to demand that his players cut their hair in order to, in his words, "instill e certain sense of order and discipline."

Perhaps the short-haired owner should remember that the frequent trips he must have taken to the barber shop enabled him to have the disciplioe necessary to gain a Federal conviction for illegal campaign cootributions and a 15-mooth suspension from baseball. The Yankees oeed talent and good, honest work from the owners and players-not short hair-to win the pennant. THOMAS MARIAM

Rutgers Basketball and Its Critical Coach To the Sports Editor:

It is a shame that the undefeated Rutgers University baskethail players had to be subjected to the insensitivity and arrogance of their coach, Tom Young, and their university president, both obviously unable to keep college athletics in proper perspective.

On March 6, prior to the St. Joho's game, Young had the audacity to remark thar "Tha N.C.A.A. ia the major leagues, the N.I.T. is the mioor leagues." What a short memory he has. How quickly he forgets how pleased and delighted Rutgers was whan invited to the Netional Invitation Tournament in 1973 and 1974. It is unimportant that Rutgers was defeated in the first rounds.

When Young's future teams do not qualify or do oot get invited to the National Collegiate tournament, I hope Rutgers and the N.I.T. selection committee remember his statement and advise him to cooduct his own New Brunswick tournament

Young's tirade, following the defeat by Michigan in the N.C.A.A. semificials, indicates that he does not qualify to "teach" students who happen to be athletes. Instead of being thankful to his players for 31 consecutive victories, this coach says, "We stunk the place out." and "I think we're really embarrassed.

If this is the only way in which he can respond for Rutgers's first defeat, theo he should keep his mouth shut. Of course, he would probably retort that he was just telling it like everyone else saw it or that it was said in despoodency. These are the standard lines that some coaches deliver because perhaps they abould never have been coaching college students in the first place.

Edward Bloustein, the Rutgers president, should obviously have felt great joy and a sense of pride to be the president of a university with an undefeated hasketball season. But is is absurd to assume and remark as he did on March the student who has no interest in going for sports himself will be attracted to a school with a successful athletic program" and "It adds to the image of a well-rounded university." I have known hundreds of people who played sandlot or varsity high school sports and had no interest in playing college ball, but chose their eventual university because of factors other than a auccessful athletic program. Even if it does add to the image of a well-rounded university, does it make that university better than the one that does not have winning teams?

A University Is More Than a Sports Factory

To the Sports Editor:

Tom Young is quoted as baving said;
"We stunk the place out." He went on to imply that, by their performance, he and his team had "shamed" not only Rutgers but also Eastern basket.

It is deplorable when a coach is, publicly so brutal and unduly critical of himself and of the young men whose lives and careers he is partly responsible for shaping and molding. Yet there is a mystery here. Public outbursts like this are supposedly uncharacteristic of Tom Young. Why did he say them?

Perhaps the remarks represented the shocked reactions of a young coach who was frustrated and angry et the bursting of a personal balloop. Reporters have lately exposed the insidious existence among today's "big-time" col-lege coaches of such a halloon or myth.

This is the myth that "winning is the only thing." The myth that, by virtue of its being nationally televised. an intercollegiate sports contest somehow becomes a cosmic event. The myth that student-athletes in their late teens.

ment?). Young needs to come back to earth from his ride on the balloon inflated hy the pressure-cooker of big-time intercollegiate sports. He needs to apologize. Not to Eastern basketball for the way Rutgers "stunk," hut to his players, for the way their coach reacted wheo his hubble burst and ha got wind of the smell.

RONALD'L. KAMM, 'M.D. New Shrewshury, N.J.

Losing to the Best Is Hardly a Disgrace

To the Sports Editor.

It would have shown a great deal of class oo the part of Tom Young to accept the fact that his team appeared to be outclassed by the best teams in the nation. Rather than admit Rutgers was beaten by a more talented Michigan team, Young insisted on downgrading the victors. He stated that his team had a bad game and Michigan wasn't really that good. Well, what lodge?

about U.C.I.A.? It is easy to be a gracious winner, but evidently losing is another matter. HARVEY CRAMER Utica, N.Y.

Coach Is Lacking A Touch of Class.

To the Sports Editor:

Tom Young lacks class. Rutgers University should be proud of its baskethall Young, who berates everyone, is a poor representative of those young men.

His antics show him as a boy, oot a strong leader. During a regular-season gai Syracuse, he drew two techn for telling the officials they eeing as if they were in whatever that means. ...

"strength" coach of the New Orleans Saints, had to say. Roy, who introduced the Dallas Cowboys to a condition-ing program of weight training and runoing, says no team works barder than the Cowboys. "Look at their haods.

They're like peasants from gripping that iron. They're never injured, like the Jets. The Jets aren't in any kind of condition. They're led by great quarterback but they're not in condition. A lot of teams in the N.F.L. are not in condition."

To get into condition Roy advocates for openers that everybody run at least 10 miles a week.

Does Joe Gordon, publicity director for the Steelers, know something? Gordon issued a release last week about a Jets-Steelers exhibition game described as "What probably will be Joe Namath's first and last Pittsburgh ap-pearance as a pro football

The N.F.L. schedule has been backed up one week with the first exhibition game, the Steelers against the College All-Stars, in Chicago on July 23. The reason is to suoid Christmas, which falls on a Saturday this year. By starting the playoffs the weekend before Christmas the league will have no games on the boliday and the two conference championships the day after, Dec. 26.

The N.F.L. has not forgot-ten all the abuse it received for playing on Christmas Day, 1971.

The N.F.L. has been described as a family. Well, that Craig Cassady drafted by New Orleans is the son of Howard (Hopalong) Cassady, the 1955 Heisman Trophy winner and a little dandy for the Lions in the late nineteen-fifties.

The Saints also drafted Tinker Owens of Oklahoma, whose brother Steve, the 1969 Heisman winner, is the Detroit fullback. Orrio Oslen, drafted by Kansas City, is the youngest brother of Merlin of the Rams and Phil of the Broncos.

The Buckey brothers, Don and Dave, drafted by the Jets are not the first twins in the N.F.L. In 1970 Ron and Rich Saul from Michigan State were drafted by Houston and Los Angeles, Other brothers chosen in the same draft were Leroy and Dewey Selmon this year; Ron and Fred McNeill in 1974, Marlin and Mike McKeever io 1961 and and Oliver Poole in

Road to the Olympics

When the Yankees opened their new ball park Thursday, a vice president of the Pittsburgh Pirates stood through the game behind the overcrowded press box, unrecognized in the throng. His name is Harry Lillis Crosby, called Bing. On Friday a news photographer spotted Crosby talking with Terence Cardinal Cooke in St. Patrick's Cathedral and did recognize him, "Where can I get the subway to of Aqueduct?" Crosby asked. "Let me take The Times some pictures and I'll drive you out," the cameraman said.

Bing did and be did. Crosby had come down from Montresi where he helped Bob Hope make a television show last Monday. The show, which Hope calls "Road to the Olympics" although its formal name is the Bob Hope Special in Montreal, will be shown on NBC-TV Wednesday, yet 16,000 customers paid $90,000 to watch the taping of a program they could see for nothing nine days later. They filled the Forum, the great hall that hockey

"With a national sport like ice bockey," Bob told the Canadians, "no wonder you have socialized medicine."

The Canadian and United States Olympic teams will split the $90,000 evenly, and the aim of the TV performance is to raise another half-million. On the air, Hope solicits contributions to Olympic House, Box HOPE, New York, N.Y.

"Speaking of hockey," Bob told his audience, "I heard of a player who had a concussion and three fractures and lost four teeth all within five minutes, and he was still in the dressing room." He broke them up and they didn't mind even when he said be didn't watch hockey much because he hated vio-lence. "In fact." be said, "I fainted twice during the opening credits of 'Jaws.' Besides, I'm not too keen on a game where every team has a coach and a chaplaio."

It's Something Else

"We brought 'em a pretty good show," Hope said on the phone from California. "Crosby and that Sbirley Jones and young Freddy Prinze and Lynn Anderson, the country singer, and also they got a new French kid 15 years old who's made $2 million already. René Simard, and he's a smasb in Japan. "I flew up last Saturday with Jesse Oweos and we looked over the Olympic complex and it's something else. Of course, it's new to me, I've oever been around one of those things. They've got five or six tremendous buildings. They're about $200 millioo-

"Some people can't understand the delay in constructing Olympic Stadium," he said in Montreal, "since it took only six days to create the world. Of course, they hope the stadium wal be in better shape than that. They were gonna dedicate it to the career of Mayor Drapeau but they didn't know which would be finished first."

Playing a hall is no novelty to Hope, who has performed at places like Monticello Raceway, the Pauley Pavilion at the University of California, Los Angeles, and the University of Southern California's Pavilion. "Bing and I opened Madison Square Garden," ne said afterward, "and it was great. I opened the Superdome in New Orleans, so I doo't lack any guts."

The Battler

Bob has owned a piece of the Cleveland Indians for years and he used to be part owner of the Los Angeles Rams, but in sports he is most commonly associated with golf, both as player and as angel of the Bob Hope Desert Classic at Palm Springs, Calif.

"It's a fantastic scene," he said on the phone, "with all those courses, and we've had such a great success for the Elsenhower Hospital. Last year with bad weather we made something like $680,000. We make $300,000 just on the Desert Classic Ball. We had something like 30 sponsors that gave $5,000 apiece, things like that. "Of course, I was with the Rams for any years with Fred Pauley. Then Pauley and Dan Reeves started to fight and I was on Pauley's side because they invited me in. Then Pauley sold out, and it was funny the way they timed it but right abead of television he sold out. That franchise was worth twice as much as soon as the tube started. I had to go with them. and their Reeves invited me to come back in as partner, and I couldn't do it because it would look like I was ratting out on my buddies. So I didn't do it."

As an athlete, Hope confines himself these days to kicking his golf ball out of the rough, but he started life as a boxer. That excessively prominent chin was always within an opponent's reach, even a very short-armed opponent.

"I started out fighting in Cleveland," he said, "and Joe Williams said I was the only fighter ever carried both ways. I used a gag, I said I always enjoyed climbing into the ring. I never remembered going out."

Holman, 21, Wins $125,000 Bowling

AKRON, Ohio, April 17 (AP)-Marshall Holmen, 21 years old, of Medford, Ore., became the youngest bowler ever to win the $125,000 Touroameot of Champions today by defeating Billy Hardwick of Louisville, Ky., 203-198. Holman, also only the second man ever to win the Professional Bowlers Association's premier event on his first attempt, needed a mark in the final frame to claim the $25,000 first prize and spared by picking up the 4-7.

Colocidentally, Hardwick is the only other bowler to win the Tournament of Champions on his first attempt, doing It in 1965. Hardwick pocketed $14,000 in second place money.

Tony Kubek, the NBC broadcaster on the nationally televised game, and the Reds president, Bob Howsam, watched the proceedings with more than passing interest. Kubek, a former major league player with the New York Yankees makes a hobby of beekeeping. Howsam's father was a loog-time bee farmer.

ANAHEIM, Calif., April 17 (AP)—Dave Roberts of the Detroit Tigers fired a twohitter in his American League debut today and the Tigers used homers by Bill Freehan and Aurelio Rodriguez to defeat the California Angels, Roberts, acquired from Houston in the offseason, retired the first 14 men and carried a oo-hitter into the seventh inning. But Bruce Bochte looped a single to shallow left, the ball deflecting off the glove of Alex Johnson.

The Old Testament

New idols and new history soon will emerge at Yankee Stadium II as a new testament for the famous arena. But the old testament lives on grandly. At the opener, Joe DiMaggio sat in the first row of a loge box, watching the game as intently as if he were studying a pitcher from the dugout in 1941 during his 56-game hitting streak. Against the Johnny Lujack was the Notre Dame quarterback who tackled Army's Doc Blanchard in the clear in the memorable 0-0 tie in 1946.

"Johnny Lujack," said Toots Sbor, the saloonkeeper. "You know where he told me he's going tonight—to the opera. Imagine that. I went to the opera once and left at halftime, Outside I told a cabbie to teke me to my joint and he told me it wes the first time he ever took anybody from the opera to my joint,"

By now, Toots Shor was sitting at a teble in the catacombs of Yankee Sta-dium II with Mickey Mantle and Whitey Ford.

"White Rock," he was saying to Ford, "remember the day you and Mickey played golf before the 1961 All-Star Game.

"Out in San Francisco," said Ford. "at the Olympic Club and you signed Horace Stoneham's name for us in the pro shop for golf shoes and shirts and balls. The tab was like $200 and that night I saw Pete Stoneham and tried to pay blm back, but he said, 'No, let's make it double or nothing on you getting Willie Mays out tomorrow.'

"The next day I had two strikes on Willie and," said Ford with a wink as he sild the first two fingers of bis left hand across his tongue, "I threw him a spitball that started out at his shoulke across still see Mickey clapping his hands in center field."

Mets, With 21 Hits, Rout Pirates, 17-1

you." Koosman was happier over over another statistic, though, his 20th career triumph over the Pirates. "Beating one of the best teams in baseball 20 times [he has lost to them 15 times] makes me feel most proud," he said.

A hattering of four Pirate pitchers, including 10 runs and 11 hits off Dave Giusti, considered the ace relief man of the staff, Made Koosman's task easy. The Mets tallied five times off Bruce Kison, the starter, in the first inning and had another five-run inning off Giusti in the seventh of their five errors.

"That usually happens when a club has a winning streak," said Frazier. "Suddenly, they can't do anything

Kison didn't last the first inning, and Kent Tekulve came in to hold the Mets for two innings. But Larry Dem-ercy, the third Pirate hurier, surrendered two runs in the fifth before Manager Danny Murtaugh sent Giusti in "fnr scome badly needed work." According to Kranepool, it was off Giusti's "slow fastball," that he and Kingman hit their homers. And three consecutive doubles by Felix Millan, Koosman and Weyne Garrett helped a three-run

"I wouldn't have left Dave in under any other conditions," said Murtaugh. Giusti agreed, saying:

"I bappened to need the work and didn't mind staying in. No sense wasting the whole bull pen in a losing cause."

Koosman said he felt sorry for Giusti. "Baseball clubs ought to pay a special guy to come in just for such situations," he said. "He could be a mop-up man who comes in when a game is lost and is paid to take ebuse. I was sorry to see it happen to Giusti."

The Mets batters didn't care who it was. The victory brought their season wonlost record to 3-3 and left them two games behind Pittshurgh in the East Division. The 21 hits also raised their team batting average from "The car was refined, tight, well finished and, most of all, intelligent."

Intelligent, it's not a word that is used often to describe an automobile. But we think it's a word that characterizes Lancia.

Because if you compare the Lancia to an overpriced European luxury car or the usual mass-produced Detroit status symbol, it certainly is intelligent. The intelligent alternative. Because it's a luxury, performance car that's realistically priced.

Why haven't you heard of the Lancia before? Because very few Lancias have ever come

But in Europe, Lancia is one of the oldest and most respected car manufacturers. And it's now a division of Fiat.

The new Lancia that's now available in America is the Lancia Beta. And it comes in two body styles: a Coupe and a 4-door Sedan. It's powered by a highly responsive 4-cylinder.

twin overhead carm engine that's extremely reliable and doesn't require constant maintenance. And it's coupled to a 5-speed overdrive transmission. So the engine can run more efficiently with less wear and tear at highway speeds. The Lancia Beta also has front-wheel drive. So it has incredible traction in snow or on wet. slippery roads.

What's more, the Lancia Beta comes with rack-and-pinion steering for precise control.

There's also an adjustable steering column, an electronic clock, and thick, plush carpeting. And since the engine is mounted sideways, there's plenty of room for passengers and their luggage. How much does the Lancia Beta cost?

Cavaliers Triumph Over Bullets, 88-76

CLEVELAND, April 17 (AP) -Austin Carr and Bobby Smith each scored 17 points today to spark the Claveland Cavaliers to a 88-76 National Baskethall Association playoff victory over the Washington Bullets.

The victory in the nationally televised gamo gave Cleveland a 2-1 lead in the four-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series, Game No. 3 will be played Wednes-day night at Landover, Md.

The Cavaliers, much to the delight of the N.B.A. record playoff crowd of 21,061, changed the script from the lirst two games of the series by dominating the first period with an aggressive defense. The Cavaliers took the lead at 7-6 and moved ahead 21-13 at the end of the first quarter. Carr came of the bench with 3:07 left in that period and, playing until the half, scored 15 points as the Cavaliers improved the margin to Smith, the only original Cavalier, took over the scoring load in the second half, coming up with 6 points in the third period and 7 in the final stanza. Janet Guthrie, who will make her USAC debut in Trenton next ica, The S.C.C.A. has about 100 women among the 6,000 drivers, mostly amateurs, it licenses and Volistedt wanted a friend at the S.C.C.A. to recommend several capable of breaking the sex barrier at the Indiana brickyard. 'The first name on the list was Janet's."

Vollstedt said.
"What has Guthrie been driving?".
Unser wanted to know. "Jaguars? Why, when I was 15 or 16, I used to race Jaguars down the highway, and if I tried entering Indianapolis you think I wouldn't have been laughed at?"

"Very few people in the world have driven 1,500-pound cars with 7-13 horsepower," said Miss Guthrie, referring to her lack of experience in the powerful Indy-type cars. Her face lighted up when she thought of her audition for Vollstedt last month at Ontario (Calif.) Speed-way, about how, after a few laps of getting the car "up to speed," the boost of the turbocharger finally ignited. "What a thrill. It was like going to the

"I am a racing driver who happens to be a woman,"

Other drivers at Phoenix were critical of Arlene Hiss's performance (she herself said she made "an error of judg-ment" in going slowly). Unser, a man of the strong, silent, Gary Cooper school, did not want to get embroiled in a controversy. But he won the race, and with the media focusing its attention on the debut of a weman driver, he was unable to escape. "I said I thought she didn't do a good job," said Unser. "I really tried to say 'no comment."

"I spent a great portion of my years in racing, 27 of them, doing 50 or 60 races a year, and I've had my shares of broken bones and hospitals," said Unser, "All I was doing was trying to become a qualified professional driver. Now here come these women with their dinky little experience in dinky little cars with little horsepower."

Janet Guthrie hasn't had many crashes, and the only time she had brokeo bones was 10 days before her trial with Vollsiedi's Indy car. She was doing exercises in a San Francisco hotel room ("I didn't want to jog around Nob Hill") when she fell and injured her right foot. But she, too, has deep scars from racing. .

"Racing killed my career in physics," said the Michigan State graduate. "It cost me financially; here I am at 38 with no assets and all because of the money I've spent to go racing. And it's made a big bole in my social life. It's hard to have a relationship with someone when you have almost a total commitment to racing."

The divorce rate is high among racing drivers—Bobby Unser has been divorced three times and Arlene Hiss is separated from her husband, Mike, who was the Indianapolis rookie of the year in 1972.

"There are men who dance and women who race. What's wrong with that?" -Arlene Hiss

Dick Simon is 42 years old, the same age as Bobby Unser, and the No. I driver on the Vollstedt team. Simon didn't think much of the idea of having a woman teammate. "I didn't want to be a babysitter for a publicity stunt," he said. Janet Guthrie changed his mind when they met at Ontario. when they met at Ontario.

Racing drivers are different from other people, some might even say "crazy." Dick Simon, who gave up the presidency of a multi-million-dollar business to concentrate on racing, was once ordered by USAC officials to see a psychiatrist after driving a race with "third-degree burns right down to the bone on my leg."

"But I was running well and there was no way I was going to get out of that car," Simon explained. "As soon as I came into the pits after the race I passed out.

"The psychiatrist told me that my mental attitude was stronger than Bobby Unser used to suffer from vertigo. Airplane trips used to terrify him. He took up flying and became a Janet Guthrie flew here first plane when she was 13-her father was an airline pilot. Then she wanted to try parachuting. Her parents didn't approve, "I convinced them I was serious by jumping off the roof of our home [one-story] the summer I was 16," she said.

Arlene Hiss, as a little girl, asked her mother for a "hammer and nails" for Christmas. "I took apart my doll carriage and built a soap-box derby racer,"

It's oot really insanity, but it is best understood by other drivers.

"Janet Guthrie is going to surprise a ton of people. -Dick Simon Janet Guthrie was flying to Los Angeles for her trial at Ontario. "All I could think was, 'I've got my hands on an Indianapolis car.' There was no way

I was going to show up on crutches.

She left the crutches at the attood Vollstedt that her limp was a sprain," and went out to the to meet Simon.

"I thought she was going to be unother woman," said Simoo, within a couple of minutes we carrying on a conversation on a dri to-driver basis. I could tell she'd around racing by the questions she asking. For example, she told me had never driven a car with the wines in such a position as the car and she wanted to know about wind turbulence.

"I began to get excited. If she c perform on the track, I knew this w be no joke."

Smoothly, she began going an the track at 160 miles an hourfirst requirement for the rookie at Indianapolis—and Simon was pressed that she could answer caestions about what the va gauges in the car were registering

Third, says Harman, use slice serve instead of a flat, all-out delivery. To hit a slice, you should hold the racquet with an eastern backhand grip. You can reach that by shaking hands with the racquet and then rotating your hand about a quarter of a turn over the top of the racquet. The slice is a safer serve because the spin on the ball helps pull it down into the court. It also can give an opponent problems because it veers in flight to the left (in the case of right-handed servers). Fourth, try to put the serve.

Historic First: Two Relays Carnival Going Metric event in which each man runs The Penn Relays Carnival is making its own contribu-tion to Philadelphia's Bicenthe Olympic distance of 1,500 meters. The new dis-

Neither of these long relays will yield times that can be easily com-pared with the imperial dis-tance events that are still standard for relays in the Track tances, as will the Drake Relays at Des Moines United States.

Nonetheless, Jim Tuppeny, Penn's head coach and the meet director of the Penn Re-lays, is convinced that he has done the right thing. "We needed to resurface

Franklin Field, and we rigure that the metric track we're installing now should last 10 years," he said. "Long before then, I believe that metric distances will be standard in American meets, as they are now everywhere else in the world. We may be leaders at this, hut we won't be unique for very long."

Regardless of the distances, the 82d annual carnival will have its usual top-notch entry of teams from throughout the country. The 400-meter and 800-meter relay fields are led hy Tennessee and Arizona State. Tennessee equaled the world record in the 880-yard relay a week ago, winning at the Dogwood Relays in Knoxville in 1 minute 21.7 seconds. NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J., April 17-Take away a 14second hurdler from most 480-yard shuttle hurdles relay teams and there won't be inuch left. But take Joe Myatt, a 14-second burdler pull, away from Seton Hall's shuttle hurdles team and there still is a team that boasts the fastest time in the country this year.

In the best performance of the inaugural running of the Rutgers University Relay Carnival, Seton Hall's hurdling quartet of Kevin Wehb, Reggie Blackshear, Kevin McEvoy and Larry Bunting ran away from Manhattan and St. John's, winning hy 20 yards in the sparkling time of 57 seconds. To put the performance in perspec-tive, the Penn Relays rec-ord for the race is 0.56.9. Seton Hall like most of the teams competing in Rutgers Stadium today, was preparing for the Penn Relays. The Pirates won the 440-yard and 880-yard relays as well as the hurdles? Blackshear, who doubles as a sprinter, ran the second leg in the 440 relay and made un an eight-yard deficit to Randy Clark in anchoring the 880-yard team to a five-yard victory over Adelphi.

Adelphi's sprint medley relay team, also pointing for Penn, showed It is ready with Dabney, the anchorman, took a quick 3:22 victory. Bill the baton a yard or two absed of formidable Eamonn Coehlan of Villanova and pulled away in the final lap. Dabney's split for the halfmile leg was 1:50.6, the fastest of the day.

"Let's face it." said Dabney, "this was just a warmup for the Penn Relays. I hope to run about 1:48 next week in Philadelphia. The sprint medley is our hig race this year, and we're shooting for 3:18, or so."

The Panthers also won the one-mile and two-mile relays. In the mile relay, Clark ran: a 47.4-second third leg that gave Adelphi a lead which Kevin Price maintained with a 0:47.2 on the anchor leg. In the field events Roland Desonier of C. W. Post threw the hammer 184 feet, 7 inches and won thet event. He missed e double hy finishing second hy 13 inches in the discus. Gary Weller of Stockton State won with a toss of 167-10, with Desonier at 166-9. The C. W. Post senior, who threw 197 feet

But his best put of 56 feet 4 inches beat the field of collegians and post-collegians by 2½ feet. He also had several foul puts over 60 feet.

The pole vault was won by Tim St. Lawrence of the New York A. C. after a three-hour duel with Steve Raab of the Philadelphia Pioneer Club. St. Lawrence cleared 16-7 on his first attempt, then had the bar raised to 17-1. ## Dedicated Jersey Swimmer Sets Sights on Olympic Berth

The American women's record-holder in the 100meter butterfly swim owes much of her success to an unusual source: Bernie Boglioli. As a fresh-man on the Mon-Women mouth College swimming team in 1974, Wendy

inches and weighed 140 pounds.

"By Christmas of my freshman year, I was up to 182 pounds and began to feel a hit heavy and slow in the pool, but I continued to eat a lot of foolish things," she said, "Then I met Bernie, and I just wanted to cut down on my weight. He never said anything about my weight, hut I began to feel very con-scious about it."

Within three months, she was back to 140 pounds, engaged to Bernie and on her way to a successful swimming career.

At the Amateur Athletic Union national indoor championships in Long Beach, Calif., two weeks ago, she swam the 100-meter butterfly in 1 minute 2.14 seconds, hreaking. Peggy Tosdal's American mark of 1.02.18. Husband Coaches a Team

Mrs. Boglioli finished the A.A.U. championships with e gold medal in the butterfly, silver medals in the 400-meter freestyle and 400-meter medley relay and bronze medals In the 100-meter and 200meter freestyle. Few thought a swimmer who had been in-active last summer could achieve anything like that.

"I was married last summer and decided to take a boneymoon rather than compete," she said. "But my marriage has in no way hindered my career. Bernie is a former swimmer and now the assistant coach for the Monmouth College team. We spend a lot of time together at the pool." As a native of Land O

Lakes, Wis., Mrs. Boglioll learned at an early stage of the sacrifices required of a successful swimmer. She be-gan swimming at a lake near her home when she was 8 years old, and she remembers . Yet one senses she will be vividly the cold evenings she happier if she wins at Montand her younger sister Laurie spent swimming in the lake.

"Dedication is what it takes to succeed," she said. "You have to set your mind to it and do it. It was that way when I had to lose the weight, and it will be thet way if I want to make the Olympic team."

The world record in the 100-meter hutterfly is 1.01.24 by Kornelia Ender of East Germany last July. Mrs. Boglioli believes she will reach that mark hefore the Olympic trials in June.

'Attitude, Speed, Training' Mrs. Boglioli also swims for the Central Jersey Track Club, coached by Frank Elm, assistant coach of the United States Olympic women's team. She says her condition-ing and distance work must he improved before the trials. Dick Steadman, the Monmouth coach, has faith in her and feels confident she will make the Olympic team and win the gold medal.

"She has the right attitude, the speed and the training needed for the hutterfly," said Steadman. "She isn't one to get overconfident or cocky. She knows what she will be up against in Montreal, so she's not going to let setting an American record get her too psyched up." Mrs. Boglioli, on the other hand, believes ber relaxed attitude comes not only from ber fine showing in the A.A.U. championships but also from happiness she shares with ber busband and ber school. "I love it here," she said.

"Dick Steadman is a fine coach. I got my younger sister to come here and join the team. It's e regular fam-

Bold Forbes created a stir at the Puerto Rican track from the start. He swept to five straight victories and then was sent to New York. He proceeded to win the Treme proceeded to win the fre-mont by five lengths at Bel-mont Park and the Saratoga Special at the Spa by eight lengths. He has been a wio-ner or a strong contender in all of five of his subsequent made a front-running trip of the race. Berthed second behind Sonkisser in the rush around the clubhouse turn, the Tizol performer was moved to lead at the head of the backstretch.

Angel Cordero, who rode the choice, then settled the colt down along the rail. The pride of Puerto Rico maintained his advantage with ease and, as the horse reached the far turn, he boasted a three-length lead. For a time on the final turn, it appeared that Bold Forbes, who like his rivals was toting the scale weight of 126 pounds, might be tir-on him. But once the field had reached the stretch, it was all Bold Forbes as he proceeded to draw away from his six rivals. There was no doubt Bar-rera had the Derby in mind before the race. He instructed Cordero to have the horse travel an extra eighth of a mile after the finish. Bold Forbes' clocking for the 114mile trip while being pulled up was 2:0315. Last year, Foolish Pleasure won the worth $67,860 and increased the colt's career earnings to $201,439. Bold Forbes almost 2:04 in his triumph.

When Bold Forbes Relaxed Even His Rider Was Fook

By STEVE CADY Like thousands of other Like thousands of other people at Aqueduct yester-day. Angel Cordero thought Bold Forbes was "finished" when the field in the S2d running of the Wood Memorial reached the top of the stratch. the stretch.

"I figured he was dead," the jockey said later, after 3-year-old colt had smashed the stakes record and some within a few ticks of the track mark for a mile and an eighth.

Cordero's confidence had leaked away when three rivals charged at his front-running mount with less than a quarter of a mile to go.

"He felt like he wasn't going to give me any more," sard the jockey. "But I guess
he was relaxing. When I hit

The result was a powerful display of authority by the Puertn Rican-owned colt, and a new element of suspense for the 102d Kentucky Derby a week from next Saturday. Honest Pleasure, just about everybody's favorite until now, has some company. Laz Barrera, trainer of Bold Forbes, answered the obvious question even before report-ers could get it our of their "Friday," he said in the winner's circle, his voice shaking ever so slightly.

No explanations were

No explanations were needed. Bold Forbes, an oddson favorite yesterday, would be boarding a plane next Friday for Louisville, where he will run in the Derby on May 1. When he does, said Barrera, Honest Pleasure will

"Honest Pleasure is a great horse," the trainer conceded, "hut my horse is great, too. That means the other one will be hooking a real good horse for the first time."

Even in his excitement, Barrera didn't forget whet any good trainer cherishes: an ability to look for the "Honest Pleasure will be even money," he said, "and my horse will be 5 or 6 to 1." Off what he showed yesterday, Bold Forbes is unlikely to go to the post at odds as generous as that. Even with Honest Pleasure in the race.

Barrera was less concerned than Cordero when Bold Forbes, after losing ground on the first turn and then rushing into a daylight lead, began coming back to the

"I wasn't worried," the trainer said. "He does that. He waits for horses until he can see them. Then he runs away from them. He saw them coming today—and he them coming today-and he

The leafing tendency cost Bold Forbes a race in Cali-fornia last winter, but Bar-rera solved the problem by cutting holes in the colt's blinkers so he could see the opposition. Bold Forbes, a grandson of the late Bold Ruler, has oow broken stakes records in his last two starts:

They have made drastic changes on and to see the Cosmos do well because they have heard off the field, but have rethat no league can be a suctained their coach, Dennis Violett, who says: "If I had had the club I have now last team in New York. When the Cosmos failed to make the playoffs in the Northern year, we would have won the whole thing." Division last year, the league felt they deserved a "better chance" and this year put Southern Division This is probably the weakthe Cosmos in the Eastern Division, which is a lot stronger than the Northern est division in the league because of Hartford, which is expected to finish last, the same as last year. Rochester, which had been the talk of the division, lost Jim May, the goalkeeper, who underwent knee surgery this past week. As a result, the Chicago Sting, Boston Minute-men and Toronto Metros are the favorites, unless the Lancers find a replacement for May. Hubert Vogelsinger, coach of the Minutemen, perhaps has the edge with Antonio Simoes in his lineup. Everything depends on Georgie Best of the Los Angeles Aztecs in this group. If Best gets himself into shape and into the groove. the Aztecs will walk away from the Dallas Tornado and the San Antooio Thunder, the Aztecs' two strongest rivals. Bobby Moore should help the Thunder and Kyle Rote's maturity should be an asset to the Tornado. The San Jose Earthquakes and San Diego Jaws are expected to play secondary roles.

Western Division The Portland Timbers, who lost the championship game last year to the Rowdies, should do well and so should the Seattle Sounders: But if there is a so-called darkhorse in the league this season it is the Minnesota Kicks. The Vancoiver White-Pelé. Marsh joins the Row-

Petty, considered the king of short-track racing, is a 14-time winner at the .525mile Martinsville track. His "track record" would seem to make him the favorite in tomorrow's $92,000 Virginia 500, but David Pearson can make a good case for their

Pearson, from Spartan-burg, S.C., is Nascar's hot-test driver. He brings four Pearson. victories (Riverside, Daytona, Atlanta and Darlington) to his first short-track outing of the year. His only other start was at Rockingham, N.C., where a faulty oil pump in his Wood Brothers Mer-cury steered him to 29th place. He said be sees no problem in putting a 'big track car" on a short track.

"With the disc brakes, I think we'll be better off this year than we have been. We'll be at a disadvantage to the short-track cars, but we have won Martinsville before with a big track car, so we know it can be done," he said.

The clams, which were unusually large because very few people knew they were there, could be readily discovered by walking along and striking the rocks sharply with the blade of a shovel. If a clam was nearby, it usually fired a jet of water into the air. At the very least, the jar of metal on stone caused the sipbon hole to pop open and become vis-ible. One will not, by the way, find steamers all the

The sea clam can he used in every recipe that calls for the hard-shelled clam, or quahog, except for eating them raw as one does the smaller quanog known as the cherrystone. The entire sea clam's innards would be too much of a mouthful taken raw. Its white-orange foot is tasty, but most people find it too bard and too

One should not, by the way, discard the belly and belly contents of the sea clam when making chowder, fritters or spagnetti saoce. Grind op everything and the flavor will be more zesty than that provided by the

The bivalves with near-perfect occlusion, among perfect occlusion, among them the quahogs and oyswill remain alive for more than a month in a cool place, such as a refrigerator. Oysters should be stored with their deep sides down, for that helps retain the life-sustaining water.

Sea clams will last only a few days under similar conditions, because the two halves of the shell do not close over the siphon area. Because of this ready-made hole-ideal for the insertion of a knife—they are easy

Quahogs may be gathered by raking hlindly in an area known to contain them, or if the water is clear, they may be spotted by a snorkler. A portion of their shells re-mains above the bottom.

To remove a raw conch from its shell, one knocks a slit in its upper, or knobbed, eod with the back of a machete and cuts the creature free.

All shellfish may be removed from their housings by boiling, of course, hut many recipes call for heginning with the raw meat.

Conchs and whelks retreat far into their shells when they are boiled, and have he retrieved with a piece of wire. A coat hanger the job nicely.

aquid and octopus belong to the same family-goes far beyond food. The shells were used as tools, trumpets, mon-

(wampum beads) and ceremonfal purposes. (New Yorkers with an affinity for mollusks would enjoy the American Museum of Natural History where there is a permanent display called "The Hall of Mollusks and Mankind.")

Title Event Listed In Offshore Racing

By JOANNE A. FISHMAN

The surge in offshore yacht racing in recent years-accompanied by growing paina of spiraling costs, handicappiog, and cries of professionalism—has resulted in the newly formed Offshore Racing Club of America. of And one of Bosting O.R.C.A.'s first steps was to es-tablish the first national offshore championship, which starts this year. The idea is to use existing races rather than add another to an already crowded schedule. A yacht's best six race from the top 35 contests throughout the country will be scored for the national title. This season these in-clude the Vineyard race and the Bienmal Bermuda race.

"O.R.C.A. is the sounding board of this serious competitor," explains Norm Raben, one of the foremost Long Island Sound yachtsmen and O.R.C.A.'s vice commodore. "We are not a social club . . . the essential is a love of, and an active participation in, the racing of boats with lids on them io offhave the vehicle to solve the myriad of problems that fester at the yacht club har." One of these problems is money. Someone once de fined a boat as a hole in the water, which you fill with money. And this was never more true than with the ofshore racing boats. A One Tonner (about 35 feet long) costs about $100,-000 and the total investment in a big machine such as Raben's 50-foot La Forza del Destino approaches $300,000. Built by Derecktor's Yard, La Forza dominated the offshore circuit in the northeast for the last four years. "I've been as guilty as anybody in escalating costs of the grand prix type of yacht racing. And when you're successful, it's a heady brew . . . but do you just buy your way in, or should it be similar to golf, where you have to earn a bandisides in Bedford Village.

Looking ahead he says it seems doubtful the controversy regarding professionals (sailmakers, builders, designers) in racing can be solved, adding, "we may solved, adding, even have professiooal racing as an ultimate step." He eovisions two other categories of competition: the club lover race and the flat out amateur on the grand prix circuit.

Ted Turner of Atlanta has been elected commodore, with Clayton Ewing of Trappe, Md., rear commodore; and Bob Bavier Jr., of New York secretary-treasurer.

Paul Fendler, 19 years old, of Rye won the recent Sunfish world championships off Club Puerto Azul in Maiguata, Venezuela. Weighing 130-pounds, he had the sixrace series-sailed in relatively light air-sewed up by the end of the fifth race. Mike Catalano of Willomantic. Conn., finished second followed by Joan Carlos Plaza of Ecuador. . . Raymond Finley Jr., a Newark construction executive, has been elected commander of the United States Power Squadron's Dictrict 4, which comprises 16 local squadrons in New Jersey and New York.

Marine Expo's 76, the fifth annual boat show sponsored by the Marine Trades As-sociation of New Jarsey starts April 30 for a threeday stand at the Kings Grant ino and Marina, Point Pleas-ant, N.J. About 45 hoats, power and sail, will he ex-hibited in the water with another 100 displayed on

Like trant-engine, trant-wheel drive, for sureleated traction, or fuel injection, for easier starts in gold weather Acceleration from 0 to 50 in 8.0 seconds. A rich, spacious interior with lots of head

Sophisticaled safety featules, like a dual diagonal braking system, so if one blake circuit laib, another takes over. Or negative steering roll radius, designed to help you bring the car to a cantrolled stop in case of a front wheel blowout. And a remarkably small appelite for gas: The EPA estimates 37 mpg on the highway and 24 mag in the city (standard snift), your actual miles per gallon may vary with how and where you arive, your car's condition and optional equipment.

Someday Detroit may find a way to combine economy, performance and lux-ury in one car. And if they do, they il have one of the most impressive cars in the world-the '76 Fox by Audi.

The most Fiat we've ever brought to America.

A steel cage completely surrounds and protects the passenger compartment.

A 5-speed transmission. Only one of 6 sedans in the world with this as standard equipment.

Well, we've taken that idea and made it somewhat bigger, and more powerful, and more luxurious. And we call it the Fiat 131. If you've never considered a Fiat before, maybe it's time.

The new Fiat 131. 4,286.

The Peugeot Wagon.
It's not just shaped like a wagon, it's engineered like one.

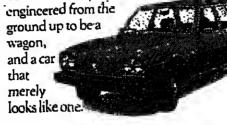

The roof line is higher in the rear for easier loading.

Instead of just an extra leaf in each rear spring, there's a whole extra coil spring for each rear wheel. And that's just part of a heavy-duty rear suspension system that lets the Peugeot wagon carry more than half a ton:(1,290 pounds, to be exact) without staggering under the load.

The Peugeot wagon comes with a gasoline engine or as the only diesel-powered wagon in America. Come in and test-drive either one. You'll see the difference between a car that's en-

A fast run around the shawroon A fast pitch. And a fast buck You all know the kind of dealer we're talking about. But, if you think that's the way it has to be, think this over. When you shop for you Mercedes at Sovereign, you don't just see our showroom, you see our backroom. And since we obviously have nothing to hide, you don't get that old fast-tolking runaround. And because we're trying to be the best, not the biggest, we don't self you and leave you. All we want is a reputation for quality and class that matches the mochines we sell. We're betting that's what you want, toe.

PEKING INDICATES

Teng-Keeps Party Job

Special to The New York Times

his joh as Minister of Defense, the Peking radio indicated tonight without giving an ex-

Reports had circulated among

Mr. Yeh had resigned as Defense Mioister in protest over

the former senior Deputy Prime Minister, Teng Hsiao-Ping, and

ception in Peking this evening,

his first public appearance since just after the start of the current antirightist campaign more than two months ago.

The radio identified Mr. Yeh

Communist party and deputy

The defense attorney, José Fernando Rocha, argued that the commissioner was unjustly accused, and that he had "achieved one of the most rapid and hrilliant careers within public security and has a portfolio bulging with unrivaled exploits in the field of national security."

Commissioner Fleury, a heavy-set, halding man in his neavy-set, haiding man to his forties, began his police career some t5 years ago, and has worked in virtually every division from the vice and prostitution squad through antiguerrilla operations. He endeared himself to officials of the military regime hy setting the ambush that killed the leftist guerrilla leader Carlos Marighela, in 1069. But it was that year also that Mr. Fleury was first accused of leading Death Squad

"I could never belong to such an organization, given my moral, religious, professional and political background, if indeed such an organization really exists," Mr. Fleury testified at one of the trials in which he was acquitted. acquitted. Tenfold Vengeance Vowed Newspapers are rarely called up anymore with information where the remains of victims can be located. The scrawled notes signed with a skull and crossbones no longer appear next to the bodies.

In some respects, the Dearn Squad has gained a certain respectability, particularly among some lowermiddle-class Brazilians who have joined a civilian escudaria, or "shield association," to lend support to the organization.

The Death Squad has sought public support by claiming to be a last resort claiming to be a last resort against urban crime waves and allegedly lenient treatment for criminals in court. But concerned government officials and judges have pointed out that, in many cases, the victims are criminals who try to source in nals who try to squeeze in gambling rackets controlled by Death Squad members themselves.

Such allegations were made against former police investigator Mariel Mariscot, heavily convicted of five Death Squad murders and caught by the authorities this week after having engineered a prison escape carlier this

declared.

In theory, the cease-fire would be followed by the selection of a oew president to succeed the highly unpopular Mr. Franjieh, But the Lebanese have become accustomed to having their hopes for a peaceful future shattered by the warlords and gunmen who govern patches of the nation.

The seven-point program announced after a lengthy meeting between Presideot Hafez al-Assad and Yasir Arafat, the P.L.O. chief, stated that any attempt to resume hostilities by any faction would be halted and that Syria's "initiative" at finding a political resolution of the civil war would be continued.

But the program left unanswered the all-important question of what would happen to several thousand Syrian and Syrian - controlled Palestinian troops who recently entered the country. Some Palestinians and certain Lebanese politicians who have become uneasy about Syria's influence asserted today that the troops and tanks, clustered around the border-crossing at Masnaa would soon begin to thin out.

Victory for the Leftists

This would amount to a victory for Mr. Arafat and the alliance of leftist and Moslem parties headed by Kamal Jumblat, who has given seemingly reluctant endorsement to the seven-point program.

Pierre Gemayel, head of the right-wing Phalangist party, today endorsed the "Syrian initiative," saying "it is the only way of ending the crisis. But his sometime ally, Interior Minister Camille Chamoun, who bas been at odds with Syria in the past, has withheld comment.

After Parliament voted a week ago for an ameodment that would permit it to select ahead of schedule a successor to Mr. Franjieh, whose ouster has been widely demanded, Mr. Chamouo predicted that the President would sign the amendment in five days.

Despite the widespread reports that he signed it today, a representative of Kamal al-Assad, Speaker of Parliament, said the document had not beeo relayed to him, as dictated by parliamentary practice.

Radio Silent on Issue

Lebanon, which is 135 miles long and 35 miles wide, is bombarded daily by the propaganda of nine radio stations, six in Beirut and three around Tripoli. It also has two television stations, one pro-Franjieh and the other opposed to him.

If the document has in fact been signed, the next step will be for Mr. Assad, in his capacity as Speaker, to fix a date for Parliament to meet and choose a new President. But even if a new President is chosen, Mr. Franjieh retains the option of holding on until his option of holding on until his term officially expires Sept. 23.

Last week's session of Parliament, held at a villa in the no man's land separating Christian and Moslem quarters of the city, resembled a mafia conclave, with almost every deputy arriving shouldered by armed bodyguards. Just holding another session will be a formidable achlevement.

But the great question, of paramount importance to Syria and the Palestinians not to speak of interested Lebanese, is the name of the new president, who by tradition is decided in the Lebanese equivalent of a smake-filled from smoke-filled room.

Elias Sarkis, the governor of the Central Bank, is known to be favored by Syria, which reportedly hopes to help rebuild a Lebanese state run behind the scenes by a reconstructed Lebanese Army. But some Palestinians are known to be wary of Mr. Sarkis and favor Raymond Edde, a Christian moderate.

Lebanese now speak of their "four big electors," Syria, the Palestinians, the left and the right. In terms of power, their strength is in that descending order.

SPANISH ELECTIONS SOUGHT THIS YEAR

Timetable Set by an Official Faction Faces Opposition

By HENRY GINIGER

MADRID. April 17 — A Government faction that is pressing for major change in Spain has set the end of the year as its goal for the achievement of a functioning parliamentary democracy.

Foreign Minister José María de Areilza, who is identified with the faction, said this week during a visit to Rome that there would be a referendum oo constitutional changes before the summer and that there would be free elections probably before the end of the year.

Bot the Government is split on the issue of change, with partisans of the present fascistinspired corporative system widely expected to defeat or at least delay such a plan. The proposed changes would involve formation of a two-house legislature, with the lower house elected by universal sufferage, and modification of the law of royal succession that would constitute implicit support for a monarchy.

Royalty Law Ready

Outlying a timetable for change that would in effect sweep away 40 years of authoritarian rule, political sources pointed out that the law of royal succession is now ready to be submitted to Parliament. It would lower the age at which the sovereign could assume the throoe from 30 to 18 and would permit women to rule.

The law concerning Parliament is out yet completed, the informants said, but it would provide for a lower house called the Congress of Deputies, to be elected by universal suffrage, and for an upper house, possibly called the Senate, that would represent corporate economic, professional and regional interests and would be indirectly elected.

The present Parliament, most of whose members are directly elected, would receive the two bills by the end of this mooth or the begioning of May and have a month to decide on them. Whether it approves them or not, they would be submitted to popular referendum because they involve changes in fundamental laws. The referendum reportedly would be stayed in June.

The referendum reportedly would be staged in June.
Considerable resistance is expected in Parliament to changes in the parliamentary system that would mean the end of the political careers of many of its members. But it is believed that the prospect of overwhelming popular approval in a referendum would cause many of the present members not to oppose popular will.

A Package Change

The two questions, royal succession and the parliamentary system. would be submitted together in a single refereodum. This would oblige many leftists who are republican by conviction to vote for the changes in the monarchy so as not to reject the changes io the

The political sources said that by fall a new law of political association, another oo the right of assembly, a third changing the penal code to remove certain types of political offenses now in force and a fourth covering the manner in which elections are held would also be ready, and the country could hold its first general elections since 1936 by October or November.

JEWISH STUDIES UP IN WESTERN EUROPE

PARIS, April 17 — Jewish studies at the university level have vastly increased in Western Europe over the last years, the American Jewish Committee has found.

The finding was based on an investigation condocted in Britsin, France, Scandinavia, Belgium and Italy. A report on the investigation was drafted by committee's European director. Abraham Karlikow.

Increased Jewish studies at universities are particularly marked in France and Britain, where more than 80 percent of Western Europe's 1.2 million Jews live. However, a similar trend is also found in Italy, where there are only 40,000 Jews; Belgium, also with 40,000 and Scandinavia, with 20,000

The investigation registered, not only the numbers of theses written on Jewish subjects and of new faculty courses, but also the new associations of Jewish scholars that have been formed, and the attendance at specialized Jewish libraries.

You deserve an Oscar

An Oscar de la Renta design that tells the whole world you've studied your fashion lines, that you know the spring/summer plot from A to Zed.

When we talked the other day with Mr. de la Renta (one of the grand masters of fashion art) we asked him one simple question:

"How should a smart woman look this season?"

1. "Simple, yet feminine."
2. "Understated, but never boring."
3. "Casual and sophisticated at the same time."
4. "One should be amusing at night, but day clothes must not be a masquerade.
For many reasons, and at least one of them is very practical."

That last surprised us.

Does a great name worry about how wearable his designs are? Obviously yes, because Oscar went on to say that too much drama in the daytime makes your audience think "Here she comes, in that same outfit again."

Now let's check this sketch against Oscar's big 4 fashion requirements.

It's one smooth stroke of pure, simple cotton with an interesting, almost homespun texture.

The shape is a slight, slim flare that you can wear belted sometimes, or free and easy.

Side slits show off a provocative curve of calf and toggle buttons make an intriguing contrast to the casual shirt collar.

So here you have it all:
casual sophistication that you can accessorize a dozen different ways, with and without its contrasting weskit.
In white, black or cranberry

NATO Allies Divided Over Tank Gun

special to The Size Tonian

WASHINGTON, April 17—Att meter gun. Because that gun is attime when the North Atlantic Treaty allies are emphasizing standardization of their weap oos, the United States, West Germany and Britain are going in separate directions in planning guns for tanks.

As a result, it appears likely that in the next decade or more, at least three different tank guns will be used by the major allies in Europe, with all the consequent complications in maintaining separate sources of ammunition and spare parts, A principal argument for standardizadon of weapons in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is that it reduced costs and military efficiency. paster estimated that standardization of weapons would reduce the alliance's military costs by $12 billion a year and increase military effectiveness by 30 percent.

The dispute over the tank gun typifies the vested and parochial interests as well as the technical differences that seem to develop whenever the allies start talking about standardizing a weapon.

come collect your New Year's reward

As every woman knows, the year begins in Spring. (What nonsense to call Jan. 1 New Year's Day.) Spring is when the bees, the birdies, the blossoms and you feel like starting life a-new.

So here we are, Johnny-on-the-spot, with a double whammy of a Pier Augé French special for you. (You can consider it your reward for being better than should be expected all winter long.)

First, when you pop in to our place, you'll get the personal attention of an artist specially trained in the techniques of Pier Augé French makeup.

Maybe she'll say "I seenk a leetle Summer Blue for zee lids, no?" 'And then "A tooch of Sun-tan Coral for zee leeps." Or she might suggest other Pier Augé colors to flatter your own skin tones. And of course she'll show you how to use them to create a new-year you.

And then you'll go off into summer, all conditioned and colored : and ready forfun.

> Here's our Pier Augé "Gallery of Color" Collection, imported from France.

Outside the high school. only about 200 people turned up in response to a union call for a protest demonstra-tion. The five Communist and Socialist members of the 65-man council walked out to join them, to express their belief that "regional power is just an illusion" and their indignation at oot having a larger share of the seats.

But the crowd left quickly. They were ashamed when they saw how few people they could mobilize," said Mr. Servan-Schreiber. "You see it shows that the regional idea is really taking hold."

Both the protesters and Mr. Servan-Schreiber were right. The regional idea has heen developing for years, and it has not gotten very far in most places. President Valery Giscard d'Estaing recently announced that he did not intend to give more than intend to give more than minimal, consultative power to the regional councils. And yet the momentum re-mains, a resistance that goes mains, a resistance that goes all the way back to Louis XIII's nation-huilder. Cardinal Richelieu. Richelieu subjugated the provincial feudal lords. Over a century later, Napoleon divided the country into 85 departments. try into 95 departments, all directly and totally depend-

The new regional structure of France is both a recognition that modern development temporal industry. opment—transport, industry, education, health—is too broad a problem to be handled within the dled within the narrow confines of a department and too immediate and complex to be left entirely to the dis-tant Paris bureaucracy.

The country is now or-ganized into 21 regions, each with an indirectly elected council composed of mem-bers of the national parlia-ment and representatives of the lbcal cantonal councils, the lowest political level.

Some of the regional councils are somnolent, others are becoming active. It de-pends on personalities. Mr. Servan-Schreiber has been missionary for regional power for many years.

"It's the only way to hold the country together," he said. "If everything depends on Paris, it will blow up."
The luncheon at the pre-

France and Luxembourg each have plans to install an atomic energy plant on the Moselle River, about 10 miles apart on each side of the horder. Local people are furious because of the pollution concentration, as well as the obvious waste.

The regional council is getting involved in direct talks with Luxembourg, which are unheard of, yet may be productive. On the other hand, it is unlikely to manage much help for Bar-le-Duc's department of Meuse, one of France's least populous with a total of 204,000 people, a third less than a century ago.

Nepal Is Pushing Large Road-Building Program

Chinese Engineers Active in Constructing Highways for Himolayan Kingdom

By WILLIAM BORDERS

POKHARA, Nepal, April 11— The road east from this sleepy little regional center is a high-wey that the Chioese built twn years ago through the Himala-yan foothills, and they plan to extend it through eveo rougher country to the west.

Drive south, and it is an Indian-built road; turn back east and there are stretches built by Britain, then the United States, theo the Soviet Union.

In a rush of road-building, Nepal, une of the world's least-developed countries, is cutting through dense subtropical forests and across high mountain passes to pull together its people into the 20th century.

"We haven't had even the simplest infrastructure," explained H. S. Shrestha, the Finance Ministry official responsible for overseeing the steady flow of foreign money that is beginning to modernize Nepal. "So our recent needs have been very basic."

Nepal, a remote mooarchy in the recentions between Indianate in the street in the street in the street is the street in the street is beginning to modernize Nepal. "So our recent needs have been very basic."

Nepal, a remote mocarchy in the mountains between India and China, was never anyone's colony. Thus, though its people are proud and independent, they lack the communications network that the Indians, for example, regard as one of the best things that the British left behind.

Iert behind.

In 1951, when the King suddenly began npening up Nepal, the country bad barely 200 hundred miles of road, most of it unpaved, in an area larger than New York State.

Imports Via Human Backs

Io those days, just 25 years lo those days, just 25 years ago, the very few foreign visiturs who came to this primitive capital had to walk the last few days of their trip from the Indian border, and every single import was carried in on people's backs. Even the few people's backs. Even the few European automobiles that a bandful of Nepalese aristocrats drove over those 200 miles of road had been taken apart and carried, across the hills, piece by piece, for reassembly in Katmandu.

Now the country bas 2,000 miles of road, including the principal links of an east-west highway, which the Government considers crucial politically, and it plans to build a thousand miles more by the 1980's.

Like nearly half of Nepal's recent development expenditure, a large part of the highway construction bill is being paid by foreign couotries. Their political diversity reflects the importance that a broad range of countries attach to this strate kally situated nation of 13 million people where irreexpediancy is under 40 and the illiteracy rate is 85 perceot. the illiteracy rate is 85 perceot.
Of the half a billion dullars in aid that has poured into this little land of 13 million people, the major share has States. In recent years, India a substantial aid recipient it self, had become the priocipal donor, with annual ald totallog

Life Expectancy Under 40

Some Nepalese attach a low

Some Nepalese attach a low prinrity in a bypass highway around the capital, which is scarcely congested oow. But as nne official put it, "the Chinese like in give us gifts that people will see."

Thus, Pekiog has also given two dozen green-and-white electric trolley buses, far snappier than anything in india's cities. These buses have been purring quietly around cities. These buses have been purring quietly around Katmandu since last December. And a year ago the Chinese agreed to the biggest undertaking of all—a highway through the rugged lands west of here, linking Pokhara with the town of Surkhet.

The highway is to be no longer than the road between New York and Washington, but the topography is a hit more difficult—as if the road to Washington had to cross the Rocky Mountains somewhere in New Jersey.

landslides to cope with, too. the Chinese say the road will cost at least $75 million, making it one of the largest foreignaid projects they have ever undertaken.

Toronto-Paris Nonstop MONTREAL, April 17 (AP)-Air France will inaugurate the first nonstop commercial air route between Toronto and Paris nn May 21, the airline has announced. The French national airline will operate the route with three weekly Boeing 747 flights each way, an Air France spokesmao said.

To the Editor:

I was embarking on a short vacation to Miami this past February which began with a bus ride from Port Authority in New York City to Newark Airport where I was to take the National Airlines night flight to Miami.

The bus epproached the airport 30 minutes before my departure time. It stopped before a multi-airline terminal and the bus driver jumped out and proceeded to unload baggage, without uttening a word as to which airlines wa had stopped for.

My friendly seat companion assured me that National Airlines was at another stop. At the next stop the other passengers departed. I inquired of the bus driver, clearly startled to see of the luggage conveyor belt with the someone left, as to where National Airlast stop." I burriedly grabbed my bags and ran into the airport. As I rushed up to the check-in counter, I realized that . I had left one of my bags on the bus. I immediately dashed back out the door only to find myself running behind the fast-disappearing bus as it pulled away en route back to the city. I rushed back into the airport and anxiously inquired at the desk if there was any wey to stop the bus. No, I was told, but perhans I should call the Port Authority.

> With less than 15 minutes to scheduled take-off (naturally, this flight would be on time) I looked up the Port Authority number in the phone book, patiently gave the operator my home phone number, to which I had to charge the call for lack of sufficient change, only to be promptly disconnected by the Port Authority operator.

My second call produced a kindly woman at the other end to whom I quickly described my plight. This saintly woman carefully took down all that I told her, including my request that the hag be delivered to the National checkin counter where it could be forwarded to Miami the next morning. She then connected me with the telephone at the airport bus gate, where a robust-sounding fellow answered. I had kept my receipt and was able to give him tha number of my bus and I told him where to send the beg if it were found. "Don't you worry about a thing now," he said. You just have a wonderful time in Miami, you hear." I then rushed to tha boarding gate, making my flight with a good minute and a half to spare. .

In Miami I managed to survive the first night by brushing my teeth with my finger (and some toothpaste lines was. "Right here, lady. This is the thoughtfully provided by my host). The next day I made several attempts to call the National Airlines baggage services office, as I had been instructed to do, and on those occasions when the phone was actually answered, I was told the flight from Newark had been delayed and to call back later. It seemed best to simply drive out to the airport. arrived at the Baggage Services Counter, described the little black bag I sought to the attendant, who diseppeared behind a wall of shelves and returned in a few seconds with-Voila! -the bag.

> It still warms my heart to think of thet little bag making its way in the big cold world over thousands of miles and through countless unknown channels back to its grateful owner, However, it seems to me that the real credit for this almost incredible feat belongs to a series of unknown, highly conscientious and unusually responsible people employed by both Port Authority of New York and National Airlines.

To the Editor.

It is incredible that you would run a cartoon (Travel Section, April 4) which shows Africans cooking and presumably preparing to eat a white male.

The implications in the cartoon are manifold. All of them reinforce myths and stereotypes about Africans in a period when realities vividly demonstrate the opposite. Africans are not cannibals and there are few instances

Notes: Washington Braces for Onslaught

Faced with the prospect of a 20 percent increase in visitors this year, result of Bicentennial fever, the nation's capital is launching today a "park and ride" program aimed at minimizing traffic congestion and eating the path of an estimated 17.2 million tourists.

The package, financed with a $7.5 million grant from the United States Department of Transportation, provides for free parking on the outskirts of the metropolitan area and expanded Metrohus service to and from the Mall, the focal point of Bicentennial activity in the city. Visitors are urged to leave their cars at three large shuttle-bus, fringe lots-at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in the northeast, and at the North Pentagon parking lot and Fort Myer South Post in the south-and take buses to the Mall. The three lots accommodate about 14,500 cars. Forty buses an hour are running each way on weekdays between 9 A.M. and 4 P.M., with reduced service until 10 P.M. At weekends, services at all times are increased.

The plan to cope with the Bicentennial bulge also includes increased radial Metrobus service along 17 corridors between outlying suburban areas, many of them with parking facilities, and downtown Washington. The metropolitan area's Transit Authority is operating the whole program with a fleet of 2,000 red, white and blue, air-conditioned Metrobuses, 600 of them new.

Motorists approaching Washington are being guided toward the shuttle-bus and other fringe parking lots ringing the metropolitan area first by "advance information" highway signs and then by 160 "trail blazer" signs. Bus tickets are being sold at kiosks set up on the shuttle-bus fots. The round-trip ride to the Mail is $1.50 per adult which includes one free fare for a rider under 18. Other youngsters pay 75 cents.

The fare on the 17 radial coutes, serving the suburbs and hotels and motels along highways leading into the city, is 75 cents a person, one way. Within the District of Columbia the fare is 50 cents. The radial services originate in six locations in Virginia, including Fairfax and Annandale, and 11 in Maryland, including Rockville and Glenmont, and run every 30 minutes from 9 A.M. to 4 P.M. and from 6 until 10. In addition to the souttle and radial services, regular Metrobus

Bus information is available at a network of kiosks around the metropolitan area, at about 200 Peoples Drug Stores and from a squad of about 100 students drassed in "Yankee Peddler" costumes on duty on the streets and at bus and railroad terminals and

For inquirers calling from ontside Washington there is a toll-free number for bus information: 800-424-9755, The local information numbers are 202-737-6666 (for transit and housing) and 202-637-2437 (for Metrobuses). Requests for a brochure on the bus program should be mailed to Metro, Box 1200, Washington, D.C. 20013, which is also the address to write to for a copy of a tour book illustrating several Bicentennial tours eround the Greater Washington area that can be taken by bus. The book costs $1, post free.

Visitors will find a new system of entry at two of Washington's major (and free) attractions, the Washington Monument and the White House, this vear. Instead of lining up to get into them, sightseers are given a souvenir ticket stamped with the time at which they can take either of the tours. They are then free to stroll elsewhere before returning at the appropriate time.

GLOBAL FLIGHT

Pan American World Airways has announced plans to fly a 747SP (Special Performance) jumbo jet on a two-day around-the world flight, with 130 paying passengers on board, in an attempt to set world speed and distance records for a commercial aircraft. The plane will depart Kennedy International Airport on May I and make only two stops, at Delhi and Tokyo, before touching down again in New York. Some passengers on "Clipper 200-Liberty Bell Express," as the airline calls the 22,864-mile flight, will fly the entire route and some will travel on one or more of the long-haul sectors. Roundthe-world fares are $2,927, first class, and $1,865, ecocomy, subject to Government approval.

With a 2-bour transit in Deliri and a 2 hour 5 minute stop in Tokyo, the total New York-to-New York time is planned for 43 hours 30 minutes. Pan American's regular eastbound world has hiked in Lebanon and Rockies as well as Europa.

The fear of becoming lost in the Swiss Alps should be obsolete. Every last inch is detailed on 76 regional maps." The author and his wife used Blatt 264, a section of which appears above. The region abounds in glaciers.

and worked. "When you have found a companion," says the British author of a major guidebook to mountaineering, "and have acquired the basic minimum equipment, you can begin your hill-walking career without much ado."

That is not to say, however, that hiking is a frolic. It is, like any form of mountaineering, serious business, and dangers exist—the constant threat of snow and rock avalanches, of freak snow and lightning storms, of serious iliness or injury far from help. But to exaggerate the dangers, to overemchasize the risks involved in mountain hiking, is to greatly diminish the joys of it. Be bonest: most of the fears of mountain hikers are fabrications put together from the thin air of high elevations, more a reflection of the estrangement of modern man from his natural environment than of the real dangers of real circumstances.

Consider, for example, that the fear of becoming lost in the Swiss Alps should be obsolete. Every last inch of Switzerland is detailed by the Swiss Alpine Club (S.A.C.) on 76 regional maps, scaled 1:50,000. Each map is divided into grids of areas one kilometer square, which, among other things, simplifles the task of estimating distances. Brown and black hairlines show topographical gradations, and shadings in green, gray and brown describe the general topography of the region: Roads are clearly marked. So are hiking trails. And every building appears on the map as a reassuring black dot. Rescue teams locating lost hikers call them les idiots.

Now, at the Lötschengletscher, we unfold our map, Blatt 264, mit Reliefton, and find that we are at an elevation of 7,874 feet and that the trail traversing the glacier rises gently, only 328 feet in roughly a mile. An easy walk. On a good day. But today the rain

It is done where man has always lived is turning to sleet. The glacier will be slippery.

> We also find that the path continues on the other side of the glacier, ascending steeply to a pass at 8,800 feet, where a building sits. But whether that building is a genuine refuge hut or simply an abandoned shelter suitable only for warding off evil spirits is unclear. Imagining the best-a dry, firewarmed but—we step carefully onto the glacier and pick our way slowly. across the first few yards, quickening our pace at the sound of rock slides in the silence. Soon we are children chased by the village idiot, scampering toward the other side, panting and perspiring.

> We have each other. That helps. It keeps fear in rain. To hike alooe iovites practical problems, especially if injuries occur. But it also invites ghostly trouble. It tends to posh otherwise normal and manageable anxiaties to obsession. Willingly, the unaccompanied imagination feeds on itself.

We hike for more than an hour and a half before stepping off the glacier onto rock now slick from pelting rain and sleet. We are thankful to be on solid ground again, bot we see that the hard work bas only begun. From here the path rises vertically. There are steps carved into the sheer wall of rock, forming a makeshift ladnbing tolerable Yet it reminds us, too, of what we knew even on flatter ground, that carelessoess can mean farewell. So we advance timidly. Any sudden gust of wind hlows us off balance. Breathing becomes beavy, not only from the strain of climbing up this stalrway but from the uncertainty of finding the but, of its distance from us and finally of . its being there at all.

Then it happens. We become separated from one another. It is my fault. climb too quickly, and my wife falls at my obvious ill-preparedness. The far behind. When I realize my mistake I stop . . . and wait. I yell into the deose fog and hlowing snow. It is useless. My voice is muffled. Finally, I double back over the trail, but this too is wasted effort. My wife is lost-at least, from me.

Knowing that she is an experienced hiker, that she won't panic, eases my concern, and I continue toward tha hut. To do otherwise, 1 know, may jeopardize both of us. If I reach the but, I think, and she fails to arrive within 30 minutes, 1 will ask the men there-assuming that there are men there to help me hunt for her.

The path flattens to a gradual climh. The wind, earlier a menace, is a blessing now. It blows the thickly falling snow across the rocks, preventing it from accumulating and obscuring the trail markings. 1 catch sight of the outline of a small building, perhaps a hundred yards away. That's it. As I draw closer, it takes form. It is like an old run-down barn, with holes in the walls and roof, hut smoke trickles from the chimney. An antenna grows from the roof. Signs of life.

The walls are of stone. The roof is made from wooden planks, now rotten and patched with sheets of rusty metal. The windows are steamed over, so I can't see inside. I circle the outside this dilamidated structure, searchi for an entrance, and I finally find a door-it is mostly detached from its hinges-and I push it open.

A working fireplace provides welcome heat. Between it and a row of bunk beds is another door, and 1 knock. Within, two young men, presumably the keepers of the hut, are absorbed in a game of cards. A shortwave radio plays polke music.

They stare at me with complete indifference. I had expected their jaws to In my eagerness to reach tha but 1 drop at my weather-beaten appearance, sweater I wear is light, and my rain poncho is badly torn. I thought they would be amazed to see me at Lötschenpass, to see me alive!

Yes, 1 had not-and 1 knew it-prepared well for this hike. Earlier, when was colder and soaked bone-through. I mused regretfully on the subject of hiking equipment. To hike with proper gear, I thought, can, at least, allay feelings of working at a disadvantage, of being handicapped. But the problem arises when real people attempt to buy particular equipment for particular hikes. To decide what equipment-and how much-is "proper" is difficult. Certain Items, of course, are essential for even the simplest hikes; comfortable Vibram-soled hiking boots, heavy wool socks, a parka, a compact first-aid kit, a backpack, maps and a compass. But novice hikers normally wait until they have acquired some experience before buying more—and more elaborate-hiking gear. And then they, like experts, rely on a basic mountaineering book, such as Alan Blackshaw's "Mountaineering: From Hill Walking to Alpine Climbing" (Penguin), for guidance.

The matter of camping gear is something else again. In Switzerland many hikers carry no camping equipment with them, even on overnight trips, figuring (correctly) that they can always find room and bed.

"My wife," I inform the men in the but, "Is out there, and I don't know where she is." No response. Perhaps they are right, I think. No need to worry. Lost hikers always turn up sooner or later. Sit down and wait. The minutes drag hy, until she finally bursts through the door, crying with anger, hlaming me for near disaster, exaggerating the gravity of the situation

(how my mood has changed!) and vove ing to push me off the nearest cliff. In turn, I vow to board the wine. which calms the storm. And we beginto drink, eventually to laugh, and slowly to dry out hodies slightly damaged-but only temporarily-by the inclement Alpine weather.

Weather in the Alps, like weather anywhere, obeys the laws of nature. If summer storms are unpredictable, they follow certain patterns of development as they mature over a period of about six hours. The smart hiker knows the signs and observes them. He then takes the necessary precautions . . . and finds a wine store.

If we had observed more closely weather conditions evolving during the hours preceding our assault on Lötschenpass, we might bave avoided much misery and fear. There was, for example, that warm wind from the south, always a portent of nasty weather ahead. (Winds from the north usually forecast fine weather.) There were traces of clouds moving swiftly over the mountain summits. Another bad omen. A further warning would have been the warm temperatures of the night before, contrasted with the cool weather of preceding nights.

During no time of the year is the hiker guaranteed flawless weather. Generally, the best month is September. But even then, inclement weather may move into an area for an extended stay. When it does, most hikers prefer to hop a bus or a train rather than wait it out. The Swiss network of public transportation is justly renowned for completeness and efficiency. We employed it one rainy day when wa caught a post bus at Ferden (near Goppenstein) to Gampel, where we transferred to a train that took us to Leuk, where we caught another bus that delivered us finally to Leukerbad. The trip, covering about 25 miles, cost about $5 a person, hut it was worth it. We had bypassed a mountain pass too treacherous to cross in rainy weather and we had moved into an area basked in brilliant sunshine. We had also moved into luxurious accommodations. In Leukerbad, a resort town, we stayed at the tastefully decorated, superbly clean and well-preserved Hotel des Etrangers. The spacious, finely furnished double room cost $15, breakfast included.

Some mountain passes are served by cable car or chair lift during summer months, so when spirits weary, hikers often do as we did at Leukerbad, where we were vaulted some 3,000 vertical feet. In ten minutes. We landed at Gemmipass. To hike the distance would bave taken about four bours, and costmore in energy than the price of the ticket. $1.60.

From Gemmipass wa hiked the final leg of the trip . . . to Lenk: past the isolated mountain like Daubersee to Engstligenalp, over the razor-sharp edge of the mountain ridge Ammertengrat, finally down the long valley split by the Simme River. Into the city

It was the end of the line-for us and for railway service from the north. So we boarded a train for Zweisimmen and soon the Bernese Oberland whisked by, looking like painted scenery from The Sound of Music."

We felt safe, far from the Lötschengletscher. We felt no fear. And we felt no joy. From the train, we saw the Oberland. It was one way to enjoy it. But there was another. Only the hiker, we thought, can know the dif-almost alive. The sheriff is there with his six-gons, and the taffeta-clad schoolmarm rules her one-room empire-but sheriff and schoolmann and the other inhabitants of this fantasy world are lifeless statues or mechanical contrivances. Not so the blacksmith.

He, too, could easily have been a machine with moving parts: Positioned in front of the anvil, hammer in hand arm rising and falling, a living legend until the switch is flipped and the electricity goes off. Yet here he was, flesh and blood—and yet seemingly not so very different from his lifeless neighpressionless and dark with grime, oblivious to the dozen people who watched from behind a chain several feet away. He began by placing a short iron bar in the center of a coal fire with a long, plier-type tool, fanning the fire with bellows until the bar glowed red. He carried the bar to the anvil, his strong hands gripping the pliers with little

The anvil rang as he worked to flatten and shape the bar into e horseshoe. His rhythm was perfect: a few blows to the bar followed by a few "resting" blows to the anvil, apparently needed to keep up the momentum while shifting the bar to a new position, then back to the bar, then back to the anvil. Blows to the bar produced dull rings, to the anvil sharp, piercing ones. The music flowed: bass to treble, treble to

He had shaped half the bar when suddenly he turned his attention to the audience. He spoke with a slight European accent as he prepared to add the holes with a tool that looked like a

"A man told me once that you have to drill the holes in the horseshoe after it's made," he said.

ROBERT OLDS, a fournalist, lives in BRTHII Portland, Ore.

"The blacksmith's rhythm was perfect ... it took no more than four minutes for him to make a horseshoe."

Quickly and efficiently, he punched three holes into the completed half.

"That's how much he knew." he said. Having shaped the first half of the shoe, he returned the bar to the fire, then brought it back to the anvil where the work was completed. It had taken no more than three or four minutes for him to make the horseshoe.

He threw his product on the ground by a board where several horseshoes were hanging beneath a sign that read: "Souvenir horseshoes, $2."

"Sure looks easy," I joked. "You think so?" he replied. "I'll tell you what. If you can make one in less than 10 minutes I'll give you $5. If you can't, you give me $2."

I like e bet, and the chance to get in front of an audience and put on a show appealed to the ham in me, but I wasn't sine he was serious. And I was very, sure I'd lose the bet.

"I'll watch you make one more," I said stalling

And he did so, in the same amount of time, his motions so close to the first job that he seemed again not so different from the mechanical figures.

I tried to sneak away, but he called out. "Hey, where you going?" He was serious, all right. I decided to go along, and to give him a verbal run for his money.

"Put your two bucks on the table," he said as soon as I'd climbed over the chain to join him. I put the money down, and asked him: "Where's your

"Don't worry, I've got it in the drewer." Then he threw a small horseshoe on the bench holding the tools. "Here's your model," he said.

"I won't need that," I replied. With that, I moved to the fire, seized the pliers and set about picking up the iron bar. It turned out not to be so simple a task, but I finally managed to poke part of the bar into the coals-at. which the smithy laughed. So did my audience. "Didn't you see him cover it with coals?" somebody yelled.

So I nudged the bar farther into the pile of coals and pumped authoritatively on the bellows. I waited a reasonable amount of time for the bar to get hot, then found I had lost sight of it among the glowing coals.

"Where is the damn thing?" I shouted. A few chuckles from the audience, many from the blacksmith.

He pointed a sooty finger in the direction of the fire-not much help. I found it eventually after rummaging through the coals with the pliers while the intense heat singed the hair on my

He had gripped the bar so that it made a straight line with the pliers, but the best I could achieve was an obtuse angle. After some difficult maneuvering, I brought it in line, placed it on the anvil, randomly picked out one of many hammers from a nearby shelf and began pounding away.

With every blow of the hammer, the bar was wrenched farther away from the weak grip of the pliers, so that I constantly had to straighten it. My wrist soon sched from the effort.

I worked to a steady chorus of laughter, much deserved.

"Better hurry," the blacksmith said. "It cools off quick."

He was right. The red heat quickly disappeared and the iron was only dented with a few hammer nicks. So back it went into the fire.

I had thought that curving the bar would be the easiest part of the job. When I found that a slight curve was the best I could manage, I decided my act should come to an end. I still had four minutes to go, but what I needed was a four-year apprenticeship.

"There it is," I said, proudly holding 't up to the audience before dunking it into a vat of water. "A horseshoe."

There was a round of applause. It had been a good act. I paid my $2 and left, pocketing a banged-up, slightly curved, dull-gray "horseshoe." I was glad to have had the experience, and the attention.

In a nearby, saloon where soft drinks are sold. I showed the bartender my horseshoe, and told him my story.

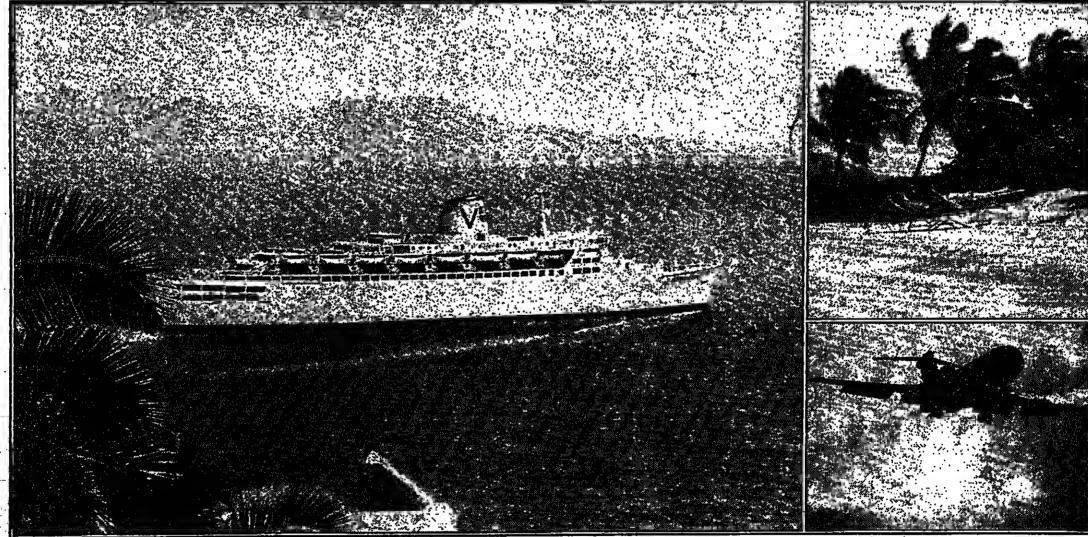

"He comes from Europe," the bartender said. "He says he's 65 but a friend of his told me he's in his 70's, He sells horseshoes to farmers around here."

I was glad to hear that. My blacksmith had e chance to practice his craft in the real world. He wasn't just e showpiece at Knott's Berry Farm.

What's Doing in CINCINNATI

By NADA SKERLY

LEBENSKUNST-Outsiders often dismiss this one-time Queen City of the West (so christened by Longiellow) as just another old Midwestern city. Most people recognize it as the bome of tho World Series champion baseball Reds, some as the home of Proctor & Gamble. But how many know that it is sedoctively Southern in nature, practically Vienness culturally and boasts two five-star restaurants? All told, Cincinnati with its 19th-cantury Lebenskunst, nr art of living, may be the best-kept secret in the United States. It has identity, a sense of placo, etyle. An active urban renewal program has forestalled the innercity blight besetting other metropolitan areas. After 188 years the downtown section, one you can walk about in safety at night, is still the bub of commercial, cul-tural and sports life. One well-traveled resident says, "There is more ectivity here at 2 A.M. than in most other cities at S.P.M." Cincinnati's 1.4 million people—pre-dominantly ethnic German, black and Appalachian—thrive on music, eports and good food; they are politically conservative and rarely trendy. Five years hence there will be double the current (1.400 room) botel apace, tangible evidence thet they mean it when in shops you hear, "Y'all come back."

ORIENTATION—In early times the meandering Ohio River created a flat basin eurrounded by seven hills that reminded early German cettlers of the Rhine Valley. Tho basin is now the compact city center, 11 blocks that encompase Fountam Square, a contemporary piazza with a 19th-century fountain. Cincinnati's boundary to the south is the Ohio River. To the north aro seven distinctive hillton neighborhoods. One of them, Clifton, is the site of the venerable University of Cincinnati and of castles of the 19th-century industrial barons. Mt. Adams to the east, the Bohème quarter, was once the site of the famous Catawbe vinevards. Streets radial pattern through the valleys; five automobile bridges over the river connect Cincinnati with Kentucky, Near Riverfront Stadium take a look at the Sospension Bridge, designed by John Roeb-ling. It is an impressive forerun-ner of the Brooklyn Bridge.

GETTING AROUND-The best way to explore the downtown area is on foot, with an assist as needed from the Queen City Metro Downtowner, the inner-city bus (10-cent fare; the fare on other city buses is 25 cents). From Memorial Day is 25-cents). From Memorial Day through Labor Day a two-hoor guided bus tour is available. It leaves Government Square, Lano One, 2 P.M., weekends only. The fare is $4 for adults, $2 for children or persons over age 50 (tel: 513-521-580). River enthusiasts can savor "steamboat gothic" architecture via an excursion on the Johnson Party Boat, 2 P.M. to 4:30 P.M., Sundays only, June through August. The fare is $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for children (tel: 513-421-4455). An antomobile is in-dispensable for a thorough exploration of Cincinnati and its environs, including a hop across the river into Kentucky for the view, cut-rate cigarettes and whiskey. (Car rental agencies like Budget, Hertz, National and Sears are at the zirpott; others include Air-ways, tel: 513-342-7100; Avis, tel: ways, tel: 513-521-7100, hvs., tel: 513-621-1479, and Thrifty, tel: 513-621-5146.) The Queen City Tour map, available free at the Chamber of Commerce, 120 West Fifth Street in the downtown area, pinpoints 88 scenic and historic landmarks; purplo "QCT" signs on roadways throughout the city get you there. Interstates 71 and 75 link Cincinnati with the north, south and east and converge down-town, creating bottlenecks during rush hours and sports events, Re-member this if you are airport-bound since traffic siphous over the Brent Spenco Bridge and the normal 20-minute run may take THINGS TO DO - Don't miss Fountain Square, the official gathering place for young and old, day and night. Office workers bring sandwiches at noon, elt around the fountain or under the linden trees to play chess or gossip. There is usually free mini theater in the summer, Dixietand band or Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra con-certs in the fall. At night lights play around the fruntain. At some point stop in at one of the city's ezens of chili parlors. Cincinnati chili is different from Mexican chili con carne. Thomas Kiradjieff, a Bulgarian, opened the first Empresa Chili Parlor in 1922, Greeks and Jordanians subsequently opened their own (their chili based on cumin, allspice and cinnamon). The chili arrives piled high on an eight-inch oval plate, always over spaghetti. "Three-way" means spagnetti. "Three-way" means chili, spagnetti and cheese; "four-way" adds raw onion, "five-way" adds beans. On Friday and Saturday, visit Findlay Market, one of the nidest (1850) npen-air markets in the United States. It is in Over-Music Hall, where the good German burghers once lived. The view from Mt. Adams across the river to Riverside Drive, Covington, Ky., was important to the area's underground railroad during the Civil War. Several of the Kentucky mansions were part of this antislavery organization and waited for a signal from Mt. Adams that slaves could cross the river into Ohio and freedom. Mt. Adams is a place to browse in during the carly ovening. It is also the sito of a new drinking spot called Tho Rookwood Pottery on Celestial Street. Three four-story brick kins, osed for more than 70 years kilns, osed for more than 70 years to fire the famous Rookwood pottery, are the mainstay of the place, a remodeled factory. It is open for hamburgers and omelettes until 1 A.M. Around the corner, so the speak, is the beginning of a serpentine drive through a section of the city known as Eden Park, passing the Cincinnati Playhouse, Cincinnati Art Moseum and Moseum of Natural History and the seum of Natural History and the Krohn Conservatory.

STADIUM AND COLISEUM-The city is so mesmerized by the Big Red Machine, as the champion Reds are called, and the foothall Bengals that the brouhaha over building the new 51.785-seat Riverfront Stadium is all but forgotten. For Reds ticket information, call 513-421-4510; for the Bengals, 513-621-550. The neighboring $20-million Coliseom, home of the Stingers, the new World Hockey League entry, was completed last year. It also stages rodeos, horse and ice shows, basketball, tennis and rollor derby events and rock coocerts. For its schedule, call 513-241-1818.

Streets. Tickets: $3 to $10. The Playhouse in the Park (962 Mt. Adams Circle, Eden Park), tho city's resident theater company, offers Abbott and Loesser's "Where's Charley" May 4 through 30. Tickets: $3 to $7.

RESTAURANTS-With New York reduced to ono five-star restaurant in this year's Mohil Guide and Cincinnati having two (it once had three), local proprietors anticipate a flood of venturesome skeptics. They will find the food alone is worth the trip. It is reasonable and citch in writery and quality. and rich in variety and quality. Lunch for two st either the Maisocette or Pigall's-the five-star restaurants-costs $22 to $25, Each offers five or more imaginative luncheou entrees that vary daily. One Maisonette specialty is a scrumptious pike monsse en croute; Pigall's servee a remarkcroute; Pigall's servee a remark-able chicken in green peppercorn and wine saoce. Dinner: $50 for two, especially with a vintago wine, at either plece. The Maison-ette, 114 East Sixth Street (513-721-2260), is the superstar, winner of five stars for 12 consecutive years. Among its dinner offerings are freeb salmon with scallops and loster sauce ($9.25) and veal with avocado, cheese and wine sauce lobster sauce ($9.25) and veal with avocado, cheese and wine sauce ($8.50). Do not pass up the almood puff for dessert. Open for lunch and dinner on weekdays, dinner only on Satordays; closed Sundays and from June 27 to July 11. Reervations essential. At. Pigall's (127 West Foorth Street; 513-721-1345) two popular dishes are the 1345) two popular dishes are tho Beef Wellington ($22,50 for two) and the year bello meunière ($8.75). Reservations necessary. Open six days for lunch and dinner; closed Sundays and Aog. 1-15. Noarby is the Goormet Room atop the Ter-race Hilton Hotel. It is trying to regain its 1973 five-star rating with a new French chef and an ambitious menu. Only dinner is served (over $60 for two); closed Sundays and July 1-15. The adjoining cocktail area affords one of the heat vicing of the city and of the best views of the city and the excellent piano music of George Corey 6 P.M. to midnight. Reservations: 513-381-4000. For basics like steak and salad (about $12 a person). La Normandie in the basement of the Msisonette is a favorite. (It keeps the same bours es the Meisonette.) At tho F & N Steak House in Daytoo, Ky,, a real dinner buy is the 15ounce prime New York strip steak ($6.95). Also open daily for lunch ($1.65-$3.95). Rooting is complex so take a taxi for the 10-mioute jount. Also off the beaten track are two rib restaurants. The Moot-gomery Inn. 9440 Montgomery Road, 20 minutes from downtown, is a classy neighborhood pub as well. A rib dinner costs $5.50. Closed now, it reopens July 1. Walt's Hitching Post, East Kyles Lane and I-75 (513-331-0494), is in the direction of the airport. Rib dinners (about $5,25) daily until 1 A.M.; lunch only on Sundays. For seafood there's Charley's Crab, a chain operation, at 9769 Montgomery Road. Open daily for dinner (about $12). While in the area, stop in at Aglamesis, 9887 Montgomery Road, for excellent homemade ice cream - especially rum-raisin-and chocolates. Open daily from 10 A.M. to 9:30 P.M. Fridays and Saturdays until 11 P.M. For a late evening supper, the Celestial, 1071 Celestial Street in Mt. Adams, is good for crepes and omelettes ($2.75), drinks and a magnificent city view, Opeo weekdays for lunch and dinner: dinners only on weekends; crepes and omelettes after 10:30 P.M. on weeknights, 11 P.M. on weekends.

HOTELS - Cincinnati lacks hotel space downtown, as anyone who crowded the city for the World Series can attest. Stouffer's Cincinnati Inn plans to open a 450room additioo next summer; both the Holiday Inn and the Terrace Hilton Hotel are thinking about 300-room, additions. By 1979 or thersabouts the completed re-development of Fountain Square development of Fountain Square should inclode a 450-room luxury hotel as part of an office and retail complex. Meanwhile, the Terrace eHilton, at Sixth and Vine Streets (513-381-4000), offers some refurbished rooms at $45 single, $50 double; 19th floor suites are $89. Regular singles: $23 to $33; doubles, $37 and up. The nearby Netherland Hilton, Fifth and Race Streets (513-621-3800), draws conventions. Rooms are large but drab: $22 to $32 single; $30 to $40 double; $70 to $300 for suites. However, public rnoms are a dazrling tribute to the Art Decn architecture of 1928. The two-story grand lounge, with its fmmtain, allegorical murals and lavish light fixtures is seemingly in opulent readiness fnr Jean Harlow. On the omskirts of Cincinnati are several inns: At the Carronsel Inn, 8001 Reading Road (513-821-5110), sin-Reading Road (513-521-5110), Singles range from $15 to $25; dm-bles from $27 to $45. The Mar-riott Inn. 11320 Chester Road (513-772-1720), has singles start-ing at $22; doubles from $26 to $35. Equidistant from the sironry and downtown is the Drawbridge Rowntowner Motor Inn in Fort Mitchell. Ky. (606-341-2800). Singles: $18-$21: doubles $22-$25.
Popular among University of Cincinnati visitors is the Vernon Mann, 400 Oak Street (513-281-2909) 3300). It is comfortable, 10 minutes from downtown and a bargain. Singles: $13.50-$16.50: doubles $16.50-$19.50; suites $25.

TAKE THE S.S.VEENDAM TO HE ISLANDS ARE LESS ROWDED AND THE CRUISE IS MORE OF A BARGAIN.

In spring, the rates on our 10 and 11-day cruises are $40 to $100 per person less than in winter.

And the islands are even more inviting. You'll find the beaches much the way Columbus left them. You'll be able to snorkel and see more fish and less snorkelers. And you'll be able to look over the shopping bargains without looking over shoulders.

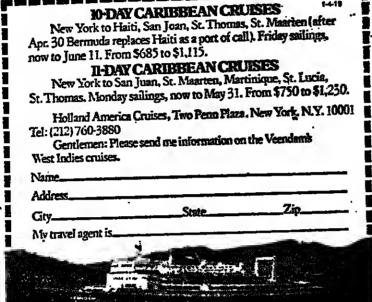

You'll even see more islands. While other 10 and 11-day cruises visit just three islands, our 10-day cruises take in 4 islands. Our 11-day cruises bring 5 islands to you. All with no packing and unpacking, no checking in and out of hotels or getting held up in holding patterns over airports.

And of course, your vacation begins the minute you board the s.s. Veendam in New York. As you cruise you can drive golf balls into the world's bluest green, enjoy the view from the bridge or play bridge and bask in the sun.

And the s.s. Veendam is one of Holland America's world cruise ships. So it offers the comforts and elegant service of an international resort plus the experience of a cruise line that's been cruising the world for 103 years.

I have been on countless cruises but I have never seen a cruiseship so right for you as the elegant new Navarino. I mean, all the right people will be on board when the cruises begin on May 22nd. Actually, my pet, the Navarino is the fabulous and famous Gripsholm. And the new owners, the Karageorgis Lines, have created a superb cruiseship. The decor is just flawless and the service...simply delightful. The Navarino is run by a hand-picked crew trained by the Karageorgis Lines.

The terrible last-day-at-camp syndrome. From total strangers less than a week ago, we have become friends, promising to write, visit, keep in touch. We moved around the workshop exhibits admiring, emazed at how much we had accomplished.

Finally, in Jane's room, all of us sitting on the floor filling out evaluation sheets, the week comes into focus. Lectures, workshops, discussion groups, rooms, meals, tours, parties all for less than $200. We have learned a great deal about many things and something about ourselves. Maybe college, or the final picnic tomorrow too, is better the second time around.

If You Go ...

. . . to college on your summer vacation, check first at the colleges near your home. If you are planning to travel farther efield, canvass the colleges en route for courses and ask whether they provide on-campus accommodations. Increasingly American universities, hard-pressed for cash, are putting their idle docustories to work and soliciting the tour-" ist dollar by offering vacations. "with perspective and depth."

The courses vary widely in duration and subject matter (gommet cooking at Cornell, for example), but they have proved so popular that some universities. Harvard among them, are packaging prograins for export to such sunny vacation spots as California and

One of the most ambitious summer programs is conducted by the American University's Vacation College in Washington, D. C. It features various week-long courses for adults, supervised daylong activities for children aged 3 to 15, housing in the university's residence hall, use of campus recreational facilities and ample time to explore the museum and sights of nearby downtown Wash-

Courses planned for the summer of 1976 include American folklore (June 27. to July 4 and July 4 to 11), an inside view of the Government July 25 to Aug. 1), an exploration of the performing erts, (July 25 to Aug. 1 and Aug. 1 to 8), a look at the American Revolution (July 25 to Aug. 1 and Aug. 1 to 8) and a foreign policy seminar (Aug. 1 to 8).

The fee is $270 per resident couple, $135 for a single resident or a child over 15 and $75 for children 3 to 15. It includes tuition, field trips and air-conditioned accommodations with linen service but no meals. For details, contact Dr. Gertrude Eaton, Vacation College, American University, Washington, D. C., 20016 or telephone 202-686-2697.

Other colleges offering summer programs open to non-alumni vacationers and (except Smith and Harvard) with children's programs in the New York-New England-Washington area follow:

Brown University-From June 27 to July 3 two courses will be offered; 'The Office of the Presidency" and "Creative Arts Workshops." The fees will be $195 per adult resident and $125 per child. Contact Sallie K. Riggs, Box 1920, Providence, R. I. 02912.

Cornell University-Four weeks of courses from July 4 to 31. $190 a week for adults, $100 for children 6 to 16 ($75 for children 3 to 5). The dates and course titles are: July 4 to 10 and July 18 to 25, "Can the Republic Survive Another 200 Years?". July 11 to 17 and 25 to 31, "American Higher Education in Transition." Contact G. Michael McHugh, 158 Olin Hail, Ithaca, N. Y. 14853.

University of Pennsylvania-From June 20 to 25 a course will be given on the development of social and cultural institutions in Philadelphia from Colonial times to the present. For fees and other information, contact Alumni Relations, Franklin Building, 3451 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. 19174

Five Colleges-The Vacation College of these institutions-Smith. Mount Holyoke, Amherst, University of Massachusetts and Hampshire College is at Smith in Northampton, Mass. It runs from July 11 to 17 and the topic to be explored is "What Makes a Constitutional Democracy Possible?" $230 per edult resident. Contact Alumnae House, Smith College, Northampton, Mass. 01060.

Harvard University-The following one-week courses will be offered: "American Politics—Past and Future," July 18 to 23; "Our Mobile Earth," July 25 to 30, and "The World of Islam," Aug. 1 to 6. $260 per resident. Details available from the Alumni College Office, Wadsworth House, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass.

University of Vermont-Four courses (one to a customer) will be offered from July 18 to 23. They are: 'Environmental Workshop," "Architecture in the Area." "Photography: Ascetic Approach" and a planned course at the Shelbourne Museum. $164 for adults. $140 for children 13 to 16, $120 for those 3 to 13. Contact Kathy Costenoble, Continuing Education, University of Vermont, Burlington. Vt. 05401.

Wesleyan University-"American Myths and Popular Culture" will be offered from Aug. I to 7. The fee is $75 plus room and board. For details, contact Philip Rockwell, Wesleyan University, Alumni Relations Office, Middletown, Conn. 05457.

Johns Hopkins-A course in 20th-century literature and architecture, with the emphasis on the American aspects of both, will be conducted by the university on the campus of St. Mary's College in southern Maryland from July 25 to 31. $175 for adults, $125 for children. Commet Robert O. Worcester, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md. 21218.

Dartmouth College-A course tentatively entitled, "Changing Values in Contemporary Society" will be given Aug. 8 to 19. The fee has not yet been established. but some of the contemporary values children will certainly appreciate are sailing and canceling. available during the program. Contact Michael Stuart, 203 Crosby Hall, Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H. 03755.

Sarah Lawrence College-Courses of varying length will be offered from June 7 to July 31. among them "The Comedies of Shakespeace" and "Social Aspects of Aging." An evening program of concerts and lectures will be held on campus, Room and board available. For details and prices, write Office of Special Programs, Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N.Y. 10708 (tel.: 914-337-0700, Ext. 213).

Savannah: Museum Of a Golden Age

and silver through the first-floor windows is irresistible. Nervously feeling for my American Express card, I push open the front door. We are greeted by a maitre d'hotel sitting at an antique desk. Looming over him is a bewigged. double-chinned gentleman with a cracked complexion.

"Oh, that's James Habersham, the planter who built this bouse. Used to be called Habersham Hall, until somehody coated it with white stucco, and the red brick began to bleed through. Since then it's been known as the Pink House, Will you come this way, please?"

Pink the oid mansion may be outside, but inside it changes color like a kaleidoscope. We are allowed to consider tables in the Gold Room and the Blue Room before deciding on one in the Greeo Room, whose creaky boards, looped curtains and frieze-carved mantel make us feel we are sitting down in Shropshire, England.

A soft rain of canned music reminds us, however, which side of the Atlantic we are on, and our black waiter's combination of obsequiousness and hosulity locates us even more precisely in relation to the Mason-Dixon line. So, alas, does the cuisine. There is sugar in the rolls, sugar in the gumbo, and dessert wine in the crabmeat sauce, ineffectively cloaking the fishiness of ancient turbot; even the "special spiced" carrots are so sickly sweet I feel that I am eating makeup.

Across the room there sits an exquisite girl in a long Jezebel frock. She is sipping mint julep from a sugar-frosted glass. As I watch, the maraschino cherry bobs against her lips, and she crunches it hungrily. I begin to understand all those metaphors of overripeness and decay in Southern literature. "Ask for the check," says my wife, "We've already had dessert." It comes to $25.60, wine included.

We awake to find radiant sunshine streaming in through our window. I throw up the sash, and push my head out into the balmy February morning. A distant temperature sign reads 77 degrees, although it is not yet $:30. There is surprisingly little traffic about. Filtering up through the leaves of Reynolds Square, six floors below, I hear a soft buzz of park-beoch conversation. "Well, Ah guess Ah must be goin' to work," says somebody with a sigh. While my wife tries to bathe in a tub apparently designed for an extremely corpulent dwarf, I call down for our coffee and danish, and leaf through in Savannah" (124 pages, $2.50). It compass, softening its harsb geometry with a green square every other block. Although fires in 1796 and 1820 destroved all of Oglethorne's nrigins! wooden buildings, his town plan has never been changed-as I can see by merely glancing out of the window.

The settlement grew slowly at first, experimenting with such products as wine and mulberry leaves (Queen Caroline once clothed herself entirely in Savannah silk). Then, io 1793, Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin nn an estate just outside town, and the httle city's Golden Age began. King Cottoo made it a busy international port: in 1819 the first steamship to cross tha Atlantic sailed from here, appropriately named the Savannan.

As wealth showered upon the city, local merchants vied with each other in the splendor of their mansions, sending for architects from as far away as England, while their wives created magnificent parks and orchards. In 1828 the famously critical Yankee travel writer Mrs. Royall visited the city, and confessed herseif enchanted.

"Savannah is the garden spot of the South," she wrote. "Splendid mansions, groves of live oak, magnolia gardens, the river with its islands, steamboats, and shipping, present to the eye a most ravisbing picture of beauty." She was intrigued by the special gait of Savannahians, the result of the town's soft sandy streets: "Their step long, their head thrown back-the better in breathe, I suspect-they rise and fall at every step."

By the 1850's Savannah was exporting almost 500,000 bales of cotton a year, and its easy prosperity seemed likely to last forever. Thackeray, who visited it then, used the word "tranquil" three times in one sentence, trying to describe the city's atmosphere of lazy luxury. However, the Civil War effectively shattered this peace. After a crippling blockzde. Savannah surrendered to William Sherman on Dec. 21, 1864, and the triumphant general offered it to President Lincoln as a Christmas present. At this point my guidebook's historical essay characteristically stops dead.

Using "Sojourn's" useful map of walking tours, we set out to explore Savannah. Biue arrows lead us first to the waterfront, where 700 yards of old warehouses and cobblestoned ramps are being revitalized at a cost of $6-millioo. The buildings, which include the mellow red-brick Savannah Cottoo Exchange, range along the riverside bluff at two levels, the outer facing north across the water, the inner south over palms the excellent local guidebook, "Sojourn and flowering shrubbery, Birdsong and the sound of fountains have replaced reproduces a 1734 print showing how the yells of auctioneers trading bales General Oglethorpe laid out his settle- along Factor's Walk, but commerce of meet along the four quarters of the another sort is moving in: restaurants, botels, art galleries, museums, potteries and shops offering an ioconceivable raoge of merchandise. I agonize for a iong time, at the Mulberry Tree. over an 1848 foom, still working and a steal at $575, but settle instead for a jar of bot pepper jelly at $1.75.

We stroll along the lazy khaki river beneath three stories of wrought-iron balconies, then follow East Broad Street to Trustee's Garden Village. This is a restored complex of early 19th-century houses and inus, framing the relics of America's first agricultural experimeotal garden (1733). Here grew-and in places still grow-a variety of berbs and fruit trees from all over the world, two of the most dramatic successes being the Georgia peach and the cotton plant. Last night's gaslamps are still burning outside the Pirate's House (1754), a perfectly preserved tavern which Stevensoo mentions in 'Treasure Island." From inside comes the appetizing crackle of frying fish, and we make a oote to return later in the day for reinforcements.

The map leads us west toward Washington Square, our shoes crunching into a lane spread with oyster shells-presumably a reminder of the town's unpaved past. Puffs of sparkling powder hang in the still air. I remember reading somewhere that Savannah's older mansions were built over unusually high basements, so that genteel folks could live above dust level.

Washington Square (1790) is today so manicured, with its pristine clapboard houses and freshly painted railings, that one cao hardly believe that not sn long ago it was a slum. Its transformation, and that of scores of other beautiful squares throughout the city, can be directly attributed to Historic Savannah Foundation Inc. This admirable group of preservationists, formed during the Parking Lot Plague which swept the nation in the early 1950's. maintains a revolving fund of $200,000 with which it buys up threatened huildings and resells them, at cost, to responsible purchasers.

There appears to be no shortage of takers. A young man wa meet in the square tells us that he bas personally worked on two dozen restorations. "But that's nothing. I have a friend who'a done 78!" Eveo as we continue nn to Warren Square, I smell fresh putty and see yellow paint being stroked along the boards of a splendid old townbouse.

"Sojourn in Savannah" now takes us down "one of the most historic walks in America"-south along Bull Street, via five exquisite squares known as the Greeo Jewels. In Johnson Square, the first of these, John Wesley posted an angry notice announcing his return to the Old Country after being jilted by a local lady in 1737; here President Monroe was entertained at a pavilion ball lo 1819; here the Marquis de Lafayette laid a stooe over the remains of his colleague, Gen. Nathanael Greene, in 1825; and here, in 1860, the secession flag was unfurled.

Christ Episcopal Church (1838), a splendid example of early Greek-revival We climb its calconaded steps to admire the classic geometry of the plaster ceiling, which was cast from Wren mouldings for St Paul's Cathedral, Lonoon. I find myself preferring it to the original. Returning to the springlike weather outside (although March has not yet arrived, azaleas are hursting nut everywhere), we make a detour to the Telfair Academy of Arts and Sciences on State Sircet. ness Is Good When Things Are Dull." Our earlier conscientiousness about following the guidebook's itinerary has begun to dwindle in this fourth hour of our walk, and we amble an down Bull Street, more or less following our poses. Each square that opens nut before us seems to be more beautiful than the last.

As we enter Madisoo Square, Solomon's Drugs & Sodas, Inc. (1912), swings into sight. It is the archetypal American corner drugstore, and I lick As we stroll across Telfair Square my lips in anticipation of BLT's and

To our relief, the academy turns out to be artistically undemanding. Its spacious interior, all white pillars and satioy wood, can be explored with aimless pleasure. Undistracted by famnus nameplates, we contemplate paiotings for the sheen visual joy of them. I am quite bypnotized by a 19th-century 'Demoiselle d'Honneur," who sits alooe and nervous in rustling white, surrounded at a respectful distance by dim, sileotly staring figures. On and on we wander, escorted along the empty sldewalk by a pair of lemonyellow butterflies. I feel slightly drunk with sunshine, and my esthetic sensibilities are oumbed by over-exposure. Jooes Street, Mooterey Square, Gordon Row and Forsyth Park drift by in shimmering sequence, each lovely enough to detain the sober passer-by for half a day; but we bave covered only twothirds of central Savannah, and the city's greatest houses, our guidebook ominously informs us, are yet to come.

Milford Sound Trek in by foot, fly in, drive in to this spectacular Norwegian fiord setting where 5,000 ft. diffs plummet to the sea. Swirling, clouds change to shimmering sun and rainbows in minutes. If South Pacific Islands start to seem all the same, see Milford!

Christchurch See schoolboys in boalers, school ties and blazers pedaling to class at gothic Christ College, punting on the River Avon or cheering on the rugby learn. This could be Oxford. But it's not. It's New Zealand, the friendliest islands in the South Pacific.

Southern Alps Take a Mt. Cook ski plane ride over the peak that Mt. Everest climbers lested their nerve on. Land on your own private moving glacier 8.000 ft. up. This is right out of Switzerland. And its right in the South Pacific! In New Zealand. These are only 3 of the differences hetween New Zealand and the rest of the South Pacific. To see them all. you'll want to stay a couple of weeks.

SOONER OR LATER YOU'LL BOOK AN AMSTERDAM VACATION.

SOONER, IT'S $342.* LATER, IT'S $866.

Starting June, when trans-atlantic air fares are sky high, Overseas Charter-A-Flight, Inc. brings you new low prices on KLM Royal Dutch Airlines to Amsterdam. And more savings once you land.

In the air, we save you up to $524.00 off regular economy air fares. You don't have to join a club. Just buy your ticket well in advance, and plan to stay at least 14 days.

Once you land in Amsterdam, during tulip time or in the summer months, you can save even more on a wide selection of tours, hotels, Rhine cruises, and the generous Holland Summer Surprise discount

Amsterdam is the best possible introduction to Europe, close to all the great cities of the Continent. With all the savings, you'll have extra cash left over to spend on the luxuries, concerts, an exotic Indonesian nisttafel dinner, and gifts for the family.

So see your travel agent, or complete the coupon and send it in today.

AUSTRALIA BY CAMEL

An Australian safari operator is adding the camel to the means of transportation used by tourists to explore the country's outback areas. Rex Ellis, of McLaren Flat, near Adelaide, is lauoching a program of camel safaris this spring with 10-day trips in South Australia and a 21day trek in the uninhabited Simpson Desert, which covers thousands of square miles in the Northern Territory, The safari parties, limited to five persons, plus guides, will camp out under the stars, using "swags," consisting of sleeping bag and mat-tress. On the 10-day safaris, which cost about $625 inclusive travelers will be taken by car to pick up their camels; on the looger trip, priced at $1565, they will travel by rail to the expedition point. The camels being used were caught in South Australia and trained by Mr. Ellis and a colleague. Camels were imported from India and Afghanistan during the 19th century for use on desert expeditions and later for the delivery of goods to the goldfields of Western Australia and on the construction of railroads and telegraph the tours can be had from the Australian Tourist Commission, 1270 Avenue of the Americas, New York 10020.

If you're looking for a bargain in airfares, TWA's Discover America Fares offer you substantial savings whether you fly by day, by night, on weekends or holidays. And once you get where you're going you

The chart below shows just how much you and your family can save off the regular Coach fare. But remember, this fare has certain conditions and restrictions such as minimum/ maximum stay, and advance purchase. Your kids (ages 2-11) will qualify for the savings shown when they travel with you.

By charging this fare on your TWA Getaway* Card you can extend your payments over time.

TWA's Freewheeler. As low as $15.76.

Tour the West at your own pace, your own price. For as little as $15.76 per day, you get an airconditioned Ramada car with unlimited mileage plus a room at your choice of participating Ramada Inns, Quality Inns and Best Western Hotels and Motels. Or for $18.50 a day, drive a Hertz car and stay at your choice of Hyatts, Sheratons, Howard Johnson's, TraveLodges and many fine independent hotels, plus many more at leading Western Resorts and National Parks.

The prices are per person based on two adults traveling together for 7 nights or more and using the same hotel room.In addition, most hotel chains allow up to two children under 18 to share a room with adults at no extra charge.

Freewheeler is available to Los Angeles, San Francisco, Las Vegas, Denver, Phoenix, Tucson and Albuquerque.
